

3 1761 03933 1236

UNIV. OF TORONTO LIBRARY

Presented to The Library of the University of Toronto by Bertram H. Davis from the books of the late Lionel Davis, B.C.

MEMOIRS, JOURNAL & CORRESPONDENCE.

OF
Thomas Moore.

VOL. VIII.

At the request of the Author's Friends

LONGMAN, BROWN, GREEN & LONGMANS, PATERNOSTER ROW.

423436
17.5.44

MEMOIRS,

JOURNAL, AND CORRESPONDENCE

OF

THOMAS MOORE.

EDITED BY

THE RIGHT HONOURABLE

LORD JOHN RUSSELL, M.P.

“Spirat adhuc amor.”—HOR.

VOL. VIII.

423436
17.5.44

LONDON:

LONGMAN, BROWN, GREEN, AND LONGMANS.

(1853-) 1856.

PR
5056
A4
1853
v. 8

* * The Copyright in this work is protected in France by Registration at Paris, pursuant to the Convention for the establishment of International Copyright signed at Paris, 3rd November, 1851.

MEMOIRS,
JOURNAL, AND CORRESPONDENCE
OF
THOMAS MOORE.

DIARY
OF
THOMAS MOORE.

1845.

JANUARY, 1st to 3rd. A most unexpected and welcome God-send for our poor Tom, one of these days; no less than 95*l*. announced in a letter from Lord Fitzroy Somerset; being the sum deducted from the price of Tom's commission to pay the passage of his successor to India. But the East India Company having given his successor a free passage, this sum has been put to Tom's credit at Cox and Greenwood's. Wrote instantly, of course, to tell him this good news, and suppose before long we shall see him here.

The following verses appeared a few days since in the "Chronicle," and are from the pen (if I recollect her initials rightly) of my clever friend, Miss Costello.

TO THE POET.

"They are gone to the skies, they abandon the earth
To the seraphs, their kindred, our minstrels are flown:
And have left to the land, that is proud of their birth
One ray of their brightness—one Poet alone.

"There are many whose numbers are graceful and fair,
Whose thoughts are harmonious, whose melodies please;
And some, as they listen, can idly compare
With the jewels of old simple sparkles like these.

“ But let the great Master once waken the lay,
 Once rouse from the sleep that has held him too long,
 And as from the sun burst the clouds troop away,
 They shall all be o'erwhelm'd in his torrent of song.

“ One lay of his country, all passion and tears,
 One wail of her grief, or despair, or disdain,
 Is worth all the efforts—the study—of years—
 Oh! when shall we hear them and hail him again?

“ Bid the minstrel awaken, and charm us, as when
 We knew from his verse what the spells were of yore;
 The harp is his book, and its chords are his pen—
 What darkness enshrouds thee?—return to us, Moore.

“ L. S. C.”

Lady Elizabeth Fielding, in sending me these verses, which she had cut out of the newspaper, says, “ See how the public call upon you, and you go on treating them with silent contempt. Shame, shame!”

Copy of a note from Mrs. Sydney Smith to Longman, July 7th, 1845, in reference to a letter I had written to him, expressing my fears that we should not be able to raise such a monument to Sydney as would be worthy of the man and his fame. This Longman sent to Mrs. Smith, and the following was her answer:—

“ My dear Sir,—I honour Mr. Moore more than I can express for the contents of this note. That he should think more of the fame of his lamented friend, and make his own advantage a secondary and subordinate consideration, shows him to be indeed worthy of the distinction conferred on him by the genuine regard and affection of one of the best of men. He alone must decide whether our materials be of such a kind as will justify his perseverance,” &c. &c.

The following epigram, which has just fallen into my * Sydney Smith died in 1845. Mrs. Sydney Smith died in 1852.

hands, must have been written as far back as the project set on foot for making me member for Limerick:—

“ When Limerick, in idle whim
 Moore as her member lately courted,
 ‘ The boys’ for form’s sake, ask’d of him
 To state what party he supported.

“ When thus his answer promptly ran,
 (Now give the wit his meed of glory)
 ‘ I’m of no party, as a man,—
 But, as a poet, am-a-tory.’ ”

From verses sent me by one of my foreign correspondents:—

“ Alma dal ciel divisa
 Fugge invano alla sorte,
 Va passeggiata in vita
 Va prigionera in morte.
 Sempre sospira, e teme,
 Finchè non torna al ciel :
 Al ciel, dov’ ella nacque,
 Dov’ ha l’ eterno amore ;
 E dopo un lungo errore
 Spera di ritornar.”

Here is a good House of Commons’ scene.

In the Irish House of Commons one night, a blustering orator having triumphantly, as he thought, exclaimed, “I am the guardian of my own honour,” Sir Boyle Roche quietly settled the orator by saying, “I wish the honourable gentleman joy on his sinecure appointment.”

Here is another House of Commons scene:—

Government side: “ Mr. Speaker, have we laws or have we not laws? If we have laws, to what purpose were those laws made unless they are obeyed ? ”

Opposition side: “ Mr. Speaker, did that gentleman speak to the purpose or not to the purpose, and if he did not speak to the purpose, to what purpose did he speak ? ”

Not to forget Pakenham (the admiral) calling out after me one day in the Castle Yard, Dublin, when I was walking along with my old friend and bad brother poet, Joe Atkinson, "Moore, take care you don't let that fellow write any of your verses for you."

When I was in Kerry with Lord Lansdowne he received a letter from one of his tenants there, in which was the following puzzling passage:—"As the Lord has given you power over every thing, I wish you'd tell the Mayor of Cork not to mix butther with his timber." The poor fellow meant to say that the mayor was not to mix timber with his butter, it being a trick with the butter vendors there, to increase thus fraudulently the weight of the casks or firkins in which the butter was packed.

One night when John Kemble was performing, at some country theatre, one of his most favourite parts, he was much interrupted, from time to time, by the squalling of a young child in one of the galleries. At length, angered by this rival performance, Kemble walked with solemn step to the front of the stage, and, addressing the audience in his most tragic tones, said, "Ladies and gentlemen, unless the play is stopped the child cannot possibly go on." The effect on the audience of this earnest interference, in favour of the child, may be easily conceived.

It was Judge Payne, I believe, who had a habit of saying, in his decisions, "As I humbly conceive it, look, do you see?" and, in allusion to this custom of his, somebody wrote the following:—

"The man who holds his lands by fee,
Need neither quake nor quaver;
For, as I humbly conceive it, look, do you see,
He holds his lands for ever."

I don't know where I found the following, but there is a homely sort of philosophy in it that rather takes my fancy:—

“ This world's a good world to live in,
To lend, and to spend, and to give in ;
But to beg, or to borrow, or ask for one's own,
'Tis the very worst world that ever was known.”

The death of his only remaining child, and his last and most beloved sister, deeply affected the health, crushed the spirits, and impaired the mind of Moore. An illness of an alarming nature shook his frame, and for a long time made him incapable of any exertion. When he recovered, he was a different man. His memory was perpetually at fault, and nothing seemed to rest upon his mind. He made engagements to dinners and parties but usually forgot half of them. When he did appear, his gay flow of spirits, happy application of humorous stories, and constant and congenial ease were all wanting. The brilliant hues of his varied conversation had failed, and the strong powers of his intellect had manifestly sunk. There was something peculiarly sad in the change. It is not unusual to observe the faculties grow weaker with age; and in the retirement of a man's own home, there may be “ no unpleasing melancholy ” in the task of watching such a decline. But when in the midst of the gay and the convivial the wit appeared without his gaiety, and the guest without his conviviality—when the fine fancy appeared not so much sobered as saddened, it was a cheerless sight.

Happily for Moore and his partner, they had a certain income derived from the bounty of the Sovereign, which flowed on in a stream not exuberant indeed, but perpetual. On this income Mrs. Moore regulated her expenses, and regulated them so as to incur no debts.

The remainder of the Journal contains little that is of interest. Some extracts shall now be given, however, from the last MS. volume of Moore's "Diary."

From the commencement of the year 1845 down to the present date, August, 1846, I have "taken no note of time" as a journalist; misfortunes having befallen me during that interval which were quite painful enough to suffer without dwelling upon them constantly, and thus aggravating both our loss and our sorrows. But having now, thank God, a good deal surmounted these feelings, I shall here, with the aid of my dear wife's memory, detail the most prominent events, as well sunny as sorrowful, that have chequered this eventful period of our lives.

March. Received a letter from our son Tom, saying that he was sick and tired of Africa, and expressing a strong wish to have interest made for him with the Russian general Woronzow*, who had just then been appointed to a high command in the Russian army, and who, as Tom fondly hoped, might be induced to make him one of his secretaries. As Lady Pembroke, then in England, was sister to Prince Woronzow, it was thought by Tom that, if I would write to the Russian prince, and likewise apply personally to Lady Pembroke, there could be no doubt of the success of our suit. Tom, himself, had already written to Prince Woronzow, relying, as he said, poor fellow, on my reputation as a poet in Russia; and added, that if I would apply personally to Lady Pembroke, there would be no doubt, he thought, of the success of our suit. Though regarding the whole scheme as mere Quixotism, yet, to satisfy him, I despatched a letter on the same foolscap errand.

* Prince Woronzow, born at St. Petersburg in 1782. His father was for many years Russian Ambassador in this country, and died here.

In the month of May this year (still 1845) I was called up to town. Found London in a state of bustle and excitement, which every one allowed to be unprecedented. The night before I arrived there had been a dreadful fire at an hotel not far from Boyse's, in which a poor woman was burned to death; and Lord H., who was staying there with his family, had narrowly escaped by a ladder from the window, holding his child, a young infant, in one hand. H. joined us after dinner, and gave us an account of the particulars of his escape. One frightful thing he mentioned was, that, when half-way down the ladder, he felt the strength of his arm failing him, and, for a moment, had the horrible thought that he must drop the child.

That night, or the next, there was a large ball at the Queen's, to which I was not invited, nor shall ever, I dare say, again, having lately declined two or three of her invitations; nor have ever, indeed, gone but to one of her assemblies, when I went with Lord Lansdowne. This time, however, I was sufficiently amused by going about to different houses, where I saw some very pretty specimens both of dress and beauty; but none that gave me such pleasure as our bright and smiling Lady Mount-Edgcumbe. Next day I called upon Miss Coutts, whom I had seen in all her splendours the night before, and found her preparing to send it all back to the Bank. "Would you like," she asked, "to see it by daylight?" and, on my assenting, took me to a room upstairs, where the treasure was deposited. Amongst it was the famous tiara of Marie Antoinette; and on my asking her what, altogether, might be the value of her dress last night, she answered, in her quiet way, "I think about a hundred thousand pounds."

Though I had delivered, as I hoped and thought, the last pages of my weary work (the History of Ireland) to the Printer, there still remained enough of my task to worry and delay me; and, worst of all, was the supposed necessity of my prefixing some sort of Preface to the Volume. In vain did I try for two or three days to satisfy myself with a few prefatory sentences, but they would not come as I wished; and at last, in utter despair, I left to the Longmans to finish the abortive Preface.

As my business was now all finished, Mrs. Moore, who wished to obtain some advice respecting her eyes, from which she had a good deal suffered, joined me in town, where I had got apartments for a few days at Cox's, in Jermyn Street. On seeing her, Brodie pronounced that it was a physician she wanted, not an oculist; the eyes being sound, though now in an unhealthy state. We consulted, therefore, Dr. Holland, who asked us to breakfast with him for the purpose, and his opinion agreed very much with Brodie's. While thus the most eminent men of the profession were not only gratuitously, but promptly, at our service, nothing could exceed the kindness towards us of all our friends. Their carriages were daily at Bessy's disposal, and she drove out by turns with Lady Lansdowne, Rogers, Miss Boyse, Lady Elizabeth, and Mrs. Story,—all old and cordial friends.

On the 22nd of July (still 1845), my dear sister Ellen paid us her accustomed visit, and remained with us, to our great pleasure, till the 22nd of September. We then set out with her to see her part of the way; but, on arriving at Birmingham, found that we had left part of our luggage behind, and had a most wretched night to pass in that noisy town. We were so lucky, however, next day, as not only to recover our luggage, but to find in the train Mr. Gould, a new American friend of mine, who was on his way to Liverpool, and who, taking charge of my dear Ellen, got her comfortably aboard the packet.

From thence we went to pay a visit to the Hughes's, near Wolverhampton—Mrs. Hughes being the niece of one of the best and dearest of our friends, the late Lady Donegal. The few days we passed with them were very interesting to us. Philippa Godfrey, who lives with them, reminded Bessy in many of her ways, and looks, both of Mary and Lady Donegal. Their vicarage is prettily situated; their children nice and playful; and altogether the few days we passed with them were very agreeable.

On our return home, we found a long melancholy letter from Africa, telling us that Tom was dangerously ill, and saying, that if he recovered from the fever, he must leave that country and return to his native air. It being late on Saturday night when we reached home, I could not, of course, get money till Monday; on which day I sent 30*l.* to Mostorganem, and in a few days after 100*l.* We were left in this state of anxiety for some time, and then heard from Tom himself. He was better, and full of joy at the idea of returning home after so many years of absence. Soon after, we heard again from him—still improving, but could not leave Africa before the spring, on account of a cough he complained of.

We heard no more for some time, and were kept in constant anxiety by the accounts in the newspapers. I myself, indeed, began to feel certain that we should never see him again. His poor mother tried not to agree with me, though her own feelings grew every day more sad and hopeless. In November, Mr. and Mrs. Hall came to us for a few days, and we found them very agreeable as well as clever people—qualities not always found together. We asked to meet them our little friend Mary Hughes, of Buckhill, and they were greatly pleased with her.

December. Our old and kind friend, Hughes of Buckhill, getting worse—Lady Kerry (who has a house near him) coming over very often in her carriage to take Bessy to see him. Bessy, indeed, has been unremitting in her attentions to this old friend of ours, and on the 25th of this month, closed his eyes.

I still continue to take my Diary down from Bessy's dictation, and a mournful task it now begins to be, though (such is life!) the very first item I have now to enter is a gay ball at our neighbours the Schombergs', January 1st [1846], where I was one of the guests.

At the beginning of February, my sister, Ellen, mentioned in a note to Bessy that she was not well, and was going to Black Rock (near Dublin) for change of air, but would write again on Sunday, and tell us "how she was coming on, or going off,"—her own words. She mentioned also several concerts and other amusements she had in prospect. On Tuesday, no letter coming, Bessy expressed her fears that she must be worse; but I had no such apprehension. On Wednesday, we were to have had some friends to dine with us—a rare occurrence with us now. Before I came down to breakfast, Bessy had received a few lines from my cousin Margaret, to say that Ellen was worse. This Bessy thought it best not to tell me, as I was feeling then very nervous, and she decided to let the dinner take place. So agitated was she herself during breakfast that she was obliged to leave the table; and on her saying, “I fear Ellen must be worse,” I answered, “I assure you I think she will outlive us all.” However, about eleven o’clock Susan Hughes, a kind friend of ours, called upon us; and on Bessy remarking that she looked pale and troubled, and asking anxiously what was the matter, Susan said, “Have you not heard, then, from Dublin?—is not Ellen ill?” Bessy looked up in her face, and seeing there the sad truth, said, “Then Ellen is dead?” “She is,” was the sad answer.

The difficulty of telling me was so great, and the shock to Bessy herself so sudden, that when she came into my study some time elapsed before she could tell me the dreadful fact. At length she gradually brought it round, by saying that Ellen was very ill, and that Mrs. Meara had written to Susan to beg her to break to us the sad tidings in the best manner she could. Then came the awful truth, that my beloved sister was gone—gone, in a moment, while getting into bed,—or a few minutes after; for when the maid, who had just been with her, returned, all was over, and apparently without any suffering. * *

It was on the 17th of February we heard of this dreadful loss, and at a moment, too, when we were full of fear and anxiety about Tom, not having heard from him since the letter he wrote in November. We had feared, indeed, to tell him of our loss, for he dearly loved his aunt; and at the time he was quartered in Dublin, she had done all in her power to make his stay there happy and comfortable—often, indeed, to her own inconvenience and expense. She was herself of so youthful and cheerful a disposition, that it made her happy to see all around her so; and she and Tom loved each other most cordially.

About the middle of March, we received a strange and ominous-looking letter, which we opened with trembling hands, and it told us that my son Tom was dead! The shock was at first almost too much to bear; but, on reading the letter again, we saw reason to doubt the account it contained, and sent immediately to London and Paris to know if there was any truth in the rumour. It was, alas! but too true. The last of our five children is now gone, and we are left desolate and alone. Not a single relative have I now left in the world!

The last letter we received from the poor fellow is now before me, and I shall give a few extracts from it here. He was lying at the time when he wrote it in the hospital of Mostorganem; and in describing some part of the duty in which he had been engaged, he says, “You can easily conceive that exposing myself constantly through that period to the night air and penetrating dew was very unfit for one already so much weakened by illness. During a long time, indeed, I slept on the stones of the Court Gateway, where there was only a cheval-de-frise, as I had the command of the guard; and the Arabs continually fired through the gateway on our sentries. During all this time, I had violent cold ‘night-sweats,’ which ended by bringing on a cough that eventually fell upon the chest; and it now appears that those doctors did not perfectly understand my complaint." His heart and hopes being then set on returning home, he thus calculates his means for effecting this object:—"The Government stops fifty francs a month for the expenses. This leaves sufficient of my pay for the daily necessities; so that after having drawn what is necessary to pay my debts (from the sum you so kindly sent me), I trust I shall be able to save the remainder intact until my departure for Paris, from whence, when fully restored to health, I shall be able to reach Sloperton." Poor fellow! home and its comforts, and his "excellent mother" were in his thoughts to the last. The state to which he was reduced when he wrote this letter is thus described by himself:—"You would really laugh to see me; I am only skin and bone, and might be easily mistaken for Don Quixote's eldest son."

I will only add to this extract from my son's letter what Sir John Macdonald, who was always very kind to him, said, in speaking of him one day lately when I called at the Horse Guards:—"I cannot tell you how much I was struck at the manly and cheerful spirit with which your poor boy made up his mind to encounter the horrors which he knew awaited him at Algiers."

About the middle of May, this year (still 1846) I went up to town, partly to hasten the last lingering sheets of my weary history, and principally to seek in the distractions of London some relief from the sad thoughts with which I have lately been too conversant. As my notes to Mrs. Moore, while away from her, have for a long while formed my only diary, I shall here content myself with such memoranda from her letters as may keep together the links of my daily doings.

My usual good fortune in travelling attended me in the present instance; for I met at the station Lady Mount-Edgcumbe, her charming children, and her lord's nieces, and we all got on together most socially through our journey. My first dinner, if I recollect right, was at Lord Lansdowne's; the next with Mr. Grenville, where the only man I met who deserves recording was Panizzi.

Called on Lady Mount-Edgcumbe, and sat some time with her. She now occupies the house in Sackville street, and in showing me the old room where I so often slept, told me it should still be at my service, in the old way, when Talbot was not in town.

Though I had written to Bessy so sanguinely respecting my task, there was still a short preface to be despatched which I had not taken into account. Alas, I ought to have known better the provoking restiveness of my pen. Nimble as I can deal with thoughts, and rapidly as they present themselves to me, yet, until I can clothe them in words which satisfy me, I seldom can budge a single step. And such was the case with this abortive preface, which, after labouring at it, I will not say how long, I left to my brethren of the Row to complete as best they could.

In reporting to Bessy the close at last of my dull drudgery, I find I gave way to the following blue-devilish strain: — “Thank God I feel now as if I should survive this dreary task. But often, while employed upon it, I have felt a sort of presentiment that both the work and its weary writer would fall into oblivion together.” In a postscript to this same letter I tell her “I am going to-day to dine with Lord Auckland,” an announcement which I know will give her a melancholy pleasure; as his kindness to our poor Russell in India is never forgotten by her.

Dined with Lord Granville (whom I like much), and met here Lord Bessborough, and likewise the Clanricardes.

Before I came up to town I had seen "Lalla Rookh" announced in the newspapers as about to come out at the Opera House, in the form of a divertissement, and the appearance thus together before the public of two such different works of mine as my light "Lalla" and my heavy "History," amused me not a little.

I had exchanged also some letters with the opera people, and when I came up to town was introduced to Mr. Lumley (the new lessee of the Opera House), who very courteously asked me to dine with him, and offered me a seat in his box to see the first night of the ballet; adding that the Duke of Leinster was one of the persons I should meet at dinner. All this I should have liked very much, but as my friend Boyse's house had got into other hands, and I was there only on sufferance, I thought such an effort to prolong my stay would hardly be worth while, and therefore resolved to remain satisfied with the engagements I had already formed. One of these, however, having been suddenly postponed, I was thrown dinnerless on the wide world, and in this forlorn condition was walking past Lansdowne House about seven o'clock in the evening, when my good genius prompted me to ask of the porter "if my lord or lady were at home." Both were at home and visible; and I had hardly time to make my salutation to them, when Lord L. exclaimed, "Oh, Moore, are you by any good chance disengaged, and will you dine with us to-day?" "That I will," said I, "most gladly," and then told him the dreary fate from which he thus rescued me. I found, too, that my good fortune was even more signal than I at first thought, as the company

I met at dinner was composed of such an assemblage of authors, actors, connoisseurs, and artists as only an Amphytrion like our noble host could have managed to bring together.

The following was in contradiction of a paragraph which had lately appeared in the newspapers, representing me to be so dangerously ill that my life was despaired of. I give but two of the paragraphs which I have seen on the subject.

“THOMAS MOORE. — Those persons in Dublin in most communication with the family of Mr. Moore, contradict emphatically a report concerning that gentleman’s health, put forward in a very absurd paragraph that lately went the round of the papers. The letters of Mr. Moore himself to his old friends have been such as they were for the last forty years.” — Pilot.

“THE POET MOORE. — The ‘Courrier Français’ announces the alarming indisposition of the poet Moore, in the following terms: — ‘The brilliant composer of “Lalla Rookh,” the poet of the “Irish Melodies,” the friend of Lord Byron, Thomas Moore, is at this moment expiring.’ A paragraph stating the serious and alarming illness of the illustrious poet appeared some weeks since in an Irish provincial journal, which probably was the foundation for the announcement in the ‘Courrier Français.’ We are most happy to have it in our power to give the most unqualified contradiction to all such statements. Thomas Moore is in excellent health. We have been favoured with the following extract of a letter, received in Dublin yesterday, from a friend and neighbour of the poet: — ‘In reply to your inquiry respecting the foolish paragraph that has been taking the round of the papers, I have the happiness to tell you that it is totally unfounded. Our gifted friend is, thank God, in excellent health and spirits. He has just come over here from his annual visit to the Marquis of Lansdowne, at Bowood, and is about to return to that seat of princely hospitality.” — Dublin Evening Post of Tuesday night.

This is not the first time I have been killed by the newspapers. They disposed of me in the same manner when I was in America, and I remember the Prince one night, when I met him on the stairs of the Opera, alluded graciously to this report, and added, “I assure you it was a matter of general concern.”

On looking back to this visit of mine to town, I find I have omitted to mention an incident, half painful, half gratifying, which occurred while I was there. One day, as I sat at my task in Albemarle Street, a visitor was announced to me who turned out to be my old friend Kenny* (the dramatist), and the purport of his visit, poor fellow, was to ask my aid and interest in procuring for him a grant of money from the Literary Fund. Though long aware of his difficulties, I was in hopes he had surmounted them. The sum he now asked for was a hundred pounds; but the Fund pleaded the low state of their means at that moment, and gave him but eighty pounds. This was, however, most welcome to the poor dramatist.

I now, for almost the first time in my life, found myself an idle gentleman, and how far the change is likely to agree with me, mentally and corporeally, is a query that time alone can answer. As Christmas came near, the rumours of expected guests began to reach us from Bowood; but, as Lord Lansdowne was then very frequently called to town by business, the visitors there were as yet few and fleeting. One of these birds of passage was Lord de Mauley, who walked over to Sloperton to see me, and remained some time. But the most agreeable altogether of all the rêlaches I had at this time was during one of Lord Lansdowne's visits to town, when Lady L. being quite alone, asked Bessy and me over to Lacock to meet Mrs. Talbot and her charming children. It was then about the middle of November, and we staid there five or six days; the Lansdownes' carriage taking us there and bringing us back.

* Kenny's most successful farces were, “Raising the Wind,” “Sweethearts and Wives,” “Love, Law, and Physic,” and “False Alarms.” He was highly agreeable as a man, besides being humorous as an author. He died in 1849.

As this was my first visit to the Bowood Library since I had got rid of my dull Irish corvée, I felt for some days a refreshing variety,—a sort of zest in reading other men's books, which could only, I think, have been given to them by the long and dullifying dose I had had of my own: so enlivening, indeed, was this new course of study to me,—and the newer and lighter it was the better,—that, for some days, like Shakspeare's "chartered libertine," I roved, unsated, from shelf to shelf.

As we got deeper into Christmas, the plot began to thicken, and we had in succession at Bowood the Stratford Cannings, Hallam, Luttrell, Panizzi, the Howards, Lady Kerry and spouse, Lord Carew, Senior, and Lord and Lady Holland. Lord Grey, who had taken his departure before I came, I was very sorry to lose; for, though knowing but little of himself, with his truly noble father I was well and long acquainted.

Among those of the guests whom I was most glad to meet, were Lord and Lady Holland* ; this being the first time of my ever seeing her ; and, as far as kindness went, I found them both worthy of the old House ; the lady being a nice person, and, in her proffers of hospitality to me, even more earnest and cordial than her lord. "Mind," she said, "whenever you come to town, you must fix your home at Holland House."

I have omitted, I find, to mention a short excursion which I took in the autumn of 1846, for the purpose principally of getting some advice respecting the state of my eyes ; and, as I had found, when in town with Mrs. Moore, that Brodie was the man first consulted, in eye cases (as well as in most other cases), I resolved to run up to town to consult him ; and a near neighbour of mine, a clergyman, Mr. Brown, who wished also to consult the great surgeon, respecting a child of his which had some ailment in the leg — we went up for our several purposes together. It was then the dead time of the year when Brodie, like other professional men, retires to his country seat, and only comes up on certain days to meet the multitude of patients that then assemble.

Through my interest with Sir Benjamin, the little squaller from Wiltshire took precedence of all the adult patients ; so that my friend the parson was thus enabled to reach his home the following day.

As Brodie had kindly stipulated (as a condition of his prescribing for me) that I should pass a few days with him at his seat in Surrey, I accepted readily his terms, and accompanied him thither. Our company, the first day, was only his own family ; but on the second we had a large party of neighbours to dinner, not one of whom I was at all acquainted with.

* Henry, third Lord Holland, married Lady Augusta Coventry.

In the morning I had walked with my host for some time about his grounds, and was much struck by his saying, in the course of our conversation, that among the many dying patients he had attended, he had but rarely met with one that was afraid to die. Let us hope that this picture of death-beds, drawn as it is by one who had often studied them, is as true as it is consolatory and even cheering.

Among those neighbours and occasional visitors that form our small society here, I have not yet, I think, mentioned an American gentleman, Mr. Robert Howe Gould, who made his appearance among us, for the first time, a few years since, as a lecturer on American poetry, in the Town Hall of Devizes. With this gentleman I have now the pleasure of being well acquainted, and to his pen am indebted for one of the most eloquent, as well as most gratifying, tributes that, either in the Old or the New World, has ever rewarded my humble labours.

Prefixed to the verses which Mr. Gould sent me was the following letter from him :—

“ SIR,—Retaining a vivid recollection of the courtesy which you accorded to me last winter, and of the pleasure which I received from my brief association with you, I have sought the opportunity of which I now avail myself to solicit your acceptance of a curious (and now somewhat rare) record of the peculiar greatness of Washington. Of his principles and his actions you, Sir, must, I feel assured, entertain a high and thorough appreciation ; and I, therefore, venture to hope that, if this little volume has not before met your eye, it may prove acceptable to you.

“ This is my excuse for laying it before you ; but I fear that I can neither find nor invent an apology one half so valid for my presumption in prefixing to it an inscription IN VERSE. I can only say, in my own defence, that I am far from imagining myself to possess any real poetic talent, and that I have prefixed a few lines to this volume merely as an unassuming expression of the grounds upon which I have based my belief that the offering might interest you.

“ Still, it is presumptuous to address in verse a Master of the Art ; but I am sure that no one more readily than yourself will admit that certain classes of ideas find more appropriate and fluent utterance in that form than in any other.

“ The position which the public voice and the public feeling have so long accorded to you will redeem from the suspicion of insincerity the expression of profound admiration and respect with which I esteem it an honour to subscribe myself, dear Sir, your very faithful servant,

“ ROBT. HOWE GOULD.

“ London, June 28. 1845.”

MR. GOULD'S VERSES.

“ The foremost Patriot of all time
Must hold high place in His regards,
The power and fervour of whose lays
Have stamped him first of Patriot Bards.

“ The Bard and Soldier share the praise
Of equal patriotic fire ;
To Freedom one devotes his sword,—
The other consecrates his lyre.

“ The poet prompts the noble deeds
The warrior's sword achieves ;
The soldier from the poet's lyre
His meed of fame receives.

“ The bold assertion of the truth,
‘ The love of right, the scorn of wrong,’
Shine in the Western Chieftain's deeds,
As in the Island Poet's song.

“ Kindred their souls,—each boldly stood
The champion of his native shore ;
Fate handed Washington the sword,
And gave the impassioned lyre to Moore.

“ On the high altar of the Muse,—
Where long his myrtle-branch hath hung ;
I place these records of such deeds
As oft the patriot bard hath sung.

“ Sacred to him is now the shrine,
On which I lay my offering down ;
His genius will avail, to twine
The laurel with the myrtle crown.”

ROBERT HOWE GOULD, of Connecticut.*

I had now for more than six months been almost entirely a recluse. I therefore resolved to indulge myself with a short flight from home, and an incident which just then happened came aptly to my purpose. A very near neighbour of mine, the Rev. Mr. Brown, a great admirer, or rather idolater, of the poet Wordsworth, having heard that he had just arrived in Bath, and knowing that I was acquainted with him, intreated that I would allow him to accompany me thither, and make him proud and happy by presenting him to the poet.

* Of the comparison kindly but rashly ventured in this Poem, all I shall say is, that to compare me with General Washington is like placing a mere pigmy beside a giant.

I very readily agreed to his proposal, and the more so as, by having the use of his carriage, I should be saved the expense of a fly to Chippenham.

I had never, I think, seen Wordsworth but once, and that was at Rogers's, many years before; nor had I forgot that on that occasion he took great pains to impress upon us how mistaken were those who set much value upon continental fame;—the fact being, I believe, that of all us poets of the day, Wordsworth is the one least known to foreign nations.

1847.

My old quotation, "We take no note of time but by its loss," grows daily, alas! more applicable to me. Here have I arrived far into the year 1847, and during that time not a single line have I chronicled in this Journal. I must now, therefore, by as many mems. as I can conjure up, atone for these omissions. When I last had time "to prate about my whereabouts," I was doing the honours to Wordsworth at Bath. Finding that Lord Mount-Edgcumbe and his family were then there, I called upon them, and was most kindly asked by them to dine with them, Lord Mount-Edgcumbe himself being confined to his bed by dreadful gout. But in the evening he admitted me to his bed-chamber, and I was glad to hear next day that he was all the better for the few hours I passed with them. They wished me to stay over next day, when Lady Mount-Edgcumbe, who was engaged then at Windsor, would be returned; but having some notion then of extending my tour a little farther, I declined their kindness.

The flights from home which I have since indulged in must be briefly despatched. My first, which was somewhat more far-fetched, I was tempted to by the same wish, namely, for a change of air and scene; I had also the allurements of being invited to the house of an old friend, James Corry*, by far the best of all our comic

* James Corry, born in Dublin in 1772, educated at Trinity College, and called to the bar in 1796, but did not follow the profession, having, on the death of his father, succeeded to the offices he held of Clerk of the Irish Journals in the House of Commons, and Secretary to the Linen force in the famed Theatricals of Kilkenny. He has long located himself at Cheltenham, and now invited me to pass a week at his house. Both host and hostess were most kind and hospitable; and I had also the great pleasure of seeing and dining with very old friends of mine, the family of old Joe Atkinson, of Dublin, whose voices and faces, but little altered, took me freshly back into old times.

About the beginning of July, 1847, I was seized with another rambling fit, and knowing that my friend Rogers was still at his post in town, I wrote to proffer him my company for a few days. In order to preserve the precious treasure of his autograph, I shall here transcribe the answer he sent me:—

“MY DEAR MOORE,—There is a small house in a dark and narrow corner of London (Memory Hall, as it was once called by a reckless wight, who has played many a freak there, and who now sleeps in Harrow churchyard), where you will be most welcome. So pray come and make it your home, and stay there as long as you can.

Board. After the abolition of the Linen Board in 1810, Mr. Corry left Ireland, and resided in England up to the period of his death, which took place at Cheltenham, in January, 1848. Being without family, in easy circumstances, of a genial temperament, and gifted with wit and humour, he shared largely in the accomplishments and amusements which distinguished the best era of Irish society: a taste for the stage was among the most prominent of those amusements, and he was accordingly an active and successful member of the celebrated theatrical amateur company of Kilkenny, which included Moore. But Mr. Corry had other and higher qualifications; for he was a man of singular generosity, of enlarged views, of liberal opinions, and of a catholic philanthropy. He was the intimate friend of the most eminent men of his day—of Grattan, Langrishe, Bushe, and Plunkett; and to Moore, whom he had known from his childhood, he was especially endeared by the unremitting kindness which he displayed towards his family.

Mrs. Corry was the daughter of Thomas Sherrard, Esq.

“ To morrow I leave it for three or four days, but I shall be there again on Tuesday, the 29th of June, and pray come as soon as you can. Whether I am returned or not, you will be cordially and hospitably entertained. If somebody else comes with you I should be delighted. Pray persuade her. Yours ever,

“ S. ROGERS.

“ June 24. 1847.”

During the week I passed with Rogers he did most kindly all in his power (and his power is an extensive one) to make the time agreeable to me; his carriage always at hand for my daily visits, and himself generally accompanying me, to suggest those I should call upon. One of the most interesting of these were the young people of Holland House, whom I grieved not to see more of during my stay. The all-charming Jenny Lind I neither heard nor even saw, though the lord of the Opera, Mr. Lumley, placed a box one night at my service. But the heat of the weather was most trying and sultry, and my round of gaieties had been too much for me. I was compensated, however, by two other Syrens, having heard Grisi in most charming force, and dined and lunched with my nice and long-known friend, Lady Essex. Among those whom I visited and sat some time with, was the Dowager Lady Grey, all agog, as she said, for Italy!

Talking of Italy, I have already, I think, mentioned the éclat with which an opera, founded upon “Lalla Rookh,” was brought out this year at the Queen’s Theatre; and the example was followed promptly by many of the minor theatres, as this fragment from one of the newspapers will show:—

May, 1847. “MR. JOHN PARRY’S CONCERT.—This

entertainment attracted an overflowing audience, last night, to the Hanover Square Rooms. Of course the chief features in the programme were the new songs with which Mr. John Parry is accustomed to treat his patrons and the public annually. The subjects of the present effusion were 'Lalla Rookh,' and the 'Rival Houses.' The first, designated 'a grand oriental overland transit buffo-romance,' is a comical parody of the leading incidents in Moore's poem, in which the author, Mr. Albert Smith, has introduced, with quaint humour, sundry allusions to Lieutenant Waghorn and his plans. The music is adopted from popular melodies. Madame de Lozano, a Spanish lady, who has been compelled by adverse circumstances to become a professional singer, sang the 'Pensa alla patria,' from the 'Italiana in Algieri,' very creditably, but it was scarcely judicious to choose that cavatina which Alboni has made her own. Mr. John Parry sang his two new songs by Albert Smith, 'Lalla Rookh' and the 'Rival Opera Houses,' with great spirit. Lindsay Sloper and Roussetot assisted in the scheme; but of the other artist we can report nothing favourable. Owing to the regulation prohibiting the artists of the two Italian opera houses from singing at concerts, the town is inundated with a set of continental mediocrities."

While nightly thus my muse inspires the songs of that great warbler Mr. Parry, I find Lord Ashley, at the Bath election, pilfering from me some of those old, defunct quotations of O'Connell's "First flower of the earth and first gem of the sea;" while, in another quarter, Lord George Bentinck thus with more novelty turns my muse to his purpose.

The whole passage, as I cut it from the newspaper, may, perhaps, be worth preserving:—

“For 300 years you endeavoured to put down the Roman Catholic religion in Ireland by persecution. Down to 1783 or 1784, Catholics could not hold land in Ireland. My grandfather, the Duke of Portland, was sent by the Government of which Burke was a member to repeal those laws. Did Protestantism make progress in Ireland under the system of persecution? The result was notoriously otherwise. Look where an opposite system prevails. In Canada, the Protestant and Catholic churches are established side by side, and there the number of the Protestants increases. A similar result is observable in India. Prussia furnishes a striking illustration of the wisdom of adopting a wise and just policy in this respect. At the conclusion of the last war, the King of Prussia, having obtained a large accession of territory, chiefly occupied by a Roman Catholic population, placed persons of that religion on an equality in every respect with those of the Protestant religion. At that time, the Catholics were in the proportion of five-eighths to the Protestants; now they have dwindled to three-eighths. (Hear.) Common sense as well as experience show, that we have adopted an erroneous mode of dealing with the religious convictions of the people of Ireland. (Hear, hear.) Cromwell tried the sword, made it penal, and, I believe, a capital offence, for a Roman Catholic or an Episcopalian to preach, baptize, christen, marry, or bury in public. But my religion is not of that kind described by Hudibras; I am not one of “ ‘ That stubborn crew

Who do build their faith upon
The holy text of pike and gun,
And prove their doctrines orthodox
By apostolic blows and knocks.’

No; I rather concur in the beautiful sentiment expressed by the Irish poet:—

“ ‘ Shall I ask the brave soldier who fights by my side
In the cause of mankind if our creeds do agree ?
Shall I turn from the friend I have valued and tried,
If he kneel not before the same altar with me ?

“ ‘ From the heretic girl of my heart shall I fly,
To seek somewhere else a more orthodox kiss ;
No; perish the heart and the laws that would try Truth, valour, and love by a standard like this !’

I am aware that much prejudice exists on account of a speech made by Lord Arundel and Surrey in the last Parliament.”

Extract—I know not from whom or where.—“ This idea—that of the Whig and Liberal party—has, we are convinced, far more moral power than any other in Ireland. This party alone in Ireland has a moral and historical existence. The mind of that country, as far as it has been developed, has affected such principles. All the brilliant reputations of Ireland, in the senate, literature, or at the bar, belong to moderate liberalism. Her most popular viceroys, her foremost statesman, Grattan; her best debater, Plunkett; the brightest spirit of the Irish bar, Curran, were all Whigs. Nor is that all. Her popular statesmen, with powers of public effect, may be claimed for the same party. Flood acted through life upon their principles. The leading minds of the Irish Catholic church, from Arthur O’Leary down to Archbishops Croly and Murray, have all been favourable to toleration and social progression, but averse from violent convulsion, or menacing schemes of politics. To most of Dr. Doyle’s sentiments on Ireland an English Whig might cry ‘ ditto,’ as the Bristol merchant said to Burke’s speech at the hustings. The muses in Ireland have strung their lyres to the same tune. The 'poet of all circles and the idol of his own' has through his manly life never written one line tinged with a sectarian or unsocial spirit. The ascendancy on the one side, or the Corn Exchange upon the other, supplied him with no inspiration; but true to the mind of his country and his own genius, he poured forth those strains which have been echoed by every class, and in every clime."

[I here conclude the extracts from the "Diary." The reader may have perceived in it traces both of confusion and loss of memory. For an instance of the first, I may mention the enjoyment he derived from ranging at large over Bowood Library placed in connection with his visit to Lacock. And of the second, his forgetfulness of his meeting with Wordsworth at Paris, recorded in the second Volume.

There remains a collection of letters, from which, up to the year 1818, I have already published a selection. But having put these letters, and those which have been preserved of a later date, into the hands of a mutual friend, he has enabled me to add to the value of this volume by a large addition of correspondence. Among them will be found some from Mr. Rogers, who was kind enough himself to select those which he permits to be published.]

LETTERS.

LETTERS.

To his Father.

“London, June 6. 1799.

“Dear Father,

“I am very much inclined to think that I shall see and embrace you this summer. The primary motive which induces me is indeed the melancholy idea of being separated so long from those I love, as I must be if I omit this opportunity; but there are other circumstances which incline me to return; and though they be not strong enough to render it necessary, they are enough so to obviate any objections to its propriety. The summer is not the period of the year for publication, and all therefore I could do during that time would be to prepare something for my débüt in winter. This I could do as well in Ireland as here; for as to the idea of turning a literary hack, I find it to be such a premature grave of talents, that, till absolute exigence demands, I will not have recourse to it. Then for my study of the law, I cannot procure books here; to purchase them were expensive, the public libraries are inconvenient and unsatisfactory, and I am not intimate enough with any legal men to apply to them for the loan of those books that I should find necessary: all this would be obviated at home. I have other reasons, important and otherwise, which altogether make me very much disposed to returning. However, I submit it entirely to your wishes; and I pray you, do not think that my heart is decidedly set upon it, for I know that with such a persuasion, your indulgence would lead you to consent, in compliance more with my inclinations than your own judgment.

“I sat with Lady Flood to-day for near an hour. Miss Flood is going to be married to a man of very large fortune. Sir Fred. has just come from Ireland about it. I was delighted to hear him give such a comfortable account of the returning appearance of tranquillity in Ireland.

“You said in your last letter that my mother was pretty well: this qualified expression has made me apprehensive that she was not well. Do let me know particularly of her health and your own. Tell her with what delight I shall meet her, if it prove expedient that I shall return this summer, to enjoy that dear little family circle which absence has taught me to know the whole value of.

“Give my warmest love to my dear Catherine. Heaven bless my sweet girl, and make her understanding as progressive as her goodness! Tell little Ellen that ‘Brother, Sir’ does not forget her, and remember me most affectionately to my uncle Joice. Is my aunt recovering her health? Send her my loving remembrance; and, for you, my best of fathers, need I tell you with what true affection I am your ever grateful and loving son,

“T. MOORE.

“Thursday night.—Write to immediately your determination. Mrs. M‘Mahon will, I believe, travel with me.”

To his Father.

“ London, June 25. 1799.

“ Dear Father,

“ I am now determined upon going, and only wait for the decision of the bookseller, who has the manuscript of my little poems. If he gives me but as much as will bring me to Ireland, it will be pleasant; though I scarcely can expect more than a free publication, as poems are really, in the present taste of the age, a heavy article on the booksellers' hands. I am glad, however, to get rid of them if I can, on any terms. I will write again before I set off, and I hope to meet you all happy and in health. My last letter I suppose surprised, and, I hope, disappointed you; but you must always allow for the fluctuating oddity of my mind, which can never account for those melancholy little whims which it falls into. I have nothing particular to tell you.

“ My love to my dear mother, and Catherine and Ellen; to my uncle Joice and aunt, &c. — The day after to-morrow I expect to set off.

“ Yours, &c.

“ T. MOORE.”

To —.

“ Wednesday, 1800.

“ My darling Brother*,

“ This has been a most delicious day, and I have been basking about the streets in great happiness; everything looked so new and so bright to me — the coaches all made of gold and the women of silver; besides, every one was so glad to see me, and I saw one poor man who had been as ill as myself, and we met like two newly-raised bodies on the day of resurrection,—so glad to see each other's bones with a little flesh on them again. I met Mr. Thompson, and he looked at me, but not taking me for myself, he passed on; indeed, he never saw me before without a flannel gown and a sofa. Well, it is a most sweet thing to feel health returning, and if my side but keeps well, and the sun keeps shining, I have some very, very happy weeks before me. I am now in the 8th week of my illness, and this is the first day I have walked out, though I have been twice with Lady D. in the carriage. I hated coming back to my room and my sofa to-day, but as it was the first time, I could not venture to stay out.

* His uncle by the mother's side, whom he called by the name of brother.

“God bless all ours. Tell my dear uncle how stout I am getting, and give her dutiful nephew's love to my aunt.

“Your own

“TOM.”

To his Mother.

“Donnington Park, Dec. 31. 1800 (at night).

“My dear Mother,

“This is from my bed-chamber at Donnington Park, where I arrived at two o'clock to-day, through snows mountain deep; the cross roads were impassable; so that I was obliged to take a round, which has made it a little expensive: but it can't be helped, it has not made much difference. Nothing can be more princely than the style of this place, nor anything more flatteringly polite than my reception here. Lady Charlotte told me she regretted very much that I was not here during the Prince's stay, and that she had written to her mother to beg of her to hurry me. The Prince, too, she told me, expressed a wish that I had met him. Dearest Mother! there is no fear of my not doing everything. Keep up your spirits, my little woman, and you'll find I'll make you as rich as a nabob. But I am now far away from you, and that is the only idea that can hang heavy on my mind; but, dear Mother, be happy and contented, and then you'll be everything to us. Your excessive solicitude for us is the only thing we can blame you for. I shall not stay here more than a day or two, certainly, for I find my portmanteau tormentingly troublesome. I dread the packing of it again; and I have to root into it for everything I want. Lord Moira has but this moment left me, after attending me very politely to show me my bed-room.

“ Good bye.

“ THOMAS MOORE.

“ I believe I left my little brooch behind me. Take particular care of it, and send it or enclose it by the first opportunity. I may, perhaps, not be able to write again from this, on account of the uncertainty of their sending off a post-boy; but I shall write the moment I arrive in London. Send the enclosed letter under cover to ‘ Earl Granard, Castle Forbes, Longford.’ ”

From Miss Godfrey.

“ Dec. 27. 1801.

“ I have this moment received your letter, and me voici la plume à la main pour y répondre; not to tell you what we can make of you, for God only knows what you are good for, or whether you are good for anything, but to lament and groan over your restless disposition. Your talents might fit you for everything, and your idleness unfits you for anything. You want to come to town, I know you do, merely to get away from those country-bred, sentimental ladies, the Muses, and I pray that you may have no other ladies in view to supply their place. You really might, if you pleased, study all the morning, and amuse yourself all the evening. I intreat you to make an effort, and not devote every hour and moment of your existence to pleasure. You know my sermons make you laugh — tant mieux. I never despair of you when you laugh; if you yawned I should give up the thing as hopeless. Lady C. Rawdon has so often regretted, and I have so often forgiven her not writing, that I have not the least objection to our going on regretting and forgiving to the end of the chapter. Abstraction, self-contemplation, etiquette, and, God forgive me, I was going to say, strict morality, but I retract that, are not great enliveners of society, and I don't wonder at the Muses being a little discomposed by such an interruption. But who was the unfortunate fair one to whom those very pretty lines which you sent me were addressed? If Nature had been as kind to me as she has been to you, I would write you something upon the occasion; but Nature has treated me abominably ill, for which I shall never forgive her; — she has given me feelings to admire with enthusiasm the talents of others, and she has denied me even the faintest ray of genius. I never heard of the 'Seven Fountains' before. What sort of book is it — poetry or prose? If I should happen to read it, I suppose I must 'give God thanks, and make no boast of it.' The snow after which you inquire so kindly has departed this life, to my great joy.

I never am in good will, either with myself or my fellow creatures, in cold weather: are you? I did intend writing to you to-morrow, for which I had a very wise reason best known to myself, but when I received your tragicomic, or rather your more comic than tragic letter, I resolved to answer it immediately, to encourage you to remain at your post. Nothing ever was more disinterested than this advice, and I never shall cease to admire myself for giving it; for if I followed my own inclinations, which in general don't lead me astray like yours, I would say, 'Come up to town by all means, and the oftener we see you the better.' I consult your interest when I say the contrary. But yet if you do come, if the truth must come out, I shall most heartily rejoice to see you, and so shall we all. Say pretty things for me to Lady Charlotte about love and friendship, and writing to each other. I shall give you a carte blanche upon the occasion, for I suspect she does not care the least in the world for me — it is all stage trick and fine acting: this is quite entre nous. Remember me to Lord Forbes. God bless you, and make a good man of you (I believe it is almost impossible).

"Yours very sincerely,

"M. GODFREY."

From M. G. Lewis, Esq.

"Dalkeith House, Nov. 19. 1802.

"My dear Moore,

"I have just received your letter, and all that I can do I will do; but I am afraid that will not advance your cause much, for instead of ranking among your 'great friends,' I must submit to being classed among your little ones in every respect. In the first place, I am not conscious of possessing 'personal influence' with any one person in the world, my sisters excepted. * * * If you hit upon any person to whom you think my applying would be of any use, let me know without scruple; and if I possibly can do the thing with the least propriety, I shall obey you with pleasure. For my own part, I know of nobody to whom my speaking would be of the least effect. All my great friends are merely liaisons de société; and the few people who might possibly feel a pleasure in obliging me are all on the wrong side of the question. As to Ministers, I know none of the present; and, between ourselves, have not the least inclination to know them. Your request is couched in such very general terms, that it is impossible to make any particular application of them. If you were to pitch upon any individual object, perhaps I might be of more use to you. It is possible that, if you could find some trifling situation vacant in the India House, I might serve you more than elsewhere; but you must find it;—and so, assuring you that I shall always feel gratified by an opportunity afforded me of showing you my friendship, I shall lay aside this subject for the present.

“What the deuce became of you for the last fortnight which I past in London? Everybody was in pursuit of you, but no tidings could be obtained of your whereabouts for love or money. Count Beaujolois*, too, previous to his leaving London in the end of July, tried to ferret you out, but with no better success. My sister Sophia sent me word that all London was persuaded that you were the Invisible Girl; and I believe she conversed with that unseen fair-one in that character. I am sorry that you did not come to Scotland. I have been passing my time very pleasantly, though constantly upon the move, never staying above a fortnight in the same place. I found Beaujolois at the Duke of Athol's, whence we adjourned to Inverary; there William Lamb*, and Kinnaird, Lord Lorne†, my sister, the Campbells, and numerous other people were assembled; and we contrived to keep up such a continual riot, that I changed the name of Inverary to that of Confusion Castle, with universal approbation. We had plays, music, billiards, gaming [but in moderation], with a thousand other nondescript amusements; among the most admired of which was a newspaper, giving an account of all the domestic affairs of Inverary, and in which we all abused one another: the want of your assistance in the poetical department was much lamented. From Inverary Count Beaujolois and myself adjourned to the Duke of Hamilton's, where we had a week's racing and dancing. We there separated; he to pay his devoirs to Monsieur, and I to pay mine to Lady Charlotte Campbell at her villa, where she is now residing, and expects every day to be confined. I am now come for a couple of days to the Duke of Buccleuch's; I mean to pass a couple more with Lady Charlotte, and then I shall set out for England; but as I have some visits to make upon the road, probably I shall not travel with much expedition. When shall you be in London? I have not read Aristodemo.‡ If it is worth reading, and your own property, bring it with you when you come to England. In spite of my dissipation since I came to Scotland, I have not been quite idle; for I have got through three tremendous volumes of Gibbon, and the whole of Voltaire's Universal History; of all which I do not remember one syllable.

* Brother to Louis Philippe.

* Afterwards Lord Melbourne.

† Afterwards Duke of Argyle.

‡ A tragedy of Monti. In the life prefixed to his works it is called "La sua prima e famosa tragedia l'Aristodemo."

“Farewell, and believe me,

“Yours, most truly,

“M. G. LEWIS.”

From M. G. Lewis, Esq.

“Inverary Castle, Nov. 9. 1803.

“My dear Moore,

“I was both very sorry and very glad to hear from my sister that you had got a situation in America; the first on thy own account, the second from my good will towards you. I understand that your situation is both respectable and emolumentary, and you know I thought it high time that your grashoppering system should be at an end, and that you should begin to collect a provision of corn against the winter; but at the same time, I cannot help being conscious that I shall miss your society very much, and feeling some little regret at your having been appointed to an employment which puts you out of my reach. While we were so completely within call of one another I told you that our corresponding would be unnecessary; but now that we are separated (and that probably for some time) it will give me real pleasure to get a line from you now and then, as it will at the same time give me the assurance of your welfare, and that you have not forgotten a friendship which, though it has not been of long duration, is by no means a cold one. If you comply with this request, direct to me in Devonshire Place; but this request is not the only one which I have to make; you promised to give me the proof-sheets of the printed half of your poetical romance, and (like too many other of your similar engagements) this promise has not been performed. From a message which you sent me by Mrs. Lushington, 'that you had left your book half published,' I indulge some faint hopes that you may have left it for me, and told Carpenter that I was to have a copy of as much as was printed; but these hopes are very faint, as I know that you never will be accused of having too much thought and recollection. On my return to London I shall inquire of Carpenter whether there is any foundation for the above supposition; but if you have said nothing to him on the subject, of course he will not deliver me the poems. Now, as I really am too anxious to see this book to wait with any sort of patience, till it shall suit your good pleasure to return from America and finish its publication, I must summon you to keep your promise, and write me a line without loss of time, authorising Carpenter to deliver me the said proof-sheets. If you wish it, you may depend on my not showing the book to any person; but at all events I insist upon your letting me have, with all convenient diligence, the dithyrambic story of Hebs's accident, as it has been running in my head ever since. If it is not yet printed, you must, absolutely and positively must, transcribe it for me with your own fair hand, and forward it to London. I have been at the Duke of Argyle's between two or three months; we have been tranquillity personified. Very few inmates, no visitors. Lady Charlotte was absent at Edinburgh, where her husband's regiment is quartered; Lord Lorne was very much occupied by his Lord-Lieutenancy; and Lord John* is but just arrived

* Lord John Campbell, afterwards Duke of Argyll.

(having effected his escape from the horrors of a French prison by assuming the dress of a woman). Consequently, I have had my time almost entirely to myself, and have read most furiously ; among other things I waded through the three last volumes of Gibbon, but with so much labour, that when I closed the book I said to myself, 'Jamque opus exegi!' But among other things I have read a book published by a young Scotchman on the subject of Colonial Policy *, which really made my blood run cold while I perused it, for it stated very clearly that the inevitable consequences of the independence of St. Domingo would be the ruin of the other West Indian colonies, and of Jamaica in the first place ; in which case, Morbleu! I should be in a pretty pickle. The worst of it is, too, that I think the author is quite in the right, and begin to imagine what a mighty indifferent figure I shall cut with poverty on my right hand and the gout on my left ; (for you are to know, that the latter gentleman (or lady, if you like it better) has lately paid me a sort of flying visit ; and though he did not actually leave a card with his name upon it at my door, his hints were sufficiently broad to leave me no doubt that he means to be on a very intimate footing with me one of these days). However, to return to the West Indies ; 'Sufficient to the day is the evil thereof,' and therefore I will still indulge the hope that I shall one day be as rich as I was born to be, and that you will one day return from America as rich as you deserve to be (for, as the Devil will have it, there is no going on without those same infernal riches), and then will we lead such a life as never entered into the fairest visions of Utopia. We will form a cotérie, which shall be the * Lord Brougham's work on Colonial Policy ?

rallying point of beauty, genius, and worth. No flimsy wits, would-be fashionables, or ugly Mæcenasses in gowns and petticoats; no Lady Cork's Welsh porters, or Harry Grevilles; we will set up an Academia for the elegant pleasures and the graces of life; the circle of our Society shall be a sort of round-robin of poetry, painting, music, love, and philanthropy; till the angels shall come down from heaven, and beg Lady Charlotte Campbell to take them to sup with us. What do you think of the scheme? And yet, after all, it is both provoking and humiliating to think, that such a dirty thing as money must needs be the foundation-stone of so beautiful an edifice. I shall leave Inverary Castle on Sunday next, and proceed southwards; but as I have many visits to make on my road, I probably shall not reach London till near the conclusion of the year. However, my visits must depend entirely upon Buonaparte's; for if he comes to Scotland immediately (where he is very soon expected, though not with absolute impatience), the roads about Edinburgh are to be broken up, and then I shall be obliged to return home by a different way; so that every night and morning (like the old woman who found a silver penny and bought a pig with it) I cry out to Boreas,—‘Pray, Boreas, sink French; French will invade Scotland; Scotland will break up roads; roads won't let carriage pass; and I shan't get home this year.’ Now, if you are so profoundly and unpardonably ignorant as to know nothing about the old woman and her pig, the whole merit of the above prayer will be lost upon you. We are mighty bold here about the Invasion, as far as regards our island; as to yours, as the man says in the Critic, ‘On that subject, the less that's said the better.’ Frederick French writes me word, that the Irish peasants have been discovered in taking oaths not to serve in the army of reserve. News, from this isolated quarter of the globe, I can send you none at present; but if you will answer this soon, my London letters will probably be more interesting. Yet I will not be so humble, and, I hope, so unjust to you, as to suppose that you will think this letter totally uninteresting, since it contains the assurance of my being “Yours very sincerely,

“M. G. LEWIS.”

From Mrs. Merry.

“George Town, near Washington, Sunday, 1804.

“Before this letter reaches you, you will have heard of our landing at Alexandria, after six days’ disputation with winds, tides, and ignorant navigators. The following morning we set off for this place in a coachie. The cold was very severe, and the roads intolerable; nevertheless, I laughed every step of the way. Mr. Thornton met us at Alexandria, and advised this mode of conveyance as the best both for ease and quickness. Mr. M. had never been in one of these vehicles, and his quiet astonishment and inward groaning gave rise to my mirth and risibility. On entering our apartments here, I asked the master of the house what he could give us for dinner. He immediately changed his position, walked to the fire-place, reclined his head on the chimney-piece, looked at me, or rather stared, and replied, ‘Why, Mistress Merry, our custom is to give the best we have, but I keeps no schedule whatever. My house is full; but you shall have yare dinner.’ So we had, God knows! but neither his B.

Majesty's Minister or Mistress Merry could eat a morsel that was served. A few days will, I hope, place us in some hovel of our own. Mr. Thornton is indefatigable in his endeavours to procure us every comfort. He is a quiet, sensible, well-informed man, without brilliancy or elocution. Well educated, and full of information, which he details slowly from a natural impediment in his speech. Upon the whole, he is a great acquisition, and I rejoice to hear he is not likely to leave us; but this entre nous — let not a word escape you that I write — trifles become giants in the mouths of Americans. We have alarmed the Congress itself with the number of our servants and the immensity of our baggage: the former they cannot account for; the latter, they have ingeniously settled, is to be sold, and that their home markets will be injured if foreign ministers are allowed to bring over such profusion of luxuries for sale. Do they deserve to have one of Dr. Parry's Christians live amongst them?

“ I rejoice you did not come with us. At this season the Potomac is a poor reward for the innumerable difficulties and impositions a traveller meets with. Its immensity inspires awe and surprise that almost deadens sense, and its sameness, for some hundreds of miles, is quite overpowering; to this add a total want of cultivation, without any diversity of ground, without an atom of sublimity or grandeur, or even cheerfulness. Within a hundred miles of Alexandria the scene changes for the better. You have well-clothed mountains and magnificent woods that may charm in their summer or autumnal dress, but in the month of November they show you the savage deserts, the miserable negroes' huts, and the causes why this country is so devoted a victim to disease. At some moments I wish you were here. Matter arises every instant that you would convert into amusement, but the per contra makes us both bear the deprivation of your society with resignation, though not without regret. When we are comfortable come and see us. You have older friends, but none who value you more highly than Mr. M. and the writer of this blackened scrawl. I hope you are a good decipherer, or you will soon regret entering into a correspondence with me; I cannot write well, nor read what I write. I should have told you the house you heard talked of for us is not to be had either for love or money. Mr. M. frets, and every moment exclaims, ‘Why it is a thousand times worse than the worst parts of Spain!’ I laugh, and resolve to bear up stoutly against difficulties while Heaven blesses me with health. I am now perfectly well, and to-morrow shall exhibit at the Capitol. The Capitol—good heavens, what profanation!! Here is a creek, too—a dirty arm of the river—which they have dignified by calling it the Tiber. What patience one need have with ignorance and self-conceit.

“Adieu! let me hear from you soon, and accept the sincere friendship of

“E. MERRY.”

From Lady Donegal.

“Monday, 1805.

“I should have long since contributed my mite towards disturbing your repose at Donington, but that the cares and distractions of this world leave me but little time for the pleasures of it. However, as this word pleasure admits of different definitions, perhaps in your dictionary it is explained by ‘great dinners—crowded assemblies—long list of visits to people you don't care about—seldom seeing those you do—never having an hour to yourself—and living in a constant bustle all day long.' Now, if this is your definition of pleasure, what a happy woman you must think me! for it is the exact description of the life I have led ever since you left us. But, as I define it differently, I am more anxious than I can describe for the freedom of the country, where one may follow (sometimes) one's inclinations; and, at all events, shake off some of the fetters which here one must submit to wear. We hope to be at Tunbridge on the 1st of July; and who knows but that we may have the gratification of seeing you there soon after. That would be exactly according to my ideas of pleasure. In the meantime do tell me how far you are advanced, and when you mean really to bring forth. I dread your missing the best time of the year. And I have you so much upon my mind, that I feel an anxiety about your first appearance, which almost amounts to folly.

“How beautiful your ‘Love and Reason’ is. But why is it that Reason cannot be made more interesting? Who would desire to have her, if she is that joyless, frigid dame you poets describe her to be? She, however, has her revenge for the injustice the world does her. Other fair ones may be forsaken with impunity, but even poets will rue the day they neglect her. Take my advice, and keep on good terms with her. There are many pleasures to be found in her society,—none that last long out of it.

“‘Now fare thee well; yet think awhile
On one whose eyes do long to see thee.’

“There is to be a masquerade at Marlborough House on Friday next, for which I understand Mr. W. Spencer has got tickets to give away. If you should have time to do so, I wish you would write to him to let me have two or three, as I have a great desire to make a fool of myself there, and to plague some of my dear friends to death.

“Yours, most sincerely, &c.,

“B. D.”

From M. G. Lewis, Esq.

“Barnes, March 21. 1805.

“My dear Moore,

“Johnson’s definition of the word epistle is—‘a letter : this word is seldom used but in poetry ;’ but you will please to observe, that he does not say that it is ever used to mean a poem. He adds, ‘or on occasions of solemnity or dignity.’ Now, though I have not read the one at all, nor seen the other for some time, I cannot help thinking that this last definition will not be found very applicable either to your epistles or yourself ; pray admire the quotation by which Johnson illustrates the latter part of his definition—

‘When love’s epistles violate chaste eyes,
She half consents, who silently denies.’

There’s an occasion of dignity and solemnity for you.

“Both Dr. Johnson and myself (two great authorities) absolutely deny that ‘epistle’ by itself ever meant, or will mean to the end of the world, a poem ; to mean that, it should be stated to be an ‘epistle in verse.’ Are St. Paul’s Epistles called so ‘affectedly ?’ When we read ‘Dr. Atterbury’s Epistolary Correspondence’ in a title-page, are we to expect to find a book full of verses ? Epistle is not in common use for letter, I allow ; but though it be a poetical word, it does not therefore mean a poem, any more than any other poetical word. It means simply 'a letter;' it may be a letter in prose, or a letter in verse; but as more letters are written in the former than in the latter, if you say 'I will show you an Epistle'—unless you state it to be an epistle in verse, I ought to believe it to be one in prose. Yes; 'though epistles are not necessarily poems, poems have been very often epistles,'—and so have cooks very often been Blackamoors, though Blackamoors are not necessarily cooks; but you would not advertise in the newspapers, 'Want places, a middle-aged-woman cook, and three other Blackamoors.' The word 'other' which follows (you say) determines the nature of the epistles, and makes the prefix of 'poetical' unnecessary;—so that your advertisement is quite a dramatic composition, in which an agreeable surprise is kept in reserve to enliven the last act. But, my good fellow, in my opinion it is this very word 'other' which makes all the mischief; for 'epistles and poems' would be well enough, and then when we bought the book we should find out whether they were in verse or prose. If you insist upon telling us how, you ought to say 'epistles in verse, and other poems.' But while you go on advertising 'epistles and other poems, dedicated to Jews and other natives of Ireland' (for you know 'though natives of Ireland are not necessarily Jews, Jews have been very often natives of Ireland'), the reader of every newspaper has a right to be highly incensed at the trick 'which you've been after putting upon him.' You assure him, upon your word of honour, that you are going to publish a volume of epistles. He very good-naturedly makes up his mind to read them; and as soon as he has so resolved, you call out, 'A bite, by Jasus! my epistles are poems, every mother's son of them!'—He starts back thunderstruck, and you enjoy his surprise. I certainly would not say 'tragedies and other poems,' unless those tragedies were in verse; would you say, 'comedies, and other poems,' though comedies 'are not always' in prose? I will not pretend to say that Horace might not have written nonsense at Rome, and I should not care three skips of a flea if he had; but I maintain that Carpenter in your name has written nonsense in London; and I care too much about you, not to wish that this should be put a stop to. This place is so cold and so dreary that I will not at present ask you to come down here; but in May I shall remember your proposal, and claim your promise of passing a day with me, and longer if you like it. I shall come to town for a few days about the end of next week, and will make a point of seeing you; and if circumstances will leave me at liberty, I shall be very happy to share your beef-steak.

"Yours most truly,

"M. G. LEWIS."

From Miss Godfrey.

"1806.

"Though I am badly off both for time and paper, yet I must contrive, some way or other, to tell you the very sincere pleasure we all feel at your complete triumph over the Edinburgh Reviewers. You will, of course, know before you receive this note that there is a new edition, just come out, of that review where you were so violently attacked; that the criticism of your works is altered and corrected, and all the violent abuse left out; and that

Mr. Jeffrey desired you might be informed of it, and of his regret that, under all the circumstances of the case, he could not do more without appearing inconsistent, or, perhaps, having it supposed that he had been bullied. I believe Mr. Horner is to inform you of it. Yesterday my sisters dined with Rogers, and he told them all I have written to you, and which I have had so much pleasure in writing. My next pleasure will be to read the review. I must own, however, that though I think there is a sort of grandeur d'âme in acknowledging to all the world that one has been in the wrong, and very much in the wrong, yet, as a reviewer, I should suppose Mr. Jeffrey has given himself a death-blow, and has laid himself open to the attacks of every author whom he abuses for the future. Everybody argues, however, that it must be very gratifying to you, and I am sure you will believe that we most truly rejoice at it. I wish that I may happen to be the first to inform you of this little event in your life; and as I have not another moment to say another word, I shall bid you farewell for the present.

“ M. G.”

From Lady Donegal.

“ Worthing, Sussex, Monday, 1806.

“ I have been prevented writing to you as soon as I intended, by a bad headache, which has made me good for nothing for some days past; but as it has at last taken its leave, I shall let you rest in peace no longer, but call you to a strict account of what you have been doing since we parted. I do not expect to hear much good of you, which I think a lucky circumstance for you — for in this case, if by any chance I should hear of a little, it will have double weight; and if I should not, why then one is no worse than one was before. But I really am afraid that you will be again laid up if you are not more prudent than you were when we were in town — which is not likely, as you have no good-natured friends now at your elbow like us, to bore you all day long with lectures upon prudence, and to worry your life out with receipts for preserving it. The ‘Morning Post’ has informed us of your having been at another masquerade — where it was very stupid of you not to go in a character. It has also had the goodness to tell us that you were of Walsh Porter’s tête-à-tête party, which I should think must have been rather an oddish one. What does he say of his friend the Prince? and what is the general opinion of the poor unfortunate Princess? I have not a doubt of her innocence; and I only hope that those may be punished who have had the cruelty to accuse her; but I fear that from motives of policy towards the Prince, the story will be hushed up. Is it true that the Duke of Brunswick is coming over? if it is, I shall wish myself in London, for there must be a kick up amongst them all, if he comes over.

“I take for granted that you see the three sisters all day long — beware!

“Have you any thoughts of making us a visit before you go to Ireland? I hope you have, but I would rather you did not come for a fortnight, as we are now about a mile from the town, which you would find inconvenient, and at that time we mean to remove into the town. Nothing can be more quiet than the lives we lead here; but we have been wretchedly off for books, as we came relying almost entirely upon the library here, which is wretched. However, your poems (our constant companion) will console me till we can get books from town.

“My sisters desire me to say a thousand fine things which you must suppose said. And pray believe me, very sincerely yours, &c. B. D.”

To Miss Godfrey.

“Remston, Leicestershire, Sept. 20. 1806.

“ ‘ Thus far into the bowels of the land have I marched on without impediment.’ I know you will say I am an odd fellow, and as long as you say no worse of me, I shall be contented. Why didn’t I write all the last fortnight that I have been Septembrisé in town? Why didn’t I apprise you that I was about to transport my illustrious carcase hither? And why didn’t I—but the only answer I can make to Why didn’t I? is Why—I didn’t. The fact is, I was neither happy nor comfortable, and I did not like to throw the shade of my mind upon paper for you, though little bodies do not in general cast great shadows; yet you cannot imagine what an eclipse I spread around me whenever my orb becomes opaque with sorrow, or that the light of the heart does not shine pleasantly through me; and this has been the case all this fortnight past. I have had every possible colour of annoyance,—brown study, blue devils, not forgetting ‘green and yellow melancholy’—in short, I have been a ‘rainbow ruffian’ (as some sentimental poet styles a well-dressed soldier), and my reflections on paper would have been all of the prismatic kind. ‘Oh, this learning! what a thing it is!’ But to come to the plain matter-of-fact (which, you know, I love as well as I do roast mutton), I was fidgetted and teased by my impatience to get away from London, and by the impossibility from day to day of accomplishing it for want of those paper-wings which are so necessary to the flights of even poets themselves. I have, however, contrived to fly thus far; and oh! that I had the wings of a Lottery Pigeon, that I might flee away and be in Dublin. I hope in two or three days to manage this. I came down here in a new carriage of Ranccliffe's, with his German servant to frank me along ('base is the slave who pays'), and the title of 'My Lord' lavished on me all the way; not without some little surprise that his Lordship had grown so much of late. I was unfortunate enough to be just in time for the Leicester Races, where I went with 'burning eyes of love' after my long night's travel, and figured away at the ball in the evening to the tune of Paddy O'Rafferty till three or four o'clock. The Duchess of Rutland was there. Think of her dining in ordinary with about two hundred Leicestershire racers and graziers, in their boots just fresh off the race-ground, staring at her with all their eyes and mouths. She did the honours in a most queenish style; and I asked one of these turf gentlemen whether he did not think she was a fine 'Monarch Mare.' Now this is a joke even still more distant from your comprehension than jokes in general, because it is a familiar designation among sportsmen for the female descendants of a certain famous gentleman whom they call Monarch; and I assure you that it had all the 'jest's prosperity' among the black-legs.

"Best love to Lady Donegal: direct your next letters under cover to Edward Connor, Esq., War Office, Dublin Castle. Yours,

"T. M."

To Miss Godfrey.

" Dublin, 1806.

" I hope Lady Donegal received the letter which I wrote to her on my arrival here, though I think if she had, she would have been honest enough to have repaid it before now; and I should not have delayed so long answering your very dear letter, if I had not been for these five or six days laid up in my old way on the sofa, not so much with illness as with the dread of illness. I had two or three broad hints from my side that it intended to recommence operations; so, without waiting for the attack, I adopted that 'stirring little man, Bonaparte's' system, and marched an army of leeches over it immediately; a little hostile blood has been spilt, and everything, I am happy to say, seems restored to its former tranquillity. You cannot imagine how desperately vulgar and dreary this place is! I have not even Mrs. Tighe* to comfort me, but I expect she will be in town in a week or two. I regret very much to find that she is becoming so 'furieusement littéraire:' one used hardly to get a peep at her blue stockings, but now I am afraid she shows them up to the knee: however, I shall decide for myself when I see her, as certainly this city, among the other features of a country town which it has acquired, has not forgotten that unfailing characteristic, scandal. If it were not for my own dears immediately about me, and the old books of Tanaquil Faber in St. Patrick's Library, I should die the death of the desperate here. I have been received certainly with every possible mark of attention: most of the men of situation have left their cards with me, and, amongst the rest, the new Provost of the University, who as being the depositary of the morals of the country, and personally a very High Priest into the bargain, gave me more pleasure by his visit than any of them. The Harringtons have asked me two or three times to dinner; and this very day I was to have been presented at a private audience to the Duke of Bedford, but he has not come to town on account of illness I believe, and it will not take place till to-morrow. All these things, to be sure, are merely feathers in the cap, but they are feathers I like to shake in the eyes of some envious people here amazingly. I entreat of you to write often to me. Your last letter was like summer sunshine to me—not only bright but warm, not only luminous but comfortable. That blessed ingredient, affection, which would sweeten the homeliest draught, comes doubly sweet in the Falernian you sent me, and I beg of you to repeat the dose as often as possible.

* Author of "Psyche."

“Best love to Lady Donegal and your sister Philippa.

“Ever yours,

“T. M.”

To Lady Donegal.

“Dec. 4. 1806.

“I have often said that correspondence between friends should be like the flow of notes in music,—if too long an interval is allowed to take place between the tones, one loses the chain of song, the idea of melody is interrupted, and we listen to the sounding note (when it comes) with faint, or at least diminished, gratification. Is it not exactly so with letters? But all I can say is, that it was you who taught me this bad practice ; and that if I had not found you so slow to answer, I never could have become so slow to write. Action and reaction is as much a law of friendship as it is of nature ; and it is but too natural for my writing to cease in proportion as it finds your answering so tardy. This causation, I know, includes us both : but I call all the gods to witness that yours is the greatest share of the guilt ; and if you will but show promptitude in answering this letter, you will find me as true a hero as ever exchanged paper with an antagonist. Dublin has at length become gay ; but it is a kind of conscript gaiety, in which the people assemble with all the ill-grace of French volontaires forcés. There is nothing, however, but dinners,—daily, dull, d—n—ble dinners ; and I have time to do little more than ‘faire le saut de l’Allemand, du lit à la table et de la table au lit.’ The Bedfords have been very civil to me, and have had me to dinner and at private parties with them. The Harringtons, too, are gracious, but it is ‘leather and prunella.’ My heart is sick of them all, and I see nothing for me but to become either one of Bonaparte’s King-lets, or enlist among Sir Francis Burdett’s bludgeon-men. Any little hopes I have had of advancement are gone. Among the great, both in England and Ireland, there is nothing now left but pride, self-interest, and, I think, a fatal insufficiency, whose day of trial seems to be near, and whose fate may be too much what it deserves. The country parts of Ireland are in a most disturbed state. Under the name of Threshers, the United Irishmen are again organising ; and the prophecy-mongers tell us that Bonaparte is the Grand Thresher, who is described as coming to ‘thresh the nations.’ Certainly no one ever performed a mission more completely. Our Judges are going down, under strong escorts, to these disturbed parts of the country; but Judges are not the people to send against Threshers. In short, the lightning is flashing in our eyes, and some people will not see it; the thunder is rolling in our ears, and some people will not hear it. But the bolt will fall, and then (as young Rousseau said, going to bed without his supper) ‘Good bye, roast beef!’

“I was delighted to see that our friend General Spencer has got a regiment. But where is he? I have seen no account of that expedition since I left London.

“It goes to my heart to think that it will be so long before I meet you again, and that you will be caring less and less for me every day of that time. I know your opinion about absence, and I dread so much that you speak from feeling and from practice! I have sometimes indeed, in my own case, found my stock of recollections nearly exhausted, and then I confess that the eyes of the object were the only warehouse where I could lay in a new store, genuine and fresh; but these were recollections meant merely for light ‘summer wear,’ and not even expected to last. I shall hope, however, that ours is of a different texture, and that even if it does diminish, the wear of it, like that of gold, will be so slow and insensible, as not to make us feel any loss in its value. I shall go to Donnington village when I leave this, and there bury myself, as I have no idea any longer of letting my light shine, like the sun in the Zodiac, for the illumination of monsters.

“Pray give my best remembrances to your sisters. Tell Miss Godfrey that if she would not stand upon the ceremony of hearing from me by this post, and write immediately, it would give me a very high opinion of her benevolence. I shall fire a letter at her to-morrow or next day. But this day I happened to dine at home, and, behold, you have the fruits of it.

“’Tis now ten at night, and my brains give no light,
And the Postman rings ding-dong.

“So good bye. Believe me,

“Yours very cordially,

“THOMAS MOORE.

“Atkinson, to whom I have sent this to be franked (too late) begs his most cordial remembrances, and hopes that he is not forgotten by your Ladyship.”

To his Mother.

“Thursday, April, 1807.

“My dearest Mother,

“I got letters from all the little circle the other day except yourself. Tell dear Ellen I was very happy to welcome her preface to our correspondence, and that I hope she will not lag like other people; though indeed I retract all my blame of Kate, for she has been very good to me. I am going to-day to the first gay thing I have had since I came—indeed, I have not seen a face but Mary Dalby’s, and that but once a week, since I came; but to-day I gig it to Ashby, nine miles off, where I dine with Parson M’Doual, Lady Loudoun’s cousin, and then proceed in the evening to a concert and ball, consisting of Ashby amateurs and amateuresses; and I expect to find my corked-up spirits flying like spruce-beer or soda-water. I assure you, whenever I meet any one to talk to now, they suffer for my long silence by myself, and my fits of oratory are prodigious. God bless you, dearest mother! My father’s letter gave me most sweet comfort. Ever your own

“TOM.”

From Miss Godfrey.

“ June 9. 1807.

“ You are the most ingenious man at making excuses, telling lies, and deceiving poor woman, that ever fell in my way in my pilgrimage upon earth; and your last letter to me is a most beautiful composition of this sort, and, albeit, might impose upon any one of my sex but myself. Alas, and alack-a-day! I have not lived so long with you for nothing. I have found you out, and know full well, to my sorrow and regret, that unless you are in love with a woman you don't care a pin about her, if she does not worry and torment you into thinking of her sometimes; and poor dear Friendship, after being obliged to march up boldly and take you by assault, must keep a constant watch upon you afterwards, or she will most certainly lose you. Well, there is no help for it — with all your faults I like you still. Pray don't think of going to Ireland without paying us a visit either here or at Tunbridge. We shall be excessively disappointed if you do. I changed my plans since I wrote to you last, and have remained on in town; in the first place, because I got better, and in the second place, because the Shaftesburys would not let me stir, whether I were better or worse. So here I am, and here we all are, till the middle of next week, and then we propose to return to Tunbridge, and either here or there, a visit from you will give us the sincerest pleasure. I think your return to Ireland looks like marrying, and if the lady be young and handsome, and rich, what better can you ~~do~~? The latter she must be, or you must not think of her, and all the rest I hope she will be. Are you really thinking of such a step?

*

*

*

*

Lord

Shaftesbury* is reading and admiring your poems at present; he desired me to tell you that he has got an Anacreon for you which he means to give you when he sees you. It was given to him by a Professor in the University at Genoa, who understood English, and admired your translation to the greatest degree; and upon Lord Shaftesbury saying you were an acquaintance of his, he made him a present of this Anacreon, which is printed in capital letters, or something uncommon, which a poor ignorant woman cannot be expected to understand or explain. I forgot to tell you in my last that I saw Cumberland at Tunbridge, and I took an opportunity of mentioning to him how much you were obliged by the manner in which he had spoken of you in his book. So he smiled and panted, put his head on one side, and said how happy he was — that you were quite charming: ‘He has more talents than any of them; I was obliged to admit his faults to obtain credit for what I said of his excellences, otherwise praise would have been injudicious and useless.’ I asked him if Rogers had not told him, as I begged he would, how flattered you felt upon the occasion; and his answer was, ‘He be hanged; he never told me one word about it.’ The Fincastles set off for Scotland yesterday; they are to remain there two years. I am sorry for it, as I really like them both, and him in particular. Rogers is gone to Hampshire for three weeks, and I suppose Spencer is weeping, and wailing, and gnashing his teeth, an operation which he will take care to perform in public that he may be seen of men. What do you call this but ill-nature?

* Anthony, fifth Earl.

And yet I swear to you I hate ill-nature, and I don't dislike Spencer; he is a good-humoured, heartless fellow, and we shake hands and are jolly whenever we meet. Whenever you see Lady Shaftesbury* you must love her, for she is all over heart and goodness; and Lady Barbara is a pretty, amiable little girl, and you can't help loving her. Now, farewell; perhaps this day twelvemonth I may receive the answer to this letter, scolding me, as you always do, when you are conscious of behaving ill to me, for my long silence.

“ M. G.

“ Your letter, having gone round by Tunbridge, came too late for us to drink your health on your birthday. I shall drink it twice next year.”

“ You are a shabby fellow for having written three long pages to Mary, without once mentioning the name of unfortunate me. I wish I could flatter myself that this omission was intentional, for then I could forgive it; but as it proceeds from downright forgetfulness, I own my wrath will endure till you have atoned for such an outrage against friendship. With all your sins upon your head, I hope we shall see you at Tunbridge, as it would grieve me sincerely to think that you were to return to Ireland without seeing us, even for one week.

“ Yours most truly, &c. &c.

“ B. D.”

From Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“ Jan. 29. 1809.

“ No, my dear Moore; I must insist upon firing shot for

* Daughter and heir of Sir John Webb.

shot, and if you have not received my fire, it was only because I could not take my aim, for I left Town immediately on the receipt of your kind letter, and unfortunately left it behind, with your address contained in it. I rejoice to hear you have been so well off in the most important of all things — at least so, to your happiness and mine; and though Mrs. Seymour has left you, I dare say you have already filled up the vacuity. The last month I have idled away at private houses in the country, — at Woolbeding*, where all was luxury; and at Glynd, a seat of Lord Hampden's, as old as the world itself, where the long, long galleries and gigantic staircases were as windy as the sea-shore; and where my own bed-chamber, hung with arras, smelt so strongly of time that I could have sworn that John of Gaunt, or some ancestor of his, lay asleep in his stone coffin under my bed. Brighton, from which I came yesterday, is still very gay, and full of balls. There I left (full of smiles, and talking much of you) Miss Dallas. Do you remember her at R. Thornton's breakfast? I told her you wished to dance with her there, and her eyes brightened into diamonds. There also are the Grattans, the Thompsons, Lady Isabella Fitzgerald†, as full of romance as any heroine, and a Miss Tudor, an American, who says she knows you, though you must have forgot her, and who is rather admired by the men, though hated by the women, reciting odes of Horace, and in beauty surpassing anything I have heard of among her countrymen — the Iroquois and Illinois, the Cherokees, the Chicsaws, the Chipewaws, the Ottawas, or Catabaws. Our friends in Davies Street* I have seen but for ten minutes since my return; but they are well, and look better and gayer than I have ever seen them. They upbraided me very deservedly for my not writing to you. They had a party last night — the Berrys, Mrs. Damer, T. Hope, and other delectables; but I could not go, being knocked up with a cold. Arthur goes to school next week. A month ago Gifford called to communicate confidentially his design to publish immediately a Review on the plan of the ‘Edinburgh,’ to be called the ‘London Review.’† I must confess I heard of it with pleasure, as I thought it might correct an evil we have long lamented together. He wishes much for contributions, and all contributors (as is the case with the ‘Edinburgh Review’) are to be paid indiscriminately. He is exceedingly anxious that you should assist him as often as you can afford time. You may choose what book to review you like (and you are to receive twenty guineas for every sheet of letter-press), subject, however, to any alterations and corrections whatever of the Editor, who is to retain an unlimited control, as Jeffrey retains at Edinburgh; a very proper regulation I think. I gave him great hopes of you (as well as some of myself), and he has since sent Hoppner to me once or twice to urge me to write to you on the subject. Some circumstances which I have since learnt must, however, be stated to you. They affect my mind a little, and not a little. It seems the politics of Jeffrey’s ‘Review’ have long given great offence to the Government party, particularly at Edinburgh; and Walter Scott, who formerly wrote in it principally in the quizzing department, has on that account (and perhaps for some private reasons) withdrawn his countenance and support. At the desire of some persons in power, particularly Canning and the Lord Advocate, he has written a very long letter on the subject to Gifford (which I have seen), detailing, ably enough, the plan on which the Review should be conducted, and pressing the scheme upon G. as a good desideratum 'to counteract the deleterious principles of the "Edinburgh Review."' At this I took alarm; but Gifford assures me that though of course the politics will be Ministerial, it will by no means be a principal object; and he desires me to assure you so. However, I confess it shakes me a little, though Hoppner, who is very sanguine about it, does not think it should. I have now, at their ardent desire, made my report to you. When I first hinted your name to G. he jumped at the sound, and I believe has not slept since. His intention is to pay ten guineas a sheet, but the Edinburgh people pay twenty, and he cheerfully agrees to it in your instance. It seems Brougham's Review of Cevallos* has blown Edinburgh into a blaze, and lists have been taken from house to house to collect the signatures of those who would engage no longer to take it in. All this in confidence, of course, as the secret is not my own. I have now fulfilled my promise to torment you on the subject. I meant to write about girls and verses, and it has ended in a long prosing on Scotch Reviewers. Spencer is still, I believe, circumstanced as you left him. The subscription goes on; but I fancy with no great effect. When I saw him at Gilwall two months ago, he mentioned an idea (suggested by the D. of Devonshire) of publishing his poems by subscription.

* Lord Robert Spencer's.

† Married the Count de Chabot.

* Lady Donegal.

† This design was soon afterwards carried out; but instead of the “London,” it was called the “Quarterly” Review.

* In Edinburgh Review, vol. xiii.

I have not seen him since. As for myself, I am now re-printing mine with a few additions. I had thoughts of adding more; but, alas! I have none to consult with now you are away. You say nothing of your employments. A thousand, thousand thanks for a most elegant set of volumes. I am delighted with your intention to make your debüt on the stage,—as an author, I mean. Of your fame as an actor I have had many reverberations. Your sketch of Ireland is most melancholy, and gloomy enough is the scene here just now. Adieu, my dear Moore, and believe me to be,

“ Ever yours most affectionately,

“ SAMUEL ROGERS.

“ When are we to expect you?

“ I have still Methuen’s effusions. He writes about them, alas! every post.

“ I dine to-day in Davies Street. How I wish you were of the party! Lady D.’s faintings have returned upon her.”

From Miss Godfrey.

“ Feb. 15. 1809.

“ If I were to give way to my feelings, I should scold, fight, and quarrel with you for three long hours to come; but having a wonderful command over myself, and always listening to the voice of reason; and being of a Christian-like, forgiving temper, and possessing ten thousand other virtues which I have not time to mention at present, I shall pass over your sins and offences as lightly as I can, and refer you for all I leave unsaid to your own mind. See that page of it where all your best feelings and recollections are recorded, and tell me if you find nothing there to reproach you. A line or two to an absent friend now and then, one would suppose, was no weighty sacrifice. It is just the affair of five minutes; and if you carry your Epicurean love of repose so far as to think this a great effort, I am sorry for you, poor Tom, and very sorry for myself and all your other friends, for you will forget us all at last, merely because it is too much trouble to remember us. Rogers growls at you also. But I don't fight anybody's battles but my own. I wish I knew when you really intend to come back, and what you are about, and what has become of your learned and pious women, and whether you have seen my sister Philly, and a great many other wishes also I have, of different sorts and sizes too tedious for insertion. I wonder what you have felt and thought, and feel and think, about the Court of Inquiry, our miseries in Spain, and our fooleries at home. Do you feel any compassion for the Duke of York, as a great many people do? I do; for I dare say the greater part of his accusers are just as guilty themselves. Once upon a time high situation, like charity, covered a multitude of sins: that day is completely gone by, and the higher the criminal at present the greater the punishment. Public disgrace falls so much heavier upon a Royal Highness, than the pillory would upon his valet-de-chambre, and its effects are so much more fatal. I believe we are all advancing fast to revolution. Not that it appears to be at all the wish of contented, stupid John Bull; but event after event seems to lead to it, and while he lets every abuse pass silently by, circumstances draw him on in spite of himself, and I am sure we shall all wake some fine morning in the middle of a revolution, without knowing where upon earth it came from. The King is quite miserable at it, and has said that it is the first time the House of Brunswick has degraded itself.

* * * * * No one can guess where inquiries and prosecutions will stop; and there is a general apprehension of the result. In the meantime the House of Commons roar with laughing from five o'clock in the evening till two in the morning. Every house that you go into is occupied with the subject. No one talks of anything else. Our brave men fell, and are forgotten by every one but Bonaparte, who is not so ungrateful as to forget all that we have done for the success of his schemes. I really can't help writing you all this, for I hear no other subject talked of. Yesterday the crowd was so great, that it was with difficulty the Members could get up to the House. Lord Strangford got on badly enough at the Brazils. He is very much disliked by the English; but he has an unbounded influence over the Prince's mind. I'll tell you the rest in my next letter: but the post-bell rings, and so adieu. Bab sends her best love to you.

“ M. G.”

To his Mother.

“ Donnington Park, 1809.

“ My dearest Mother,

“ I think I have got into some mistakes in my reckoning, and whether I have given you a letter too little or too much I cannot at this moment determine. A squire in the neighbourhood here came and forced me over to dine with him and Lord Robert Manners, and I dawdled away two days with them, which has deranged all my calculations. The letter that Kate asks about was written for publication, but not in the manner that Sir John's luminous biographer has introduced it: it makes part of a prospectus which I wrote for Power, and which I dare say you have seen by this time printed on a single sheet. The letter was never written to the Knight, or you may be sure I should not have been so ill-bred as to quote Latin in it. I have lost all my comforts here already. The house is arrayed in all its company-dress, and waits in prim expectation of their arrival, like the poor maids of honour in George II.'s time, who used to sit up all night in arm-chairs with their heads drest, in order to be ready for Court next morning. I can't stir an inch without meeting some crimson carpets, &c., that must be spotless for my Lady's eye when she comes. God bless you. Ever your own

“TOM.

“By the bye, there is the best Irishism in that said ‘Dublin Magazine’ that ever I met with. The editor in a note upon the last cover very gravely entreats the reader to ‘keep in mind’ that Miss Owenson's portrait is not Sir John Stevenson's.”

From Miss Godfrey.

“Davies Street, June 20. 1809.

“I cannot bear this profound silence any longer. I believe you could bear it to all eternity—to your everlasting shame be it spoken. In the natural course of human affairs it was Bab who should have written and not me, and she has been always talking of doing so. I have seen the pen in her hand for the purpose, and even the first line composed; but as it has never gone farther my patience could stand it no longer, and I made a vow that I would write to you myself, and put you in mind of your poor dear absent friends, and ask you also about your poor dear self at the same time. And pray, sir (says I, very civilly), how are you, where are you, and what are you about? Are you conversing with the mighty dead, or addressing yourself to future ages? or, albeit, are you ingloriously chatting with your Fannys and Phillises in the corner, and swearing to the dear creatures that you can't live without them? As for me, sweet sir (for of course you return my kind inquiries by still kinder ones about myself), I am, at this present writing, sick to death of London, oppressed by its bustle, stunned by its noise, choked by its dust, and stifled by its smoke. And if you know any worse state of existence than this, take up your pen instantly and describe it to me, that I may have the pleasure of answering you by the return of the post, and proving clearly to your satisfaction that you are in the greatest of all possible errors if you can suppose any situation can be more miserable than the one I have just had the honour of describing to your excellency. * * * * *

Parliament is to be up on Thursday, after having 'played such fantastic tricks before high heaven as,' I take it for granted, 'made the very angels weep. This very moment it occurs to me that this was the cause of the wet season we have had—it was all angels' tears which we vulgarly called rain.

"At present what do you say about revolution? I think we shall escape. We are in the high road to reform. It is the fashion of the times. Every man that wants to make a name finds out an abuse. The Opposition are just as much alarmed at this spirit as the Ministers, and are just as unpopular with the people, at which they are quite indignant. This third party is called the Mountain. The Archduke Charles and Bonaparte keep the world in a state of breathless expectation. Whoever gains, rivers of blood must flow, and anarchy or slavery is the miserable alternative. It makes one sick.

“Rogers is very much discomposed at your having anything to do with Carpenter. Still he says you do yourself great injustice in continuing in his hands, and I believe so too, for we suspect him — at least Bab and I do — not to be in circumstances to pay you as other booksellers would. I have not said anything of the disappointment we felt at your not coming to England this year. We did, however, feel it truly and sincerely; but what can one do upon such occasions but submit with a good grace to what one can't help?

“Bab's love to you, and mine also.

“M. G.”

From Lady Donegal.

“Tunbridge Wells, July 14. 1809.

“It positively is a grievous misfortune to have any one belonging to us of a more active turn of mind and with nimbler fingers than our own,—for the natural consequence is, that indolence is indulged in till it becomes a vice; and we all know how difficult a matter it is to conquer vicious habits; and that you, Mr. Little, should be the means of conquering mine is what must appear extraordinary to many. But so it is; for your ‘Sceptic’ has converted me to the true faith of writing to my friends again, and, in the true spirit of friendship, of finding fault with them when I see occasion for it. I am more vexed than I can say at your attack upon —. Every one must know her in a moment; and though none can like her, or even tolerate her, yet she is a woman, and as such ought not to be attacked when she has no way of defending herself. Do what you will with Lords Mulgrave and Castle-reagh, or with any other lord or gentleman you choose, but let poor women pass unmolested.

“ You will be surprised at my taking her part; but it is not for her sake, it is for yours that I feel vexed. And I would give a great deal to have her name effaced; for those who do not know you as well as I do will impute the attack to some unworthy motive, and perhaps call it pique, or revenge, for the rudeness of her conduct to you. I implore you, therefore, to scratch her out, and have done with her. In the meantime I will confess that I have carefully locked up the copy you sent to me, and do not talk of it to any one, Mary excepted, who thinks with me about it, and who joins with me in regretting that where there is so much to admire there should be any drawback to our admiration. What a lecture this is! and what an opinion I must have of your disposition, and of your regard for me, to suppose that you will pardon it! But I pique myself upon knowing you well, and I therefore feel sure that you will ‘forgive the freedom of a friend.’

“ What a pretty return all this for your kindness in sending the poem to me, and yet I do assure you that I feel very much obliged to you for your recollection of us, and very much gratified by it; for one constant dread I have upon my mind is, that your long absence will weaken your feelings for your friends at this side of the water, and that every day your recollections of them will get fainter, till at last they will melt into the horizon, and the foreground of your picture will be the only part that will interest you. Arthur, Mary, and myself comprise our family party here, where we arrived last Monday. At present there is nobody here that I would ever wish to see again; but in a little time we expect the Ellenboroughs, the Berrys, Charles Moore, and Rogers, none of whom have any particular attractions in your eyes; and yet there are some good heads and some good hearts amongst them, though few of the faces are worth looking at.

“ Mary desires to be affectionately remembered to you.

“ What are you now about? Be it good or be it bad, tell me. Yours very truly, &c.,

“ B. D.”

From Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“ London, July 10. 1809.

“ My dear Moore,

“ I have nothing indeed to do, but to throw myself upon your generosity, having so shamefully abused it, and to promise amendment, the only reparation in my power; but, alas! is it in my power? If I may confess my weakness to you,—a weakness I have never concealed,—I have no hope. I cannot write; and continually do I walk miles to save the necessity of writing a single line. Nor, on reflection, can I say that I remember ever to have given any assurance on the subject. No; I was too well acquainted with myself to make any. I said to you, ‘ Stay here, and let us converse, face to face.’ You replied, ‘ No; let us do it with pen, ink, and paper.’ Now as you will not — perhaps cannot — indulge me in my wish (and sincere it is, as you well know), it seems a little hard that I am to be blamed by everybody for a mental incapacity which I have often acknowledged to my friends with shame and sorrow; and besides, if you were a person of an amiable absence, it might be politic in us, if we had the vanity to think it was in our power, to render that absence as pleasant to you as possible. As it is, my dear Moore, we cannot wish to reconcile you to it by any exertion of ours.

“Now I have vapoured and bullied, — and to blame others is always wise, when we ourselves are in the wrong. I will tell you how much I miss you in my walks in the Park, and at Vauxhall, and on the Thames; but much as I grieve, I must say that you have determined wisely. Lady Charlemont is again on the wing for Dublin, as beautiful as ever. She talks of your songs with the same enthusiasm she used to do. The other night, at Lady Cork’s, I heard Lady Hamilton sing, ‘Friend of my Soul,’ and ‘The Wreath you wove,’ with great spirit. I could not help thinking, and so, perhaps, did many others, that I had heard them sung differently. Jeffrey has been here, and is gone: he inquired very particularly after you. The ‘Edinburgh Review’ used to sell 10,000 copies; the ‘Quarterly’ sells 2500. Walter Scott has just left us. He dined with Princesses and Ministers of State, and was always engaged a fortnight deep. He made rain and sunshine in this town at pleasure. Cumberland dined with me yesterday. He is greatly changed, but still lively. He took up a volume of your Anacreon that was lying on the table, and spoke of you, as he always does, in the warmest terms. Poor Spencer! He took the field again when Lady Susan returned, but ill-health drove him back to Gillwell, and there he now is, with some symptoms of dropsy upon him. When he came to town, he drove to Ward's; but when he entered the house, he found, as he told me, trunks in the hall, and many alarming signs. Ward, in less than a week, let his house, and fled to Spain. He then drove to L. Dicks', and there he passed the two months he spent among us. D. was very vain of his guest. He never disturbed him, appointed two men to wait upon him; and whenever S. dined at home, Dick gave a fête. So Methuen has resolved to print. Woe is me!

“ Adieu, my dear Moore, and believe me to be,

“ Yours, ever,

“ SAMUEL ROGERS.

“ A pamphlet is just left with me. Many thanks! It is worthy of the former, though, I think, written with a little more rapidity. The second time I read it, I liked it still better than the first. It is full of point and nerve; and will, I am sure, establish the fame of the former, as well as its own. Alas! I have no account to give of myself.

“ I am printing a new book, full of old things,—i. e., a new edition.”

From Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“ St. James's Place, Dec. 23. 1809.

“ No, my dear Moore; never will I presume to say what you shall do. Your ‘nightly visitant’ will whisper better things in your ear than any human voice; and if you are in a vein of satire just now, for heaven's sake write satire. So long as you write such lines as conclude the ‘Sceptic,’ I shall never complain for one. I am rejoiced to think that you are happy, which indeed you cannot fail to be while you are making others so; but don't let the Graces supplant the Muses. You mention nothing of the subjects that engage you, and perhaps you are right. I have just now sent forth a new edition of an old book, a little better, I hope, than the last. It is not, however, I believe, yet abroad: when I get a copy I will try to send it to you. I suppose Carpenter will undertake to do it. As for me, I have been for the last month something of an invalid. Bile and Baillie have been my only companions, save and except a very well-drest company of black spirits and white, blue spirits and gray; but they have now taken leave, and I am beginning to break the shell, and hope soon to fly, if not to sing.

“ Adieu, my dear Moore, and believe me to be,

“ Ever yours, most sincerely,

“ SAMUEL ROGERS.”

To Lady Donegal and Miss Godfrey.

“ Birmingham, Monday, 1810.

“ I am so far on my way to you, and just wait to take breath before I encounter the various kinds of feelings that I shall have upon my arrival. It is a sad thing to be ashamed to meet one's friends, and I should be sorry to think that I have any such feeling about me; yet, when I know that I have so long disappointed the wishes and hopes of those who are interested about me, it is impossible not to dread such reproachful salutations as ‘ I am sorry you did so,’ and ‘ I wonder you didn't do so,’ and a thousand other anxious comments, which one must only feel without answering. But the good nature and the true cordiality with which I know I shall be received in Davies Street, give me courage to meet even the reproaches which perhaps may be mingled with them; and all I intreat of you is that, for a little while at least, you will neither ask me what I have done, or even what I mean to do, but draw upon your first good opinion of me (if that fund be not entirely exhausted) to enable you still to look forward with a hope of something good and respectable from me. To tell you that I mean to give up society would be only to make you smile and remember how often that wise resolution has been paraded by me: but years make some difference even in fools, and though they may not give us wisdom, they do a good deal in changing the objects of our folly. After this preparatory letter, which, I am afraid, has always the clumsiness of a pioneer without his strength, I shall bid you good bye till Wednesday or Thursday, when I mean to have a hearty shake of the hand with you in Davies Street. This letter is to both, as my friendship is.

“ Ever faithfully yours,

“ THOMAS MOORE.”

To Lady Donegal.

“ July, 1810.

“ I shall not attempt to defend myself; for it would really require more sophistry and more impudence than (bad as I am) I possess, to think of proving that I am not quite wrong in having so long deferred writing to you. But is there not some little grace in this avowal? and would it not require the hardest heart in the world to be angry with me after such an humble confession of my errors? I know you will forgive me; because, after all, you understand very well yourself the sort of unwillingness one has to take up a stitch that has long dropped in a correspondence; and though I think I am as sure of your heart as of any heart in this world, yet I do firmly believe that 'yours sincerely' is the only part of a letter that you take any real pleasure in writing to me — isn't it so? As for myself, there are a few in the world for whom I would willingly shed my last blood, and yet I cannot help being sparing of my ink to them. I know sister Mary thinks this very odd, for she would sooner draw a pen than a sword at any time; but it is my weakness, and a very lazy weakness it is, I confess,—one great inconvenience of which is that my letters, when they do come, are only apologies for those that did not come, and my not having written is almost the only thing I have to write about. Pope says that 'Heaven first sent letters;' but if it required answers to the letters it sent, I am afraid that Heaven would have found me an unpunctual correspondent. — So much for the main subject of my epistle; and now, having made such a bad hand of what I have not done, I wish I could give you even a tolerable account of what I have done; but, I don't know how it is, both my mind and heart appear to have lain for some time completely fallow, and even the usual crop of wild oats has not been forthcoming. What is the reason of this? I believe there is in every man's life (at least in every man who has lived as if he knew how to live) one blank interval, which takes place at that period when the gay desires of youth are just gone off, and he has not yet made up his mind as to the feelings or pursuits that succeed them — when the last blossom has fallen away, and yet the fruit continues to look harsh and unpromising — a kind of interregnum which takes place upon the demise of love, before ambition and worldliness have seated themselves on the vacant throne.

 I am now on a visit with a man who has ten thousand a year, and who keeps the best table within the bills of mortality; but the house, notwithstanding, is most preciously dull; the cook and I are the only savans on the establishment, and the sauce is the only thing piquante I have to deal with in it. I intend however, if I can, to turn my seclusion to account, and to write something marketable for this next year; for money I must have, if the Muses were to die for it; and of all the birds of the air, the goldfinch's notes for me. By-the-bye, talking of money, you insult me in a most pointed manner by never once touching upon the subject in any of your letters. You seem to think it quite as ridiculous to mention money-matters to me, as it would be to write to Hammersley about the Loves of the Plants; but I'd have you to know ——— seriously, I take it rather unkind of you you that do not tell me how you are getting on with those sad samples of nobility you have to deal with, for though my hard fate prevents me from being any thing but a burthen to you, yet you ought to do me the justice to feel that I am anxious about all that concerns you, and that to know the worst from yourself is better than being made to fear everything bad by others. Mrs. Crookshank, about a month ago, told me some circumstances which gave me much and real pain. Ah! nothing goes right in this world, except for those with whom everything (please God) will go wrong in the other. Really, one is obliged to feel either very profanely or very piously, when one sees the kind of persons that are put upon the black list in this life. Do, pray, let me know something about your affairs, and do not for an instant suppose that I am not as warmly and anxiously alive to everything connected with you and your happiness, as I was when near you, and as I ever, while I live, shall continue to be.

“I hope you did not dislike my dedicatory letter to you. It was sent to the press before I recollected that I ought to have asked your permission for the step, and it was this afterthought that made me resort to the awkward expedient of putting only the initials of your name. Most people here think it is Lady Downshire, which is very stupid of them, though perhaps you will not be sorry for the transfer. As to politics, I begin rather to hope that the kind of change most for my advantage (and perhaps most for the advantage of the country) will take place next sessions, and that the Whigs will come in, in spite of my other friends the Reformists, who seem to be dropping off the perch very fast indeed; and certainly never did dirtier sticks ascend in the bright shape of rockets than some of these said Reformists have proved themselves to be. Cobbett is contemptible; Wardle is in the mud; and Burdett himself is, I believe, beginning to think that politics, like ‘poverty, brings a man acquainted with strange bedfellows.’ When I mention my hopes from the Whigs, I found them chiefly upon the impression which my last pamphlet has made among them. I have had letters of the most flattering kind possible from Grattan, Lord Lansdowne, Lord Moira, the Duke of Bedford, &c., and the language which they use, particularly Lord Lansdowne and the Duke of Bedford, looks very like a persuasion in their minds that I might be somewhat useful to them. But I was almost forgetting to tell you of the strange honour that came by surprise upon me the other day. I received a letter from Stockholm, through Hammersley’s house (where it had been detained about a year), informing me that I had been elected a Knight of the illustrious, secular, equestrian, and chaptal Order of St. Joachim*, on account of my reputation for literature on the Continent. This, you know, is one of the orders made hereditary in the family of Nelson. I thought for a moment that it was a hoax, and the name of the saint appeared to me very well chosen, being easily convertible into St. Joke-him; but upon applying to Naylor, the Windsor genealogist, and others, to whom this letter from the Vice-Chancellor of the Order referred me, I found it to be all a most illustrious and chaptal matter-of-fact; so I am now Sir Thomas Moore, K. J., elect. I have not yet answered the letter, but it is my intention respectfully to decline the honour, as literary knights (even if the knighthood were acknowledged) are anything but reputable personages in the eyes of John Bull, to whom the respect for authorship that exists on the Continent is as unintelligible as their cookery, and goes against his stomach quite as much.

“ And now, good bye. Give dear sister Mary my best and warmest regards; tell her I shall write just as long a letter to her very soon, and that that letter and another will be about long enough to cover the space between this and our meeting, which I trust will be a happy one; and to which I shall carry just as warm a heart and as constant a spirit (I mean in friendship) as ever.

“ Yours,

“ T. M.”

* See Preface to vol. ii. of Moore's Collected Works.

From Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“ Oct. 21. 1810.

“ My dear Moore,

“ When I received your last letter, I sat down immediately and wrote an answer to it. If you wish to know what became of the answer, you shall know — I burnt it. I will now proceed to subjects I like better. Your rencontre with the D. of R., as they relate to yourself and not to me, must have affected you not a little. The conclusion was alike honourable to both, and will be pleasant by-and-by to look back upon among the adventures of your life. Your pamphlet, for which I have never thanked you (though the burnt MS. was full of it), I read with great delight. Grattan spoke of it in the warmest language, and it deserved all he said. Your prose I always greatly admired, and look with great impatience for the wreaths you are preparing for the brows of Virgil and Horace. Don't you sometimes imagine that they are sitting by you in your chamber, while you are writing their lives (as you meant to do) from their own lips? Catullus has long left you. He was the first called upon, no doubt. Have you yet read the poems of W. Scott? The story of the last is very pretty, though the execution is inferior to that of the first. But I have so many questions to ask you, and they crowd so fast upon my pen, that I must throw them all aside till I see you, which I do hope will now be soon; or is your return to be deferred till the Peace? Really, my dear Moore, human life is so short, and the bright moments in it of such rare occurrence, that I cannot endure such privations. Pray, come and scold me vivâ voce, and then I will reply to you with what frankness I can. There is no holding a tête-à-tête across the Irish Channel.

“Lady Donegal and Miss D. return to town for the winter on Saturday. Their last six months have been spent at Tunbridge. I was with them there for a fortnight. The Marchioness of Douglas (Miss Beckford) is still in or near town. The Prince has heard her sing. He admired her song, but not her beauty. Methuen has published his poems and taken a wife. I lamented exceedingly, last spring, that an illness which confined me for many weeks prevented my seeing J. Atkinson. I called a few days after he had left town. Spencer goes on as before, dividing his time between Gilwell and Chiswick, and now and then taking a breakfast at Somerset House. As for myself, I jog on much as usual, mixing rather less with the world and writing less than ever. I sometimes think that I have lost the faculty of making verses, good or bad; but when you return, perhaps I may try again. Campbell lives at Sydenham, writing for the booksellers, and anything, I believe, but poetry. The Lake people seemed to be completely silenced by the broadsides of the ‘Edinburgh Review.’ Jeffrey has been lately in town, though I missed him. In his way hither he stopped at Keswick, and saw Southey and Coleridge. He seems to have been dazzled by the rhetoric of Coleridge, whom he had never seen before. W. Scott has made 10,000*l.* by his poem!* and will, I dare say, double the sum. Will not you rejoice to hear that the Tunbridge waters have almost restored Lady D. to her old health and spirits?

* The Lady of the Lake.

—at least so I concluded from her last. What changes you will find on your return to England! Some dead, some married, some rich, some poor, some with new titles, some, alas! with new faces, and some—no less a wonder than the rest—just the same as you left them! Among the last, my dear Moore, I flatter myself you will find, though now and then a little angry with you,

“Your very sincere friend,

“SAMUEL ROGERS.”

To James Corry, Esq.

“June 4. 1811.

“My dear Corry,

“You have every reason to be very angry with me—but I really have such an unconquerable aversion to writing letters, that I have often thought Captain Brady’s resolution not to answer anything but a challenge was the most peaceable way of getting through life. But I feel myself particularly reprehensible in not attending to your letter; not only because it was the most agreeable I have received since I left Dublin, but because it was so good-natured of you to write to me at all, after my ‘angel visits, few and far between,’ to Lurgan Street. However you may forgive me, I can by no means be so lenient to myself for having seemed (for it was only seeming) so insensible to the many repeated kindnesses I have experienced from you and Mrs. Corry; but distractions of various kinds beset me in cities, and it somehow happens that those I love best come off worst with me. I rather think you will understand what I mean; and indeed both you and Mrs. Corry show that you feel what I mean, by continuing your kindnesses to me through all chances and changes, through all my neglects and aberrations. I have not yet had a business day with Power, which means that we have not yet got drunk together; but he is good enough to be one of my allies next Monday, when I take the chair at a dinner of the gentlemen educated at Dublin College. I wish, with all my heart, that you could pop your nose in amongst us. Beecher has the misfortune to be English-bred, and so cannot be with us.

“With respect to the opening lines of the Prologue for Kilkenny, I am afraid you must fill up the hiatus with stars, for, poor as they were, I have robbed them of their only trinkets for a song in the next number of the Melodies; therefore you must give it only as a fragment, and say ‘Cætera desunt,’ the rest is not decent, or some such cause.

“Pray do not translate any of my Latin for Mrs. Corry, but give her, in plain English, my warmest remembrances, and tell her it gave me sincere pain to hear of her illness; but that I strongly hope I shall see her here with all her good looks and (may I say?) kind smiles in summer.

“Ever yours, my dearest Corry,

“THOMAS MOORE.

“You see I have presumed upon your privilege to enclose a letter, which you will oblige me by sending as soon as possible.”

To Miss Godfrey.

“Dublin, Sept. 11. 1811.

“My unfortunate opera* was at last launched the night before last; and though the actors expected so much from

* M. P. or the Blue Stocking.

it, I doubt whether it will turn out at all so attractive as they supposed. I have not seen it myself yet; but last night I am told it went off without the slightest opposition, and to-night I dare say I may venture, without danger to my nerves, to go and see it. I knew all along that I was writing down to the mob, but that was what they told me I must do. I however mingled here and there a few touches of less earthy mould, which I thought would in some degree atone for my abasement. I am afraid, however, I have failed in both: what I have written up to myself is, they say, over-refined and unintelligible; what I have written down to them is called vulgar. I have therefore made a final resolution never to let another line of mine be spoken upon the stage, as neither my talents nor my nerves are at all suited to it. I must tell you, at the same time, that the piece has (what the actors call) succeeded, the second night having been fully attended and unanimous in applause. Most of the paper critics too have been friendly; the 'Times' making a most formidable exception. The article in that paper yesterday was really a brain-blow, from the style in which it was written and the candour with which it affected to praise me in other departments of literature: they however made a most ridiculous and unaccountable mistake in accusing me of royalism and courtiership, when the fact is, the piece was dreaded by us all as dangerous from the opposite quality, and I had a long struggle with licenser for the retention of several most ticklish passages about bribery. The worst of it is, that I fear Arnold means to trick me out of all but the first advance that he made me in the spring; this is too bad. However, you shall know more when I have ascertained his intentions.

“I shall now take to my poem, and do something, I hope, that will place me above the vulgar herd both of worldlings and of critics; but you shall hear from me again, when I get among the maids of Cashmere, the sparkling springs of Rochabad, and the fragrant banquets of the Peris. How much sweeter employments these than the vile joke-making I have been at these two months past!

“Best love to dear Lady Donegal from hers and yours ever,

“THOMAS MOORE.”

From Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“Aberystwith, Sept. 19. 1811.

“My dear Moore,

“Many, many thanks for your very kind letters. I was indeed very anxious; but you have removed all my fears, and I wish you joy from my heart. If you had escaped, I should have felt some alarm. When bowmen and riflemen erect butts to shoot at, we, who are butts ready-made, must not expect to escape; and though the arrows are poisoned, it is our own fault if they raze the skin. To succeed is no little crime in the eyes of those who fail; and those who cannot climb will endeavour to pull you down by the skirts. The only thing that surprised me was your account of Arnold’s terms. Had you no conception of them till it was too late? With regard to publishing, you are the best judge. If the dialogue is murdered on the stage, should not it do itself justice in the closet? But consult your own feelings, and you will be sure to act right. Only, if you publish, would not Longman be the best man to deal with?

“Your little history of your own and X’s feelings on the occasion interested me much; but, thanks be to Heaven, all is over, and you are both alive and well. The music, I have no doubt, will amply repay you, and, I hope, extricate you completely from C's clutches. I shall be delighted to hear that you are worshipping fire and committing every extravagance in those regions of the sun.

"In a fortnight I hope to see you, and to see and hear what, I am very sure, you calumniate most vilely. Here I am just now on the sea-shore, and though nothing but Welsh is talked under the window, I live on very comfortably. Last week I made a little excursion into North Wales, and travelled round Snowdon, who revealed himself in great pomp on the occasion. My ears are still full of Welsh harps and mountain torrents.

"Ever yours,

"SAMUEL ROGERS.

"I slept a night at Wm. Madocks's. He is a great lord in his little city of Tre-Madoc,—has built a church, and a market-place, and a town-hall, and a square, and a street, where the sea roared a year or two ago; and this week holds an Tysteddford, or Meeting of Bards. The comet is very brilliant here, and every evening makes a brilliant path across the water."

From Samuel Rogers, Esq.

"Aberystwith, Sept. 20. 1811.

"My dear Moore,

"You know me and my faults too well to be much surprised at my long silence; and now (forgive me for my selfishness) I am not sure I should have written at all, but to make you write, and tell me something about yourself, &c. What have you done? Is the dramatic concluded and the epic begun? Are you now in a pavilion on the banks of the Tigris? or, in the shape of a nightingale, singing love-songs to a Rose in the gardens of Cashmere? As for me, I have been visiting an elder brother who, many years ago, retired from the world, to cultivate his own patrimonial fields and read his Homer under the shade of his own beech-trees near Hagley. His farm is beautiful, very woody and uneven, and full of little dingles and copses and running waters. A green lane, a mile long, leads to the house, which overlooks the fields. The prospect, enlivened with a few cottages, is bounded by a chain of hills, which affect almost to be mountains; and beyond these appear, every now and then, over their heads, such as are fully entitled to the name, and as blue as a blue atmosphere can make them. From one circumstance or another, it is now some years since I came there: his girls, now very lovely, are nearly grown up, and I am half tempted to get up every time they come into the room. It makes me feel very old, and very melancholy too sometimes. I think of the time when they used to sit on my knee and tease me to tell them stories of the world they were about to enter into. The other day it was proposed to dine in a wood; and I was surprised, when I came, to find everything set out there in a hermitage. The tables, the chairs, napkins, knives, and eatables all carried on their heads and under their arms; not a servant assisted. How little, said I to myself, when I saw them smiling over their work, would the fine ladies in town be inclined to think of such a thing! But we are now all transported to a very different scene,—a bleak, mountainous sea-shore in Wales. How long I shall remain here I cannot say,—probably a month; so pray write me a line in the course of a fortnight at least. Rebuke me by setting me a better example. I have received a letter from Mrs. Grattan, and, as I am writing a line to her and Lady D., shall inclose both under cover to G. My book, I fear, is at a stand-still. I have written but a very few lines, and those of no moment. Some time or other you shall see them. I hope to be in town in about five weeks.

“ Ever yours,

“ SAMUEL ROGERS.

“ I am very anxious about your proceedings with Arnold, and am continually looking out for an opera. Have you given it a name?

“ My sister desires to be very kindly remembered to you.”

To James Corry, Esq.

“ Thursday, Oct. 24. 1811.

“ My dear Corry,

“ Now for it—I am quite ready for you—proof sheets—play bills—I’ll dash through all with you. Seriously, my dear fellow, though not altogether désavoué, yet I am just now in want of an interposing relief to more serious studies, and I know of nothing better for the purpose than our Kilkenny undertaking; so don’t spare me, but as many tons burden as your franks are allowed to carry, freight away without any remorse,—the linen trade will be all the better for it.

“ You perceive I have been qualifying myself still further for the task by putting on the sock in writing as well as acting, but I am sorry to say I feel it rather slipshod on me. You will see a resurrection (when you read me) of many jokes that were tolerable in their lifetime, but which wear rather ‘a ghastly smile’ in their present cold-blooded reappearance. One of those revenans you will recognise as having once given some signs of life in a letter to you; but there are many of them which not all the efforts of the Humane Society (and the audiences are very much of this description) could warm back into any respectable state of animation.

“I wish you would tell Dalton that, tolerant as I am (from sympathy) of those who will not write letters to their friends, yet (like Mr. Perceval, &c.) there is a certain point at which my toleration stops; and Dalton is degenerating into such very licentious silence, that, with all my liberality upon the subject, I must say that he abuses his privilege.

“There is no news that you’d care to hear of, except that the Prince is to have a villa upon Primrose Hill, connected by a fine street with Carlton House, and is so pleased with this magnificent plan, that he has been heard to say ‘it will quite eclipse Napoleon.’ It is feared too that Mr. Perceval, by this and other ‘primrose paths of dalliance,’ is finding his way very fast to the Regent’s heart.

“When you write, or rather when you research, do not forget that some little biographical traits of our brotherhood would form a very useful feature of your investigation.

“Ever most truly yours,

“THOMAS MOORE.”

From Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“Holland House, Friday morning, Nov. 1811.

“My dear Moore,

“I am very happy indeed to think that an affair conducted in a manner so honourable to both parties has terminated so pleasantly *, though I cannot but think you have been a little reserved to me on the occasion. We have long admired Lord Byron as a writer. His manliness and candour in this correspondence must now excite our esteem for him as a man; and if I can, by introducing myself as a peacemaker where indeed there is nothing but peace already, acquire the honour of his acquaintance, I shall think myself very fortunate, and greatly obliged to you.

“ If I might, I would leave my name at his door; but perhaps you can negotiate the business for me; and I cannot say how happy I shall be if his Lordship will do me the honour to dine with me in St. James’s Place. Any day but to-morrow will suit me perfectly.

“ Ever yours,

“ SAMUEL ROGERS.

“ Thomas Moore, Esq.”

To James Corry, Esq.

“ Wednesday, Nov. 4. 1811.

“ My dear Corry,

“ I have only time at this moment to thank you for all your communications, great and small, and to tell you that I have sent the covers of your packets to Sir Francis Burdett, that he may make a speech about them at the opening of Parliament. I suppose you have heard that during the Talents’ administration Windham received an express from Lord Grey, which made a great sensation in every town it passed through, but which turned out (upon opening the gilt despatch-box) to be the annonce

* In allusion to the hostile correspondence between Moore and Byron.

of a battle between Gulley and Gregson, sent by the Foreign Secretary to the War Secretary ‘upon public service.’ I thought of this when I received your Linen Board enclosures. What an enormous book you mean to make of it! μεγα βιβλιον μεγα κακον. A great book is a great evil. (N.B. writing Greek when a man is in a hurry!) Seriously, I fear we must either reject much of the printed materials, or considerably diminish the scale upon which it is executed. Such a heavy book upon such a light subject would be quite an anomaly. Think what can be done to reduce its corpulence; for really it rather terrifies my little muse to be wedded to such a Mr. Lambert of a book as it must necessarily be when preface, plates, &c. are added to its present bulk. I find I have only time now to throw out these few hints; but I shall write more fully in a day or two.

“Your kindness in thinking of my interests gives me the sincerest pleasure and gratitude. What you and Dalton were talking of (an author’s night) would be not only serviceable, but flattering to me; and I should like to be surprised with such a favour exceedingly. As you have been good enough to ask how you can serve me, the following quere will show that I take you at your word: What are the longest dates at which you could get two bills upon Power in Dublin cashed for me, being for the sum of one hundred pounds each? I wish to know this immediately (though I ought to have prefaced it with another question, which is, whether you would get them cashed for me at any date). I want the money for the approaching Christmas, and he has this sum at my disposal, but wants as long a shot for paying his bills as Acres did for killing his man. So pray, without mentioning the circumstance to any one, let me know what you can do without inconveniencing yourself, and believe me to be,

“ Most hastily, but as sure as if I were slow,

“ Yours,

“ T. MOORE.”

To James Corry, Esq.

“ Friday, Dec. 13. 1811.

“ My dear Corry,

“ Many thanks for your kindness in offering so promptly to translate my English into Spanish, ‘cum notis,’ &c. &c. The sooner the version is done, the better; I enclose the original.

“ Though Power is of such longue haleine in the bill way, I think the number of resting-places you offer him cannot but satisfy him.

“ Give my very best remembrances to Mrs. Corry; and tell her, though given in a letter upon money-matters, they have not a tinge of the dross about them.

“ I shall keep my dramatics for another letter.

“ Ever yours, in haste,

“ THOMAS MOORE.

“ Send the enclosed letter to Power. By-the-bye, I forgot to ask whether your powers of import (in the franking way) are as unlimited as your export privileges; because a friend of mine has a young child he wants to frank over.”

From Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“Keswick, 1812.

“My dear Moore,

“Many thanks for your kind letters, and your indulgent reception of my mountain verses, which you could not expect to find so smooth and polished as if they had come from the South. I am rejoiced to hear that you found the madonna and child alive after so long an absence; and hope from my heart that the first is recovering. You do me a little injustice when you think I did not continue in my former sentiments; but I believe on second thoughts you were right, for I can assure you I think better and better of the person you mentioned; and the account I wrote to my brother and sister has given them no small interest in her welfare. On the shores of Windermere I found Sir James Mackintosh, who was indeed the first to recommend Little’s Poems to my serious perusal. I found him again at Keswick; and my Journal, could I send it to you, would be a tissue of voyagings and clamberings, and hair-breadth escapes. In two or three days I shall remove to Lowther. * * * I have nothing to add but a few craggy lines; and, indeed, to get your opinion of them is one great reason for my inflicting on your patience this unprofitable and expensive epistle. The first eight will stand as you tolerated them.

“Oh, I was there, one of that gallant crew; *
And saw, and wonder’d whence his power He drew;
Nor then of his great Adversaries knew,
Then uninstructed.—But my sand is run,
And the night coming . . . and my task not done!

“You will remember that my Monk is in articulo

* “Voyage of Columbus,” canto iii.

mortis, and may, therefore, when thinking of his situation, be allowed to stammer a little. By the night, I mean that ‘in which no man can work.’ I thought these lines would serve pretty well to introduce their excellencies, the Devils, in the third Canto; and as Sharp and Wordsworth particularly like the last couplet, I have, though I don’t quite like it, retained it, not finding a better. - This change of person, from your humble servant to the monk, will, I think, render the poem a little more dramatic, and occasion the following alterations:—

“Canto I. — Sung ere his coming, and by Heav’n designed.

“Canto VI., last page. — At length among us came an unknown Voice!

“Canto VIII., second page. — Slowly to land the sacred cross we bore.

“Canto X. — Who now danc’d forth to strew His path with flowers,
And hymn His welcome, &c.

“‘Then uninstructed’ is a pause I rather like; ‘my task not done’ is, I will confess, not in my manner, though, I think, rather Miltonic, and such as would please me in blank verse. I am afraid I should have written, ‘ere my task is done.’ But those critics are so decided against me, I have knocked under.

“I am delighted to hear that your Muse is not daunted by the discouragement she thought she met with. I can assure you I am as much in love with her as I can be with a lady without flesh and blood. Pray remember me very affectionately to the two ladies of your house, and believe me to be,

“Ever yours, most truly,

“SAMUEL ROGERS.”

To his Mother.

“ Friday, 1812.

“ My dearest Mother,

“ I am very anxious indeed at not hearing from home. You were ill when Ellen wrote last, and our dear Kate was on the eve of her trouble ; on both of which accounts I am very solicitous about hearing from you. Bessy is getting, I think, a good deal better, and very much, I believe, by the means of milk and chocolate. I know milk does not agree with you, darling Mother ; but I should suppose chocolate would, and it is very strengthening.

“ Did you see the account of the ‘ Religious Liberty ’ Dinner at Kilkenny, where they gave, ‘ Thomas Moore, and the Union of Patriotism and Poetry ? ’ They so seldom do me justice in Ireland, that I rather suspect I was indebted to a man from London, who was there, for this compliment.

“ Make Ellen write immediately, with full particulars both about yourself and Kate ; and believe me, my dearest Mother, “ Ever your own,

“ TOM.”

To his Mother.

“ Tuesday, 1812.

“ My dearest Mother,

“ I went and dined at the Park yesterday. Lord Moira seems to think that this late victory, instead of confirming the Ministers in their seats, will rather undermine them by tending to increase the power of Lord Wellesley, who goes hand in hand with him; but I fear he is too sanguine. He has set about retrenching at last most manfully, and has dismissed no less than twenty servants. There is no doubt but in a few years this system will set him on his legs again.

“I am going to dine with the Stories of Lockington. They offered to send their carriage for Bessy if she would come; but her back gets so weak and painful after dinner, that it is uncomfortable to her to go into society.

“I am beginning to be anxious about a letter from home, and hope, my darling Mother, that you have no returns of your summer illness. Yesterday and to-day are, at last, true warm summer with us.

“Ever your own,

“TOM.”

To Miss Dalby.

“Oakhanger, Wednesday, 1812.

“My dear Mary,

“I arrived here the latter end of last week, and immediately set out upon a cottage hunt to Wales, ‘the cheapest country in England!’ How much people are deceived at a distance! — its cheapness is all a flim-flam, and nothing remains as it used to be, but its glorious scenery.

“We are now packing up to retrace our old steps home towards Derbyshire, &c. &c., and if we are not stopped short by some pretty resting-place near Ashbourn, you may perhaps see us back among the Kegworthies once more. At all events, I think, we shall be very near you.

* * * * *

“I write this, by command of Bessy, who is buried in trunks, packing-cases, &c. I fear she has been a sad truant in the way of letter-writing since I left her.

“ Ever yours,
T. MOORE.”

To his Mother.

“Kegworth, 1812.

“ My dearest Mother,

“ Lord Moira is appointed Governor-General of India, and he and Lady Loudoun, with the three eldest children, are to sail in January next. I cannot possibly tell at present what effect this very important event will have on my destinies, but it appears to me the worst way in the world that he could be provided for for my interests, though the only way by which his own could be served in the present state of politics, and the ruined condition of his finances. What he will propose to me I cannot imagine, but they are coming down here in a fortnight, and then I shall know all. I wrote a letter from Cheslyn’s to you by Friday’s post, and I hope you received it; it was to say that my dearest Father might depend upon my assisting him through his December difficulties. I only want to know the sum he will require, and the time.

“ We passed five days at the High Sheriff’s very gaily, eating turtle, playing, singing, and dancing.

“ I am quite in a fidget about Lord Moira’s intentions, and shall be till I see him.

“ Ever my darling Mother,

“ Your own
“ TOM.

“ I hope soon to hear that dear Kate is well over her crisis.”

From James Corry, Esq.

“Lurgan Street, May 16. 1812.

“My dearest Moore,

“I received your letter the day before yesterday, and have been till this hour so much occupied in bustling through the arrear of business that had accumulated in my absence, as to be unable to devote an earlier hour to the duties of friendship. Other men may talk of their papers, but mine presented such a heap, that had they taken a frolic in their head to make an attack upon my own, another great man would have been lost to the country.

“I participate most fully and most warmly in almost all the feelings which seem to have had possession of you while writing your last letter. I say almost all your feelings, for I will not pain you in thinking that either your honour or your happiness were, or can ever be, in danger. No, my friend; you have done too much to advance and establish both to have any fears about either; and unless you be the most severe and unreasonable observer of yourself, you must ever have in your own heart a rich and most abundant source of happy, enviable, honourable feeling. Macte tuâ virtute.

“I have seen nothing yet of the bill, but don't make yourself uneasy about the provision for it; above all, my dear friend, consider thatt his bill is only to get quit of a debt, which you very properly would not suffer to remain due to a cold and taunting creditor, the language of whose condescending acquiescence in your request is infinitely more insulting than he could have possibly rendered a refusal; whereas, my proposition to you was to make me your banker, when you wanted money in advance, instead of unprofitably anticipating the fruits of your talents among these tradesmen. But let us not be too angry with your correspondent: the magnitude of an offence is only to be measured by its motive, and this man, perhaps, instead of thinking that his letter was calculated to offend you, thought, perhaps, he was writing a kind one; so let it pass. Some one told me that Carpenter was considered among the literary men not to be very liberal in money matters, which made me glad that you had formed another connection with one who was thought to be more friendly. But ‘call you this backing your friends?’ I could have wished that your musical publisher (if Power’s personal kindness had not naturally attached you to him) were a man of more extensive dealing. I may be very hard to please, but the spring of my fastidiousness is a desire to see your talents a source of the greatest profit as well as honour to you, and to see them, too, introduced into the world under the best possible advantages.

“ It occurs to me that I could render your future drafts on me most acceptable in England, by opening some correspondence (through La Souche’s bank) with a London house, where I could make them payable. If this be necessary, tell me. If you shall have occasion, as I trust you will, to write to me about our book, or Carden, or politics, or what will be infinitely more acceptable to me, about Mrs. Moore or yourself, don’t say anything about money in your letters, but put that subject into a separate bit of paper; for the interest which your friends here take in everything that happens to you would make them anxious to hear this and see that, and there is no third person in the world has any right to know anything of our private arrangements. By the by, our dear friend Richard Power and I had much conversation on our journey home about you; and in every word he said his friendship was apparent. I thought I saw an anxiety in him to open a conversation with me about our both speaking to you, in the honest freedom of friendship, upon this same cursed subject of money,—this ‘bane and antidote.’ But my own feelings taught me (long before I received your instructions to that effect) the necessity of preserving what we had said to each other sub mille rosis, even from him; and I only mention the circumstance now to prevent your thinking my attachment to you capable of any extent, to which his own love for you would not lead him.

“ We are all looking upon each other here in speechless and horrible surprise at the late occurrence in London. The private virtues of the late Mr. Perceval will insure to his memory the most lively and sincere respect, even among those who most condemned his measures.

“ Mrs. Corry entreats that Mrs. Moore will accept the assurance of her warmest respect; and she unites with me, my dear friend, in wishing you both many years of health and happiness.

“ JAMES CORRY.

“ P. S. — The letter is inclosed.”

To James Corry, Esq.

“ Késworth, Leicestershire, Friday, May 19. 1812.

“ My dear Corry,

“ We have at last got down to our country retreat, where I have no doubt of surmounting all my difficulties. If we had staid much longer in town, the curiosity to see ‘ Moore’s wife,’ combining with the kindness of my friends, would have ruined us. She was asked to the three most splendid assemblies in London, and Lady Lansdowne's disappointment at her not going to hers was quite diverting. I know all this will give you pleasure, my dearest Corry. What are we to expect next after the late horrors in London? Some change may take place in politics now, but I build no longer upon such phantasies. Ever yours, with best regards,

“ T. MOORE.

“ Mr. Corry.”

To William Gardiner, Esq.

“Kegworth, June 24. 1812.

“ Dear Sir,

“ The more you do me the honour of valuing the assistance you expect from me, the more I lament my thoughtlessness in offering it; for I ought to have recollected (when Miss Dalby told me that you wished some verses of mine) that I am no longer a free agent in the disposal of my writings,—at least of those connected with music,—having given, by a regular deed, the monopoly of all such productions of mine to the Messrs. Powers of London and Dublin. These legal trammels were so new to my muse, that she has more than once forgotten herself, and been near wandering into infidelity, very much, I assure you, from the habit of setting no price upon her favours; but I think you will agree with me that it is worth while keeping her within bounds, when I tell you that the reward of her constancy is no less than five hundred a year during the time stipulated in the deed. For not complying with your request I need offer no better apology; but for inconsiderately promising what I could not perform I know not what I can say to excuse myself, except that (and believe me I speak sincerely) the strong wish I felt to show my sense of your merits made me consult my inclination rather than my power; and it was not till I had actually begun words to one of your airs that I recollected the faux pas I was about to commit.

“ I thank you very much for the sermons*, which I am reading with great pleasure, and I beg you to believe me, very sincerely yours,

“ THOMAS MOORE.”

To James Corry, Esq.

“ Monday, June 29. 1812.

“ My dear Corry,

“ I have waited for your post-liminious letter till I am out of patience, and though I doubt whether this will catch you in Dublin, yet it shall take its chance; and the first thing I feel impatient to express is my very sincere sorrow at the account which you give me of Mrs. Corry's health. I was not a little glad to hear, however, that Cheltenham was recommended to her, as it gives us some faint chance of seeing you both in our humble mansion at Kegworth. Pray bring her. I think it would do her good to see us so happy; and Bessy shall be her handmaid and nurse, and smile her into health again.

“ I am afraid your plan of a short season at Kilkenny will not do. So few of your staunch sitters-out will think it worth while to go for that short period; and, then, it is too narrow a mark also for your chance visitors to hit:

* Sermons by Robert Hall.

when they had the space of three weeks they were sure to make some part of it convenient to them, the least intervention of business now will make them give it up as hopeless; however, you may try, it will add a few pages more to my book, and if I have to record a failure (quod Deus avertet!) it will produce a variety which I did not expect.

“ Politics are, as you say, going to the Devil. I don’t know what to make of my friend Lord Moira’s conduct. A sword when put into the water will look crooked, and the weak medium of Carlton House may produce an appearance of obliquity even in Lord M——. But both the sword and he, I trust, are as bright and straight as ever. God bless you.

“ Ever yours,
“ T. MOORE.”

From Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“ July 3. 1812.

“ My dear Moore,

“ Your letters, as full of happiness as kindness, give me great pleasure. I received your last when I was sitting here after dinner in a quartett with Jekyll, Lord Byron, and Sir George Beaumont. Oh! that she and yourself could have made the four six. But somehow or other I would rather have you both to myself under a green hedge, or by a brook-side, where one might talk nonsense, and such nonsense as one likes best. Pray tell her I would not deprive her of her amusement for the world — only tell her she must not be too happy at it. I myself mean to figure as an angler, sooner or later, though I dislike the definition not a little, — a rod with a worm at one end, and a fool at the other. Your couplet is sanctified by high authority — Eloisa to Abelard — and is not only pardonable, but most beautiful! As for me, I am just finishing the out-set of Columbus; in a few days he and I are to be on the great ocean. To-morrow night I shall be tossed literally, in a mail coach to Glasgow. So pray, pray for me. I hope to visit the Dunmores, and look at the Scotch mountains, from the highest of which I shall pen an epistle to you, my dear Moore. Lord Byron was to have gone part of the way with me, but, alas, his occupations are very different just now. Last night I opened the street door to a knock, between 12 and 1, the servants being in bed. It was a message from him, to offer to take me to a masquerade. Lord Moira, in the kindest manner, had asked me to Donnington, and I had accepted it,—my motive I need not mention to you; but Knight, with whom I am to travel in the north, is now on the road to Glasgow, and I have no alternative but to fly.

“ Ever yours,

“ SAMUEL ROGERS.

“ Here I am still, my dear Moore, and last night I heard Lady Hamilton sing ‘ Friend of my Soul,’ and ‘ Go where Glory,’ to the Regent. He asked ‘ whose the last was,’ and she answered, ‘ Moore’s,’ breaking out into a eulogy on the ‘ Irish Melodies.’ Well, now I have changed my plans. You may thank yourself for it, for you are the cause. On Saturday I leave town, and on Sunday evening I hope to raise the dust at Kegworth, and raise a dish of tea (remember I eat no suppers). So pray provide a bed for me at the inn, or under your own roof, as may be most convenient. I mean to stay six and thirty hours with you, my dear Moore, and I must, I suppose, make my bow at Donnington. Pray go with me there.

“ Lord Byron complains bitterly of your silence to him.”

To Lady Donegal.

“Kegworth, 1812.

“ I went over and dined with the Moiras yesterday, and saw poor Lord M. in his Star and Garter, which he sat down to dinner in, with a couple of parsons and myself, to celebrate the Prince’s birth-day! They leave this, I believe, next week, and it is a fine thing to see at last the manly resignation with which he is disbanding whole regiments of servants and horses, and reducing his expenditure to a scale which can hardly exceed two or three thousand a year. I feel most deeply interested about him; and both he and she have given me new cause for the warmest gratitude by their kind attentions to Bessy. Rogers and I had a very pleasant tour of it, though I felt throughout it all, as I always feel with him, that the fear of losing his good opinion almost embitters the possession of it, and that though, in his society, one walks upon roses, it is with constant apprehension of the thorns that are among them.

* * * * *

He left me rather out of conceit with my poem, ‘Lalla Rookh’ (as his fastidious criticism generally does), and I have returned to it with rather an humbled spirit; but I have already once altered my whole plan to please him, and I will do so no more, for I should make as long a voyage of it as his own ‘Columbus’ if I attended to all his objections. His general opinion, however, of what I have done is very flattering; he only finds fault with every part of it in detail; and this you know is the style of his criticism of characters—‘an excellent person, but ——’

“ I find my hour draws near, and I have talked so much of Rogers that I have only time to say I hope Tunbridge has made you both as stout as in our best days of Tunbridge happiness.

“ Best love to dear Mary, and believe me,

“ Ever yours,

T. MOORE.”

From Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“ Thursday, Aug. 5. 1812.

“ My dear Moore,

“ I hope you came safe to your own door on the wings of the wind, and found B. and N. well and happy. Pray remember me kindly to both, as well as to the Magpie, and tell me how the first is. As for me, I set off at twelve in a stage, with an old man in a night-cap, — slept four hours at Manchester in a horrible inn, and proceeded at one in the morning by the mail to Kendal and Windermere Lake, where I now am among mountains. Here are Sharp, and Wordsworth, and Mackintosh, who desire to be remembered to you. I have had little leisure, but here are the verses, as I threatened. Pray give me your opinion forthwith in a day or two, directing to me under cover, to Richard Sharp, Esq., Low Wood Inn, near Kendal, Cumberland.

“ In a week I shall go to Keswick, where I hope to see Southey, and remember you to him. I will write again. All you have done, and all you think of doing, rises every hour in my mind.

"CANTO III.

AN ASSEMBLY OF EVIL SPIRITS.

Tho' chang'd my cloth of gold for amice grey —
 In my spring-time, when every month was May,
 With hawk and hound I cours'd away the hour,
 Or sung my roundelay in Lady's bower.
 And though my world be now a narrow cell,*
 (Renounc'd for ever all I love so well,)
 Tho' now my head be bald, my feet be bare,
 And scarce my knees sustain my book of prayer,
 Oh! I was there — one of that gallant crew †—
 Nor of His great, great adversaries knew,
 Then uninstructed. But my sand is run —
 And the night coming—and my task not done.
 'Twas in the deep, immeasurable cave

VARIATIONS.

Oh! I was there among the gallant crew —
 Nor his great Foe, his great Preserver knew,
 Then uninstructed.

Nor then of his great adversaries knew — my task undone ere my task is done"

From Samuel Rogers, Esq.

"Keswick, Aug. 21. 1812.

"My dear Moore,

"I have now spent a week alone at this place, walking for the most part of the time in a place so wild and solitary and awful that I think you would have knelt in your devotions. It was among some old oaks in a crevice of the great mountain of Skiddaw, a cataract leaping with

* Many of the first discoverers ended their lives in a cloister. See Bernal Diaz, and other contemporary writers.

† "Voyage of Columbus."

fury from rock to rock by my side. Only two little girls did I ever see there, and they stopped at the sight of me, and made me such long and low reverences, with looks so full of awe, that I began to think myself the deity of the place.

“ There it occurred that something was necessary at the beginning of the poem; and as you are now my Magnus Apollo, I must inflict my effusion, as before, upon you. I have two or three readings, and you must tell me your opinion, under cover to the Earl of Lonsdale, Lowther, near Penrith, where I hope to find an answer to my last affliction or infliction. Horner passing through Keswick, in his way to Edinburgh, I have procured a frank, so that I am now not drawing upon you for pelf as well as patience.

“ By the way, it strikes me that introducing the pronouns ‘us’ and ‘we,’ as I suggested in my last, will clash with the lyrical style of the poem, and give the abruptnesses a pompous and unnatural air. Perhaps I had better compound by letting my monk only appear in these introductory passages. Que pensez vous?

“ Pray forgive me, and pray give my love to the two ladies under your roof, though I have not quite forgiven them, the one for breaking her promise (of going to Matlock), and the other for being the cause of it.

“ Yours ever,

“ SAMUEL ROGERS.

“ I am sorry I have no better paper, but my stock is exhausted, and the stationer of Keswick has shut up shop and gone to the sea for a little bathing.

“ Say, who first pass’d the portals of the West,
And the great Secret of the Deep possess’d?

Who first the standard of His Faith unfurl'd
On the dread confines of an unknown world?
Sung ere his coming—and by Heav'n design'd
To lift the veil that cover'd half mankind.
Oh! I would tell of Him!—My hour draws near—
And He will prompt me when I faint with fear.
—Alas! He hears me not! He cannot hear!

VARIATION.

Him would I now invoke! My hour draws near—
And he will strengthen me when faint with fear.”

From Lady Donegal.

“Tunbridge Wells, August 28. 1812.

“I can never sufficiently admire the reformation that something has wrought in you; for, instead of scolding and reproaching you for never writing to us, I have to make my excuses, as well as I can, for having let two letters of yours remain so long unanswered. Bessy, I conclude, is the reformer, and good luck to her in the undertaking. Your description of Rogers is too like him. How vexatious it is that a man who has so much the power of pleasing and attaching people to him should mar the gifts of nature so entirely by giving way to that sickly and discontented turn of mind, which makes him dissatisfied with every thing, and disappointed in all his views of life. Yet he can feel for others; and, notwithstanding this unfortunate habit he has given himself of dwelling upon the faults and follies of his friends, he really can feel attachment; and to you I am certain he is attached, though I acknowledge that the thorns sometimes make one wish to throw away the roses, and forego the pleasure to avoid the pain. But with all his faults I like him, though I know he spares me no more than any of his other dear friends. I feel great compassion for Lord Moira, yet wonder how he could ever have expected any thing from the Prince but what he has met with from him, for he knew him; and, in knowing him, how could he hope any good from such a head and heart? He was, however, so gracious as to ask me a second time to Carlton House, though he was not so gracious as to speak to me when he saw me there; this, however, for particular reasons, must rest entre nous. We staid in London till the 17th of August, when the workmen turned us out of the house; for we are making great alterations, and I grieve to say that you will hardly know your old haunts again. The house is to be painted and papered from head to foot, and the old crimson couch is to change its colour. So you must come to town this winter, or you can no longer see us in your mind's eye; and I would not give a fig for a friend, or a poet, who could rest satisfied with mere imagination. But I am afraid you are both so horridly comfortable, and so much pleased with the country and with each other, that our chance of seeing you is but small. On our first arrival here we had all sorts of disasters. We have, however, got the better of them by degrees, and we are comfortably settled in a bow-window house on the top of Mount Sion, where we lead quiet sober lives, and scandalise our neighbours by our early hours. The knowing ones say, with a significant look, that 'people do not go to bed at ten o'clock for nothing.' And they are right, for we walk ourselves off our legs all day, and are very glad to go to sleep as early as we can at night. The pantiles were put into an uproar last Tuesday by the arrival of the Princess of Wales on a visit to the Perrys. She brought Lady C.

Campbell and Mrs. and Miss Rawdon with her, but not a man did she bring, or could she get here for love or money, except Sir Philip Francis and old Berry, who, egad, liked the fun of gallanting her about, and enjoyed himself more than the fair daughters did, who were in a grand fuss, and were forsaken in their utmost need by Beaux their former suppers fed, and had to amuse her, as well as they could, with the assistance of a few women that she did not care about.

“ Charles Moore is to come here next week, for our consolation. In the mean time there is not a soul in the place that we care about except the Berrys, and now and then thorns are to be met with in that quarter too, but with them many amiable and friendly feelings. But I hardly know where one can turn without meeting with thorns, except to you; and this is no compliment, for it is what Mary and myself often say; and I think, if it were possible for us ever to feel disappointed in you, that we should hang our harp upon a tree, and sing the song of friendship no more.

“ Now write to us soon, and tell us how you are both going on in this wicked world. You say that you are about something, and that Rogers has discouraged you with his ifs and his buts; but pray trust to your own judgment, and do not fine and refine your work away to please him. What is the subject? and when is it likely to see light? Mary’s love, Philly’s, and mine to you, and kindest remembrances to Psyche.

From Leigh Hunt, Esq.

“ 37. Portland Street, Oxford Road, Sept. 13. 1812.

“ My dear Sir,

“ I am sure you will pardon my delay in answering your very kind and acceptable letter, when I tell you that I have scarcely been able to put pen to paper, notwithstanding what my public duties forced from me occasionally. My disorder has been a bilious one, of a most annoying and hypochondriac description, so that for weeks together I suffered a kind of waking nightmare,—looking on life, at times, even with a sort of horror, though I knew very well all the while (and this made it worse) that I had nothing to make me unhappy. If I had had a bad conscience to boot, or a sorry taste, or an irresistible appetite for cutlets and noyau, the prince might have concluded himself revenged; but I was not quite so far gone; though of such strange materials are we and our philosophy composed, that a potato or a glass of milk would cause me more trouble than all the princes and attorney-generals put together. However, I am now, thank Heaven, getting better and returning heartily to my books; and one of the first pleasures, which I hasten to seize, is to thank you for your inquiries, and return (if you will allow me) all the cordiality which suggested them.

“ You gratify me much by liking my verses in the ‘Reflector,’ and infinitely more (highly as I value your praise) by ratifying, with your own mouth, the conclusions they had drawn from the character of your later poetry. In this world, where Providence appears to be at work with certain stubborn materials in order to extract eventual good out of evil—perhaps eventual perfection out of an original fatality of frailty—it is of the last importance that all those who can draw to them the delighted attention of their fellow-creatures should be on the best side of things; but I will not trouble you with metaphysics, or throw a sermonising air upon that cause, which you will so well know how to recommend with all its natural graces. I recognised your hand in the ‘Insurrection of the Papers,’ in the ‘Plumassier,’ too, and in several other little pieces since, if I am not mistaken, not excepting a parody of Horace the other day. In pieces like the last, the musical flow of the composition would betray you, even if you could get rid of your lightness of wit and felicity of adaptation. You rejoice me by the promise you have thrown out to the ‘Examiner’ on this head. During the vacation of Parliament, and in the absence of better original matter, I have been rummaging my portfolio myself, and shall have a succession of little effusions, poetical and otherwise, as well as the ‘Chronicle;’ so I give you fair warning. This morning I have published an imitation of Catullus’s ‘Acme and Septimius,’* as a sort of amende honorable for a common-place parody which I made when a youngster; and next Sunday there will be an improved republication of a version which I made of another delicious little thing of his, the ‘Return Home to Sirmio.’† I choose these felicitous originals—whether I succeed in them or no—as studies of expression, having been over head and ears for some time in styles, and rhythms, and structures of verse, on account of a poem which I am now writing, and which, I hope, may possess a more serious claim on your approbation than anything which has hitherto had the good fortune to please you.

* Carmen 45.

† Carmen 31.

“ But I am talking here most ungallantly of myself. Allow me sincerely to congratulate you on your marriage, the blessings of which state I have experienced and respected, without losing a jot of my proper feeling for what is amatory. I had heard of it before, as you guess; but I have so been in the habit, for years past, of hearing all sorts of reports, and finding them untrue, that I neither believed nor disbelieved it. I am contented to wait for these matters till the parties, who know most on the subject, choose to tell me themselves. However, since you have raised my curiosity, I hope you think yourself bound to satisfy it. I see so much heart in you (which has indeed encouraged me to use this freedom of language), that I am persuaded, the more I know of it, the more I shall wish to know. Pray offer my respects and good wishes to Mrs. Moore, and tell her that we shall look to her in future for a proper account of you in the literary world. To be a father must be a delight as great as it is new to you, if I can judge from what my own feelings were when my first was born; for you must no longer talk of my child, since I have two boys now instead of one. You say you can furnish a ‘companion picture’ for one of them, but can you furnish a wife? for you do not say whether it is a boy or girl, and this is a great oversight in matters of grave family communication. I envy your library, and should envy your rural retirement, were I not upon the look-out for some such place myself in the neighbourhood of Hampstead,—a spot of which I am particularly fond. Pray write to me when you have an hour to spare. Mrs. Hunt desires her best respects and congratulations, and she is quite as sincere on these occasions as, dear Sir, yours very truly,

“LEIGH HUNT.”

From Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“Hamilton, Oct. 22. 1812.

“My dear Moore,

“Letters being once more free (would that all mankind were) I seize the first moment to beg you will accept as many thanks as there are miles between us at this moment for your ready compliance with my request, when I troubled you with my rhymes from Keswick vale. Your criticisms were as just as they were friendly, and like yourself; and, though from being obliged to do something I was led to venture in the face of your verdict in one instance, I shall not rest till I have satisfied you and myself too with something better.

“Poor Byron! what I hear and read of his prologue makes me very angry. Of such value is public favour! So a man is to be tried by a copy of verses thrown off perhaps at hazard, and invitâ Minervâ. The same injustice, probably, awaits ‘Rokeby’ if it proves a flash in the pan.

“I was rejoiced to hear you were again at work. I hope you are still so, and as happy as you can be in this world. Happy, indeed, you must be, circumstanced as you are. Pray remember me very affectionately to Psyche. She may say what she will, I must still love her, and I hope you, my dear Moore, will forgive me if I do. ’Tisn’t my fault, but hers. My sister wants to know whether she is still as interesting as we all thought her in town. With regard to your verses, if you like them, you may rely upon it we shall, and I am very sure we shall. To tell you the truth, I had no conception that anybody in so short a time could have so imbued his mind with Eastern literature. Your garments could not have been more fragrant if you had just left a cinnamon grove.

“As for me, I have led a vagabond life since we parted, among lochs and mountains, tartan-plaids, and Erse-songs. Had I found Mary and her little court in Holy-Rood, and had I supped now and then with her and Rizzio in her little chamber there—any night but one—I could scarcely have been better pleased, for no where could I have been received with more kindness than in Scotland. I wrote a letter some time ago to Lady Donegal, but have had no answer; I will hope, however, she and her sister are well. I wait here a day or two in the expectation of seeing Jeffrey, who is coming, as he says, on purpose to see me. He brings Dugald Stewart; and when they go I shall take my flight homewards. Farewell, my dearest Moore, and believe me to be, as ever, yours very affectionately,

“SAMUEL ROGERS.

“Poor Mrs. Pigou! There never was a finer mind, or a more feeling heart. No day has passed away since without my thinking of her.”

To Lord Moira.

(Extract.)

“Kegworth, Nov. 4. 1812.

“My Lord,

“I had the pleasure of hearing of your lordship’s appointment near a week ago from those friends in this neighbourhood to whom it was communicated ; but I did not feel myself authorised to address you upon the subject till I had received the intelligence from those public sources through which it is now known to every one.

“ Though I read the fate of Ireland in your government being withheld from her, and though I think her last, last hope is now leaving her, yet I cannot but congratulate your lordship on being removed to so honourable an appointment, far away from the contemplation of evils which you are not suffered to remedy or even alleviate.

“ THOMAS MOORE.

“ To the Earl of Moira.”

From Lady Donegal.

“ Tunbridge Wells, Dec. 3. 1812.

“ I believe I ought not to rejoice on hearing that you are not going to India with Lord Moira. Yet I cannot, if I was to die for it, look grave upon the occasion. I should look much graver if I were to hear that you were packing and preparing for your departure ; and as the newspapers say that you have been at Donnington lately, I wish you would stir yourself, and tell us if anything upon this subject passed between you and Lord M——, or if he means to negotiate any place for you at home, which he might do, and which would answer much better for you than any appointment he could give you in India, where the expenses are more than adequate to the pay ; and you are such a thoughtless fellow, that, with all Bessy’s preaching and praying, she would never be able to keep you within bounds, where all was extravagance and profusion around you.

“ I am, for all these reasons, quite sure that even a small place at home would be more desirable for you ; and I do not think, exclusive of everything else, that you have health for the East Indies ; and I am selfish enough not to be satisfied with hearing that my friends are happy, I must see it, and enjoy it with them. Now for all these wise and good reasons I sincerely hope to hear that you are not thinking of leaving England.

“ Did you see Rogers when you were in Town ? and is it true that he has at last published his ‘ Columbiad ? ’ If he has, I hope it will be well received, and kindly treated by the reviewers ; for I have a sneaking kindness for him, which gives me an interest in all his little affairs.

“ The gallant gay Lothario of the day has been here also. He is now gone to attend his duty in Parliament and elsewhere, and his family remain here, as does Lady Wellington and her brothers ; but we see nothing of them all, except in our walks, and live very quiet retired sort of lives, such as you would have thought dull enough once ; but Bessy has taught you another story, and you now think that home is a very pretty place, and that one may pass one’s time very agreeably there without the turmoils of a large society. Our kindest remembrances to Bessy. She will think us very free and easy for calling her so familiarly, but we cannot help it ; and I have not time now to make fine speeches on the occasion. Both sisters beg to be affectionately remembered to you. Ever yours most truly and sincerely, &c.

“ B. D.”

From James Perry, Esq.

“Strand, Dec. 4. 1812.

“My dear Sir,

“I am, I must own, extremely surprised at the conduct of the noble Earl (Lord Moira); for I had concluded that his vanity, if not his feeling of necessity, would have led him to importune you to accompany him as his sheet anchor and his standard—as his security and his fame. Your judgment, I think, would have made you decline the invitation, but I had no doubt that it would have been made. Console yourself with the reflection that may be for the best: it will be for the best if it shall make you resolve to draw on the resources and energies of your own mind for treasure and renown. You have only to resolve to be rich, and you will be so. You see the taste is for poetry, and a work from your pen would be seized on at your own price. And, en attendant, I feel infinitely obliged to you for giving me leave to speak to you frankly on this topic. Nothing would give me more pleasure than to have your most cordial and assiduous aid in my paper in a conspicuous department; but that I am aware would not be suitable to your views nor agreeable to your taste. But in the way that you yourself suggest—your occasional contribution of whatever strikes you—will be most acceptable, and shall be held in the strictest confidence, as I do assure you I have hitherto kept your secret most inviolably; and I shall be happy to honour your drafts for 200*l.* a year as an inadequate recompense, but from the enormous expense of the disgusting, though necessary, reports of Parliamentary chattering, I am forced to limit myself to this offer. Of course I can hope only for your égaremens de l'esprit, for the fruits of idleness, the alteratives from severer thought. I am mortified at the idea of your having been suspected as the writer of any of the delectable effusions with which you favoured me; but I can answer for it that it is only surmise, and not information. If I had seen the same morsels in another paper, I should have drawn the same inference—for the delicacy of the tournure, the music of the versification, the fancy of the thoughts, could only be the offspring of your Muse. I do assure you that I have done everything that depended on me for concealment, and the secret of Junius has not been more closely kept than yours. By the by, you know I am under engagement for Lord Eldon's costume. Pray enable me to pay my debt.

“ You think of coming nearer Town. I think from every consideration,—of society, of books, of the incitement of Town, as well as of economy,—it would be better. And if you resolve on it, pray honour Mrs. Perry and me with your company, by making Tavistock House your home in the interval of your settlement. Make our best respects to Mrs. Moore, and believe me to be,

“ My dear Sir,

“ Most faithfully yours,

“ JA. PERRY.

“ P. S. We have great news to-day. Bulletins stating that Bonaparte has suffered almost irreparable losses near Smolensko. I inclose the ‘ Sun.’

“ I have got a frank through the messenger at the House of Commons, from a stranger to us both.”

To James Corry, Esq.

“ Monday, Dec. 30. 1812.

“ My dear Corry,

“ A right merry Christmas to you and yours! You have contributed not a little to enliven mine by the inclosure which accompanied your last letter, amounting to 181*l.* 14*s.* 2*d.*, as well as I can recollect, for the sum is wonderfully ‘mutatus ab illo’ since the day before yesterday.

“ And now to return to our editorial labours, — first premising to you that you are the treasure of treasures in this line of industry, and that you would be worth any money to an omne-editing man like Walter Scott. Indeed, if the linen trade could spare you to literature (where you certainly would be much more at home), I think you and I together might set up such a book manufactory as would leave the Stephenses and Gronoviuses quite behind us. Never was anything so clear and convenient as the arrangement you have made of the papers for me. There are, however, two, I think, wanting (beside those which you marked down as deficient), and I have the memorandum of them among my papers, but not just at hand now, to tell them to you. I wish we could get rid of the prologues and epilogues altogether. I dare say there are not six lines ‘nantes in gurgite vasto’ which are worth saving. I include my own in this denunciation, for they are both very bad, and I think it is much better to let our posterity imagine what sallies of wit and fancy must have been struck out during the Institution, than to embody such a mass of evidence against ourselves to the contrary. In my opinion a slight sketch of the progress of private theatricals in Ireland, a list of the company of Kilkenny for each season, with the plays acted, and the casts of the principal characters; a series of portraits of those chiefly concerned, with brief notices of their talents, &c., would comprise all that could be in the least degree interesting, and would be a much more tasteful monument of our establishment than this ponderous load of play-bills, and this swarm of 'wounded snakes,' that 'drag their slow lengths along' in the form of prologues and epilogues. This, however, is merely my opinion; it makes not the least difference in my part of the business, only that I feel I should be deficient in proper zeal for this undertaking if I did not both think of what would be best, and tell what I think fairly. At the same time I by no means expect that any one of you will agree with me; and indeed, as perhaps the feelings of some of our oldest members might be hurt by the sacrifice of so large a portion of the materials, I by no means press it. All, therefore, I shall suggest is, that as there must be a canister at the tail of the book, it ought to be of as light construction, and as little of a trumpery canister as possible. Selections, perhaps, might be made, and you would find me a true Brutus in this task, for my own children should be the first to go to the block. Talking of my own children, there is a very awkward error of the press in the answer to the Charitable Institutions which I wrote. I do not quite remember the words of the sentence, but it is something like 'whatever difficulties, &c. &c., by your co-operation we were enabled to surmount them,' where the word 'them' is omitted, to the no small mutilation of the grammar and construction. I suppose the same error was in the Kilkenny paper.

“ When you first mentioned the idea of an ‘ author’s night,’ I thought it was merely one of those momentary speculations which flash before one’s eyes and vanish ; but as you seem to be, with true friendly feeling, following up the intention, I think it but fair to tell you that I would by no means accept of it. If Dublin had many such ingredients in its mixture as you, Power, Dalton, and a very few more, I would look upon a tribute of this kind as not only advantageous, but honourable, and should reckon up the ‘ golden opinions’ of such ‘ sorts of men ’ with great pleasure ; but alas, alas ! to lay myself under an obligation to — and —, and to have tickets, ostensibly for my benefit, circulating among the low, illiberal, puddle-headed, and gross-hearted herd of Dublin (that ‘ palavering, slanderous set,’ as Curran once so well described them to me), — this, my dear Corry, would never do. No, no ! a man must indeed think with the often-quoted night-man of antiquity, ‘ bonus odor nummi ex re quâlibet.’ Who would receive it reeking from such uncleanly sources ? I love Ireland, but I despise Dublin ; nor has it one claim on my gratitude (speaking of it as a public) to prevent my doing so. I have never been valued by them as I am here, and I question whether, even in a lucrative point of view, you would not be grievously disappointed in your hopes of making a house for me. My ‘ Melologue’ (which is good writing compared to such a thing as ‘ M. P.’) never, that I know of, drew a soul to the theatre in Dublin. Therefore, pray put it out of your head, my dear friend, and tell Dalton and Power my reasons, at the same time assuring them that I feel as I ought all their goodness in proposing it.

“ I am truly happy to hear that Dalton has got such a comfortable addition to his income. If anything could spoil such a good fellow as Dalton, I think accepting a place from the hands of Wellesley Pole would go near to effect it; but I am convinced his heart is place-proof, which, in these times, is saying a good deal for it. Your description of the Pole's turning towards the milky way is highly amusing.

“ Well, I have written enough, God knows! so good bye, my dearest Corry, and believe me, “ Ever sincerely yours,

“ THOMAS MOORE.

“ I dined with a party of statesmen yesterday,—Tierney, Ponsonby, Erskine, &c. They all look very blue, and not the Prince's blue, I assure you.

“ I wish you would frank the enclosed letter to Joe Atkinson, Atanna, Ballynakill. He wouldn't thank the angel Gabriel for a letter, if it was not franked.”

To Miss Godfrey.

“ Mayfield Cottage, Thursday night, 1813.

“ We slept in our cottage, for the first time, last night, after having served an ejection on the ghosts, who have been its only occupants for some time past. We have the luck of getting into haunted houses; for our Kegworth mansion, though as matter-of-fact a barn as ever existed, must needs affect the spirituel, and had actually the reputation of being troubled. There is certainly every conveniency here that a ghost could require, and we see nothing like a habitation from our windows, except just the upper part of an old church, which stands at half-a-mile distance among the trees; so that we really are (as our landlord pronounces it) as lural as possible, and I feel quite happy at my emancipation from the methodists and manufacturers that swarmed about us at Kegworth. We are, however, as yet, but very imperfectly settled, and, till I can get my little library up comfortably, the fields are my study; my 'books in the running brooks, sermons in stones,' &c. &c. We have had an exceeding good ridance of our widow, who is about the most trumpery person I ever met with, and the more tiresome and oppressive to us, as we were obliged to seem grateful to her for a vast deal of really very good-natured but, at the same time, very disagreeable civilities. She is romancing about coming to live near us! but I sincerely hope some captain or other may lay hold of her and her jointure, and spare us the pain of cutting so very dear a friend.

"We walked this evening into Ashbourne, and brought back some peas for our supper, which Bessy carried in a little basket upon her arm, as happily and prettily as any market-girl in Derbyshire.

"One of the very few pleasures I look forward to, that do not depend upon myself, is that of hearing frequently from you and dear Mary; so mind you do not disappoint me, and let me hear all the gossip you can collect for me.

"Ever yours.

"Best remembrances to sister Philly.

"T. M.

"Do not tell Rogers you have heard from me till I have time to write to him, which will be in a day or two."

To Miss Godfrey.

“ Mayfield, 1813.

“ I was a good deal relieved from my apprehensions about Lady Donegal by your letter, for though you mention colds, &c., I was afraid, from what Rogers said in his letter, that her old complaint had returned with more violence than usual, as he mentioned that she was obliged to consult Baillie, and I always couple his name with something serious and clinical. But indeed, Rogers himself, in the next line to this intelligence, mentioned having met her at Gloucester House the Saturday preceding; which (unless aqua regalis or royal wish-wash was among the doses prescribed by Baillie), I did not think looked like very serious indisposition. If wishing you both well and happy, and free from all the ills of this life, could in any way bring it about, I should be as good a physician for both your bodies and souls as you could find anywhere. So you insist upon my taking my poem to Town with me? I will, if I can, you may be sure; but I confess I feel rather down-hearted about it. Never was anything more unlucky for me than Byron's invasion of this region, which when I entered it, was as yet untrodden, and whose chief charm consisted in the gloss and novelty of its features; but it will now be over-run with clumsy adventurers, and when I make my appearance, instead of being a leader as I looked to be, I must dwindle into an humble follower—a Byronian. This is disheartening, and I sometimes doubt whether I shall publish it at all; though at the same time, if I may trust my own judgment, I think I never wrote so well before. But (as King Arthur, in ‘Tom Thumb,’ says) ‘Time will tell;’ and in the mean time, I am leading a life which but for these anxieties of fame, and a few ghosts of debt that sometimes haunt me, is as rationally happy as any man can ask for. You want to know something of our little girls. Barbara is stout and healthy, not at all pretty, but very sensible-looking, and is, of course, to be everything that's clever. The other little thing was very ill-treated by the nurse we left her with in that abominable Cheshire, but she is getting much better, and promises to be the prettier of the two. Bessy's heart is wrapped up in them, and the only pain they ever give me is the thought of the precariousness of such treasures, and the way I see that her life depends upon theirs. She is the same affectionate, sensible, and unaffected creature as a mother that she is as a wife, and devotes every thought and moment to them and me. I pass the day in my study or in the fields; after dinner I read to Bessy for a couple of hours, and we are in this way, at present, going through Miss Edgeworth's works, and then after tea I go to my study again. We are not without the distractions of society, for this is a very gay place, and some of the distractions I could dispense with; but being far out of the regular road, I am as little interrupted as I could possibly expect in so very thick a neighbourhood. Thus you have a little panorama of me and mine, and I hope you will like it.

“ Good-bye. Ever yours,

“ T. MOORE.”

To Lady Donegal.

“ Mayfield, 1813.

“ You may be assured that I was anything but angry on reading your kind lecture: the only thing is that I think you quite mistook me, for, as far as I can recollect, my feelings were by no means those of levity when I wrote that letter, and if they wore that air, it was only from the habit one has got of giving a light turn to everything, the present age being so very anti-sentimental that every one is obliged to go in gay masquerade, and ‘no black dominos are admitted’ on any account. As for the rest, I believe you and I differ a little in our opinion of virtue—at least if you think, as you seem to do, that there would be more merit in having lost one’s former propensities than in conquering them: in my mind the struggle makes all the virtue.

“ ‘When the sea is calm
All boats alike show mastership in floating.’

It is he that steers steadily onward, in spite of the surge of passion beneath, and the songs of Sirens around, who deserves the praise of resolution and virtue; and I cannot help thinking that I, poor Scaramouche, here, with all my love of pleasure and of folly as fresh on me as ever, yet leading a life of patriarchal purity, and happy in it, am a much greater hero in virtue than if all my said propensities were gone to sleep, and I had nothing to do but put on my night-cap and snooze quietly by their side. I know you will say that this is a very ticklish situation for poor virtue to be placed in;—but no matter, the more danger the more honour; and bad as it is to go wrong from too much feeling, it is, at least, a duller thing to go right only from the want of it. I have a lovely, pure, and attached wife, and a smiling, rosy, pug-nosed child, one look from whom, if I were in the very claws of Old Nick, would loosen his grasp and restore me to heaven again. And now, having given you one of those open confessions that are as good for the soul, they say, as other aperients are for the body, I must tell you that my book, such as it will be (for various calamities of criticism, anticipation, forestalment, &c., have made it very unlike what it was intended), shall most certainly come out in the course of this spring. What a nice opportunity it would be now, while Jeffrey's in America! When some savage French reviewer died, Bensarade wrote an epigram, which ended,

“ ‘Dieu merci! — Je vais faire imprimer mon livre.’ ”

“ What you tell me about Mackintosh is very delightful, if the compliment does not die, under the editor's bow-string, before it meets the light. So many pretty things have been lately going to happen to me! I was going to be very rich from the American war, and Lord Byron tells me he was going to dedicate the ‘Bride of Abydos’ to me. If you come to that, ‘how do you like the “Bride of Abydos?”’ In the country we never know how we like things till we hear how you like them in London.

“ I have not time for more now. Best love to Mary.

“ Ever yours,

“ T. M.

“ We had a grand ball here the other night, and you cannot imagine the sensation that Bessy excited; her dress was very pretty, and ‘beautiful,’ ‘beautiful,’ was echoed on all sides. I was (as the poet says) as pleased as Punch!

“ The note to Longmans is of some consequence, so pray let it go soon: the twopenny-post will do.”

From Miss Godfrey.

“London, Feb. 22. 1813.

“It is a certain fact, that since I heard from you I have, in my own mind, written you five or six letters, as excellent as ever were penned, though penned they never were. How should they, when I never had a pen in my hand since I sent you off my last little flying reproach? And how could I have a pen in a hand that was never divested of a needle, thread, and thimble, except when I was nursing the sick or conversing with carpenters and upholsterers? This is all as much as to say that I have been very busy; first, preparing to go to Brighton with Lady Shaftesbury; secondly, taking care of Bab, whose illness prevented my leaving town; thirdly, helping to make the furniture, and assisting in putting our house in proper order fit for people to live in. I have still too much to do to allow me to write a long letter, which is so much the better for you, but a short one I must write in answer to yours. Your first letter, after wandering about the world, reached us long after your second. As to Lord M.’s conduct to you, one can have but one opinion of it; and it is better for him that that opinion should not be expressed — it would be only uselessly adding to the weight of censure that he has lately drawn upon himself, for the friend and the statesman appear to be pretty nearly made up of the same weak, miserable materials. All the good points of his character are mined by his weaknesses. And there is something very melancholy in seeing how completely he has outlived all the visionary splendour that so long surrounded his name. We were heartily sorry, however, that you let him off so easily. Why did you not accept his offers, such as they were? it was still keeping up a claim on him. Your answer he will take as a discharge in full; and he satisfies his honour, I dare say, in the reflection that he has made the offer. And, my dear Moore, as to your political opinions, it was very fine to indulge in them and act up to them while there was a distant perspective in so doing of fame or emolument, and at the same time a feeling that the triumph of such opinions, and the success of the party you belonged to, might be conducive to the prosperity of your country. But now when those opinions have less and less influence, and that party less and less consideration, — when your family is increasing, and your wants of course increasing with it, — don't you think prudence should have its turn? Would not your love for your wife, and anxiety for the welfare of your children, reconcile you to some little sacrifice of political opinions? I have a great deal of good reasoning upon this subject in my own mind for you, but there it must remain at present, lest I should tire you without convincing you. I wish we could see you and talk the matter over with you; I should not then despair of sending you back a complete rat. The time of Roman virtue, if such a thing ever existed, is gone by; and why will you remain bolt upright, talking of systems and opinions to people who are only thinking of places and pensions, and only trying to get into power that they may have the full enjoyment of them? Get into place and power whenever you can, and tell a plausible story how a sudden light from heaven shone upon you and convinced you. Your wife and children will be all the better for it, and yourself and your country not a bit the worse. Now that you see what a state of depravity my politics are in, I shall answer your questions regularly. First, we are not both quite well: Bab has been very ill with a very severe epidemic cold and cough. She is now much better, though not yet quite well. Secondly, we retain the kindest remembrance, and the warmest interest, for you and Bessy, of whose confinement we beg you will inform us. We shall be most happy to hear that she gets over it well. We see Rogers often in the morning, but he does not dine here, as we have only one room that we can inhabit at present, and we have not yet dined with him. I sometimes like him very much, and sometimes I think him so given up, body and soul, to the world, and such a worshipper of my Lords and my Ladies that I think it a great waste of any of my little spare kind feelings to bestow them upon him. Love without a coronet over it goes for nothing in his eyes. However, he amuses me, and I had rather be upon kind terms with him than not. Bab is more his than I am; she sees him with kinder eyes, and shuts them oftener to his follies. Her affairs in Ireland are all settled for the future, but the arrears come in very slowly, which is a great inconvenience, as she has a considerable fine for the renewal of this house to pay off, beside great expense for the repairs, &c.; but patience and economy will at last, I hope, set her affairs right, and they are now so far settled as not to worry her, which is a great point gained. The secret about the Princess Charlotte and Lady De Clifford was only that the Prince chose she should have another governess, and the Princess Charlotte chose to keep her good old snuffy woman, who had always let her do as she liked. She resisted the new appointment stoutly, but at last yielded. Bab never thought of applying for the place, and to you and one or two more friends she owns, without scruple, she would never have accepted it had it been offered ; but, from her intimacy with the Queen and Princesses, she does not volunteer this declaration. The Princess of Wales has made a fine uproar : they say, however, there are no proofs for a divorce, and so things are to remain just as they are. Lady A. Hamilton is her favourite lady of the bedchamber, and the honour of writing the letter lies between her and Mr. Brougham. He denies it, but rather faintly ; and as he asked Rogers what Ward thought about it, it looks as if he had a little hand in it. Sir F. Burdett, they say, repents his promised motion, and is coming round to the Prince. ‘ Rokeby ’ is cried down. The bell rings ; so with kindest love to you and Bessy from us all, believe me,

“ Ever yours,

“ M. G.

“ Bab will soon write, but says you are too lazy, and you put her out of patience.

“ After writing at full gallop to catch the post, John brings me back my letter to say that it was wrong dated. I am glad he found out the mistake, as I am sure it is not worth postage. If I had time I’d write you a better, but I have not, so this shall go as it is to-morrow.”

To Miss Dalby.

“ Oakhanger Hall, April 8. 1813.

“ My dear Mary,

“ Bessy is so occupied with Mrs. —, that she has not a moment to spare for writing to you, and therefore has deputed the very agreeable but hasty task to me. What do you think ? On our arrival within four miles of this place, we heard (what I had often strongly anticipated) that poor old — was dead! He died the day but one before we came. You may imagine the perplexity this threw us into, for I regarded our visit as completely frustrated, and I passed a miserable night at the miserable inn of Sandbach, turning over in my mind, with an anxiety I have seldom felt, the extreme awkwardness of our situation, and the difficulty I should find in disposing of myself and the dear little group along with me, after our abandonment of house, furniture, and everything like a home. The morning, however, soon dissipated all this gloom; for, in answer to a note which I sent Mrs. —, there arrived a gay barouche, and two smiling servants, who conveyed us and our baggage hither, and, if there was not such a thing as a corpse still in the house, you would scarcely suppose that Death had ever showed his ugly face within the walls. The son-in-law and daughter are expected every hour, and after the will-reading and funeral are over, I think we shall all be as if nothing had happened. Mrs. — takes most violently to Bessy, and as dispossession from Oakhanger (if at all) will not be enforced for at least a year, we shall get on for three or four months quite as pleasantly as we expected. The place is beautiful. We have a suite of delightful rooms that open into each other;—a bedroom, my study, and a room for the maid and Barbara; and I write to you now at a window that looks over a sweet little lake and a glorious country. Your little daughter was very ill indeed on our arrival, but we have got a wet-nurse for her, and she already begins to recover and revive.

“ Bessy sends her best love,—she is always talking to them about you. Ever, my dear Mary, your sincere friend,

“ THOMAS MOORE.”

To James Corry, Esq.

“ Abergely, Sunday, June, 1813.

“ My dear Corry,

“ I seize the very first quiet moment I have had for two months to give you some little account of myself, and ask pardons innumerable for my long and most criminal silence; but, if you know the way (or rather the million ways) I was pulled about in Town, and the difficulty I found in snatching a minute for my daily letters to Bessy, you would forgive me without hesitation, and only think of congratulating me on being released from a bustle and dissolution, always so bewildering, and now become so very uninteresting to me. I went through it, indeed, quite as a task, for I thought it a good thing to see and be seen a little, and to put the springs of my town friendships in play again, lest they should grow rusty from disuse. You will be glad, I am sure, to hear that, in this point of view, I have every reason to be delighted with my visit; I never met with more kindness, and certainly never with half so much deference, or half so many flattering tributes to me both as a man and an author. My conduct with Lord Moira is known to all those whom one is anxious to please, and I find it has got me indeed much more credit than I deserve for it. You will be surprised, too, to hear that the Post-bag has done me infinite service,—so differently do things sometimes turn out from what their tendency, at the first cursory glance, appears to be ! Whether it be from any talent shown in it, or its courage, or the general dislike towards the Prince, nothing I ever wrote has gained me so much pleasant fame.

I am here cottage-hunting, but with so little success that I believe I shall try back towards my old ground in Derbyshire, or thereabouts. Wales is certainly so far from everything civilised, that nothing but its scenery and its cheapness could recommend it to one. The former, of course, remains always beautiful ; but as to cheapness, it is become quite a humbug : if I may parody a line of my friend Byron's,—

“ ‘Beef, mutton, poultry fails, but Nature still is fair.’ ”

Your letter, inclosing the draft, travelled to Kegworth, Cheshire ; and at length, after these easy stages, reached me in town, from whence it returned, both letter and draft, unanswered, unaccepted, unannealed, to Cheshire again, where it now lies ; but the moment I get back again you shall have the valuable instrument you enclosed, with all the validity that a poet's name can give it. A bill like this resembles those animals that lie in a torpid state for months together, and I shall be but too happy if I am able to waken it into cash in November.

“ Give my best regards to Mrs. Corry, and believe me, my dear Corry, ever your very attached friend,

“ THOMAS MOORE.”

To James Corry, Esq.

“ Ashbourne, July 1. 1813.

“ My dear Corry,

“ At last I have found a resting place, and you may now direct to me, in the true poetic style, to ‘ Mayfield

Cottage, Ashbourne, Derbyshire.' I have got a pretty little stone-built cottage, in the fields by itself, about a mile and a half from the very sweetly situated town of Ashbourne, for which I am to pay twenty pounds a-year rent, and the taxes come to three or four pounds more; but though this sounds so cheap, yet the expenses of furnishing, and the beautiful capabilities of the place, which tempt one into improvement so irresistibly, will make it, I fear, rather a dear little spot to me. Once done, however, to my mind (if the supplies will enable me to do it so), I think I shall not be easily induced to quit it, but shall keep it on still as a scribbling retreat, even though I should, in a year or two, find it more to my purpose to live in London; but certainly until my Grande Opus is finished, I could not possibly have a more rural or secluded corner to court the Muses in. We are fitting up a little room for a friend; and though it has but a low ceiling and cottage windows to it, yet I flatter myself we could make you and Mrs. Corry comfortable in it, if you would take us in your way to Matlock, Buxton, or any other given gay place you may be bound to. We are within four miles of that most poetical of all spots, Dovedale.

"At length, my dear good fellow, after my long, long incubation, I have hatched your draft into something like an acceptance; and all I ask is, if it passes out of your own hands, that you will give me timely notice, that I may be fully prepared to ward off the 'irrevocabile telum.'

"I do not remember whether I told you that I was solicited very flatteringly, while I was in town, to lecture at the Royal Institution next year. Campbell has just concluded his lectures. I should not have disliked it, but by Rogers's advice and that of some other friends (who thought it infra dig.) I declined it. A day or two since I received a very cordial letter from Whitbread, containing a most urgent entreaty that I should undertake something for Drury Lane. This, however, I shall not think of till after my poem.

“ Write soon, my dear Corry, and tell me all about the health and happiness of yourself and your dear Maria.

“ Ever yours, faithfully,

“ THOMAS MOORE.

“ My Bessy and babes are quite well, and would all jump with joy to see you.”

From James Perry, Esq.

“ Strand, July 2. 1813.

“ My dear Sir,

“ Your letter came to my hand seasonably, as I am going out of town to-morrow. I sincerely hope that you have made a happy choice of a retreat, though I cannot avoid thinking, that for every purpose of retirement and economy, you might have been as fortunate in your selection within an hour's walk of London. I have ordered your paper to be forwarded to your new address. I dare say that you have a bank at Ashbourne (for what village is without one?) and if so, they will give you money for a draft on me. In the meantime I enclose you 30*l.* in part of the 75*l.* bill transmitted to me, and you will please to draw on me for the remainder. Do not talk of balances. It will give me very sincere pleasure, as you may believe, to hear from you and to know that you are proceeding in your great work. With kind respects to Mrs. Moore, “ Faithfully yours,

“ JAS. PERRY.”

From James Corry, Esq.

“ Lurgan Street, Dublin, July 9. 1813.

“ Everything, my dear Moore, that contributes to your fame, your interests, or your happiness, must be most gratifying to us, and therefore your two last letters (strange you should have two unanswered) have been the occasion of most sincere congratulation and comfort to Maria and me.

“ You have indeed, my dearest Moore, in this remote part of this remote town, two very warm and very faithful friends; two, who, believe me, Moore, will yield to none of the many great ones in the gay world you have lately left, in affectionate attachment to you.

“ It were vain to tell you, therefore, with what joy I read your account of your reception in London. That it was everything it ought to have been is very evident, because you were satisfied with it yourself; for if statesmen, warriors, and poets are not hard to please in these particulars, then are they a class of gentlemen very cruelly calumniated by the rest of the world.

“ Of the prodigious sale and popularity of your Post-bag I had heard from various quarters; our latest account was through Lord Ormonde, who arrived a few days before your letter; and though its success must only make my poor judgment in these matters appear more humble to you than it ever was before, yet I think I could rejoice in your happiness, though it were only procurable by a greater sacrifice to myself than that. No, Moore; the qualities which I possess to entitle me (if anything can entitle me) to an occasional letter from your pen, or render one of mine worth opening, are not those of the head, and therefore in the truest freedom of my heart you must let me tell you what I think of the offspring of your muse; and when my opinion fails in appealing to your judgment, it may at least have a favourable influence on your spirits—utrumq. paratus.

“ The respect paid to your name at the University dinner had been previously communicated to me in a very circumstantial account of that day’s proceedings by our worthy friend Power. From his letters, as well as from former letters from yourself, I am well aware of the unfavourable opinion you have of the estimation in which you are held by your own country. You think it is not as kind and as partial as it might be, nor even as just as it ought to be; and you rest that opinion, I know, among other things, upon the circumstance of your health being omitted at a public meeting at Belfast, where the name of every one, however remotely connected with the literary fame of the country, was toasted. I am reluctantly obliged to agree with you in the most of what you feel: the public mind of Ireland, if ever it had any, is gone; some of its best days were from 1770 to 1790. There did exist in those days a band of men who would have done honour to any country,—Malone—Daly—Burgh—Flood—Grattan—Charlemont, &c., and something like a love of literature and of literary men prevailed; but I fancy they were respected only among themselves, for Ireland never was, in the general, a literary country; even the political changes of the times have none, or, if any, a very transient influence on her feelings. A single* county, town, or city could not lately be found to raise its voice of condolence upon the sufferings of our much-injured Princess. I went myself to the theatre not two months since, to see ‘Henry VIII.’ (Kemble’s Wolsey), with some hope (I own it) that the pathetic pleadings of Queen Catherine would, from the application of the scene to the events that were passing, have struck fire into the hearts of the audience; but not a hand was raised. So help me God, I do believe the million of this country never knew the impulse of any other public feeling but a love of Popery and a hatred of the English name. In the tumultuous agitations which these two topics have occasioned, wonder not if the sighs of the bard are unheard.

“But still, my dear Moore, in justice to my country, give me a word about Belfast.

“I well remember that meeting, and the circumstances of it, and I can assure you that you are not to regard the events of that day as in anywise expressive of the public feeling towards yourself. It was a meeting convened by the friends of a Mr. Buntin, who had published about that time at Belfast, of which he is a native, a collection of Irish Melodies. In the spirit of trade they bumpered to Mr. Buntin and his Melodies; and then, affecting to give a literary character to the meeting, they drank a list of literary men, from which they carefully excluded the name of every one connected with certain other Melodies that had made their appearance about the same time. This, I believe,—I almost know,—was the fact.

To that same town of Belfast, Maria and I set out to-

* The address of the Catholics was the policy of a party, not the honest expression of national feeling.

morrow on our way to the ‘land of brown heath.’ Thither we go, alike unknowing and unknown, with a map of the roads, and Providence for our guide. And where are you going, Corry? Upon my soul, Moore, I can’t well tell you. Some little longing to tread on ground immortalised by the muse is the only impelling motive, I know of, that we have. This is the quo animo of our journey. Onward we shall go, therefore, careless though we may be “ ‘*Catched wi’ warlocks in the mirk,

By Alloway’s auld haunted kirk.*’

Thence we mean to move towards Edinburgh, ‘romantic town;’ perhaps stretch northward far enough to see the place where Birnam Wood was before it moved to Dunsinane; and from thence, turning southward, we must go to ‘view fair Melrose aright,’ and so home by the Lakes. Such is the plan of our intended tour; and the only objection I have to it is, that our path does not lead us near the ‘little stone-built cottage in the fields, a mile and a half from Ashbourne.’ Now, I should like to put on my working jacket there, and, under the direction of Bessy, set about whitening the building, cocked up on the kitchen stool, or nail up the curtains to the little cottage windows; and should the noise of our hammering make you lift up your head from the grande opus on your table, and smile at us both for the fuss we were making, I’d chide you (and not the first time) for laughing at the attentions paid to the lovely Lady Godiva by the worshipful Mayor of Coventry.

“ All the world is gone to-day to a public breakfast at Carton. The Duke of Leinster honoured us with a card; but everything being fixed for our departure to-morrow,

Maria had some little domestic troubles on her hands to-day. So, while she is locking up plates, spoons, and dishes, I am occupied, you see, in settling your house, instead of my own.

“ I hope you will have leisure to ruminate upon the Whitbreads’ requests after your more important work is finished. I can’t help thinking that you possess every quality in the world for succeeding in dramatic writing. In political satire you have no equal.

“ You did not, I hope, make a present of the Post-Bag to the bookseller. Would to heaven that you had but a fair proportion of the wealth you have created for others ! But you’ll have enough, please God.

“ Oh ! how I should like to see one good edition of all your works (your song poetry included) undertaken by yourself. But I crave, perhaps, about what I do not understand ; ’tis under such circumstances, however, that our wishes are most fervid.

“ God bless you, my dear Moore ; and with Maria’s and my kindest regards to Mrs. Moore, “ Believe me

“ Your most faithful friend,

“ JAMES CORRY.

“ P. S. If you should happen to feel disposed to give us the happiness of hearing from you while we are out on our rambles, direct as usual to Dublin, and your letter will be forwarded.”

To Miss Dalby.

“ Mayfield, 1813.

“ My dear Mary,

“ Bessy leaves the literary part of your letter for me to answer. Lord Byron’s last poem did give me (I am sorry to tell you) a deep wound in a very vital part—my story; and it is singular enough, for he could not know anything about it. Your brother and Mary Matchett are both in extremes on the subject of his bride. He could not write anything bad, but it would have been much finer if he had taken more time about it. He is half-way or more through another poem, ‘The Corsair.’

“ Bessy would have written more if she had not been so ill, and so would I if I were not so busy.

“ What does Sir C. Hastings mean by saying Bonaparte is not a great man? I almost agree with him about the Ministers; though, if they have not come round to the good cause, the good cause has certainly come round to them.

“ Ever yours,

“ T. M.”

From Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“ July 28. 1813.

“ My dear Moore,

“ I cannot tell you the pleasure I felt when I received your letter from Fairy-land. You are now where you ought to be; and I hope you have already initiated Psyche into all the mysteries of Dove Dale. If you see the Kingfisher I saw there, pray let me know. How far are you from Thorp-cloud, and Ilam Churchyard, and Oak-over Hall,—names consecrated in my imagination before I was fifteen? I can assure you I wander with you both very often, and flatter myself I sometimes hear myself mentioned in those regions of enchantment. My dear Moore, if you don't now write better verses than any of us, I shall disown you as a friend. Byron has made some additions to 'The Giaour,' that exceed everything. The passage, 'He who hath bent him o'er the dead,' will thrill you through and through. I longed for you, but in vain, in my boat to Richmond the other day. The ladies were innumerable; and the slow airs on the water came as thro' the gates of Paradise ajar. I met Madame de Staël in Kent, the other day, and she was always reading the Irish Melodies. It was at Lord Darnley's, and she asked for them again and again. London is breaking up very fast; but I have not ventured farther at present than Holland House. Here I am writing, and I wish you were with me. Frere, Mackintosh, and Luttrell slept here last night. As Lord B. and Lady D. are your correspondents, I have little to tell you.

" August 1.

"I have now to thank you for two very kind letters; the last enclosing what I shall highly value: if it was written with pain, it was read with pleasure; and I can truly say that I think myself MUCH OBLIGED to her for her acceptance of what I sent her. I know her friendship will strike her blind to all the faults in the world. So you have been in Dove Dale? I fear it is not within reach of an evening walk. How I should have enjoyed it with you; and how I wished for you at Vauxhall! My sister mentioned you more than once. It was one blaze of light ; and one thing affected me not a little, to see the name of a schoolfellow, whom I remember a little dirty boy, and who toiled with me (we worked by ourselves) through Simpson's Euclid, written there in letters of fire ! Many thanks for the kind things you say of the review. I have heard, but I hope not, that it was the work of my friend, J. W. W. One person, Lord Wellesley, has expressed his indignation to me in a most friendly manner, as well as to others. It is certainly done with no great goodwill to the author, as many things are said which the reviewer knows are not true. Lady Donegal is just now with Lady Glenbervie *, at the Pheasantry. 'Is Moore arrived?' said Madame de Staël to me, at a dinner last week ; 'I have a passion for his poetry.' She complains that she cannot understand Lord Byron's ; but I believe he has not been very attentive to her. Strong feeling delights her most. The death of Clarissa, she says, comes to her constantly as one of the events of her life. Her daughter † you would like ; she is very pleasing, and dances a shawldance beautifully. The mother, too, you would like, — very good-natured, very lively, and eloquent. She speaks English well, but not fluently. Pray come and meet her, and bring Psyche. She dines with me next Friday, and chairs shall be reserved for you both — so I shall expect you. Sheridan dined with me last Wednesday. He says he has found a cottage for you at Fetcham, and seems quite astonished at your having settled elsewhere. By the by, I have not seen yours, that I remember. He says if you and I and himself would but be neighbours, we might scorn the world ; and Lord Byron says, in that case, he will give up his restlessness, and settle there too. Pray say everything you can think of to Psyche I would have written to her, but it is on a subject I am ashamed to touch upon; by and by I will. I am rejoiced to think she is well, and beg she will keep so. A kiss to each of your babes. The allusion to the days of Homer I think I have seen before.

* Daughter of Lord North (the Minister).

† Duchesse de Broglie.

“ Ever yours,

“ S. R.”

From Miss Godfrey.

“ London, Aug. 5. 1813.

“ Rogers gave me the enclosed to get franked to you. I can't resist taking the opportunity to ask after you and Bessy, and little Barbara, and the other little animal;—are you all flourishing in health and happiness? and do your absent friends ever by any accident occupy a stray thought? The worst of love in a cottage is, that it lives all for itself, and the rest of the poor dear world may go to the dogs for anything it cares about it. By the by, I think it right to inform you that by the time you and Bessy come to live amongst us Christians again, I flatter myself I shall be well qualified to assist in teaching Miss Barbara Moore how to read, for I make daily progress in the art of educating young ladies. We are just come back from visiting the Glenbervies and the Berrys, at Strawberry Hill. The weather was beautiful, the country ditto, and we had some pleasant society; so we passed our time much to our satisfaction, and found London on our return in a galloping consumption, and just expiring, to our great joy.

“ Farewell,

“ M. G.

“ I see your eleventh edition advertised.”

From Leigh Hunt, Esq.

“ Surrey Jail, Sept. 20. 1813.

“ My dear Moore,

“ I know not what conclusions you have made with respect to my politeness, and am afraid to think about them; but you will forgive much, I know, to bad habits and to worse health, and will be sorry to hear that I have had so many relapses of ill health lately, as, conspiring with the natural indolence of my disorder, have rendered me almost unfit for anything. I have got better, however, within these few days, still reckoning myself stouter than when I first came here; and I sit down, this fine morning, to say how much obliged to you I am for thinking of me and my verses in your new scenery of enjoyment. If ever I can prevail with myself to write a batch of them over again, I shall be truly happy to send them you; and at any rate, I trust that when I have the pleasure of another visit, you will tell me all that you think concerning them in the way of criticism, both verbal and otherwise; — but at present, I have advanced only thirty-four lines beyond the place you saw last, and have found it necessary to relieve myself from that intentness of thinking which grave composition requires, by falling in with an old plea, ‘ the request of friends,’ and busying myself in preparing for re-publication the ‘ Feast of the Poets,’ with additional verses and notes. To these are to be added some little pieces I have lately written, such as translations from Horace, Sonnets, &c., in order to make up a decent volume; and as I have retouched the verses and written additional ones, I hope very shortly to have the pleasure of sending a copy into Derbyshire.

“ I shall anxiously keep in mind what you say about unusual words, and beg that when you look at my lines, you will have no mercy in pointing them out, for I assure you I will turn them out if they have no business there. A writer may get a trick of using some words of this kind, before he is aware of it ; but if they are merely unusual, and not such as a man in a natural mood would utter from the impulse of some powerful abstract feeling or reflection, they have nothing to do with poetry. The ahas and afars, you know, I have already delivered over to your secular arm ; and am much afraid that you will not let a heterodox couplet pass in the ‘ Feast of the Poets : ’ — it is where I have introduced Coleridge and Wordsworth, —

‘ When one began spouting the cream of orations,
In praise of bombarding one’s friends and relations*,
And t’ other some lines he had made on a straw,
Showing how he had found it, and what it was for,’ &c.

But will not the ballad humility of the lines excuse it ? — By the way, I have taken the opportunity of this re-publication to make peace with my conscience and speak much more highly of Wordsworth than at first. I do not pass over his puerilities ; they only make me, if possible, still more indignant ; but then I do not suffer my indignation to run away with itself ; and certainly in the better parts of Wordsworth there appear to me all the elements, not only of a good, but of a great poet, — strong intellect, strong feeling, and dignified consciousness, and a command of the very identical words which he requires.

* An article in the “ Friend,” in defence of the Copenhagen business.

“ May I, in return for the disclosure of all my frailties, request at least a taste of your poem, — the first paragraph, for instance? I will promise to keep the lines quite to myself; they shall be enjoyed by me in a corner; as a boy takes his solitary apple; — but pray, if the thing is inconvenient, think of it no further. — Make my best respects, if you please, to Mrs. Moore, with whom, in consequence of her sympathies with imprisonment, I reckon myself acquainted already, — in heart if not in person.

“ Yours, my dear Moore, very sincerely,

“ LEIGH HUNT.

“ P. S. I have not again had the pleasure of a visit from Lord B.; and have sometimes endeavoured to flatter myself that he was waiting to be invited. — Should you be generous enough to write me another letter before long, I shall be eager to show my proper sense of it and answer it immediately.”

To James Corry, Esq.

“ Ashbourne, Oct. 25. 1813.

“ My dear Corry,

“ I did not like to risk writing to you while you were away, as I was afraid my letters might have to follow you from place to place, as Lord Moira’s venison followed Joe Atkinson; and whereas the latter was quite alive, when it caught Joe, my letters, I fear, would have lost even the little life they had at setting out, in the chace: but now that the cold winds of the North have, I presume, sent you home again, I feel most happy in returning to fresh communion with you, and in asking how the journey has agreed with you, as well spiritually as corporeally. Mrs. Corry too,—I hope most sincerely she is all the better for it, and I again renew my claims upon a little postscript from her own hand, when next you write to me: now, mind, she must not forget this.

“We have got into rather a gayer neighbourhood here than I bargained for, but I am determined to go into a torpid state for the winter, and suck my paws, like the bears; as indeed, if I do not work hard, I shall have little else to live upon;—after all, however, it is better than turning Poet Laureat. What do you think of Southey? Is it not quite a pity that such a Pegasus as his should be turned into a royal ‘cream-coloured horse’ for state occasions? I heartily mourn over him.—You will be sorry, I am sure, to hear, that my Island of Bermuda is far from being a Cucagna to me, no island of dainties, but barren of money, as its rocks are of vegetables. I am sure I am cheated, and yet I do not know how to help myself. Bessy and I have been lately on a visit to Derby, and found a nest of young poetesses in a family there that amused and interested me a good deal, particularly as some of them were pretty and natural.

* * * * *

They are daughters of the Strutts (with one of whom we were for a week), three brothers in the cotton trade, who have more than forty thousand a year between them, and, what is much better, love literature, music, and everything else that cotton manufacturers are not likely to love. The Edgeworths were our predecessors at their house.

“I wish, my dear Corry, you would write to me often: your letters are always the pleasantest I receive, and Bessy quite claps her hands with joy at the sight of a letter from ' dear Mr. Corry : ' so, do gratify us with long, very long ones. The only very faithful and voluminous correspondent I have is Lord Byron, which is exceedingly delightful to me, as he is just as gay a companion and correspondent as he is a sombre and horrific poet.

" Best regards to Mrs. Corry, and believe me most truly your very attached friend,

" THOMAS MOORE.

" I inclose a postscript, or rather inscript."

From James Corry, Esq.

" Lurgan Street, Nov. 1. 1813.

" My dear Moore,

" Your last letter must have sailed from Holyhead much about the same time that I embarked from Portpatrick, both bound for the same place; but as I had further to travel to our capital, it reached Dublin before me.

" I left Maria at my sister's on our way through the North, about thirty miles from town, a little jaded from her journey, but very well; and am here once more, my dear Moore, after the most delightful tour that I believe the United Kingdom, at least, is capable of affording. Scotland is to be sure one of the most romantic countries in the world; it is a region of mountains, lakes, and waterfalls; but its river scenery surpasses all. In the principal glens along the western and northern coast, the road and the bridge (particularly the bridge) exhibit a great deal of beauty. The bed of the river in those mountainous districts lies, of course, very low down, and the road is half-way up the side of the hill, and whenever it becomes necessary to cross the valley, they wisely choose some narrow part of the glen, that affords two opposing rocks to support their arch: the highest rocks are always preferred, as coming nearer to the level of the road; from whence it follows, that a bridge in the Highlands is everywhere the seat of romantic beauty, for then you have always a high arch, and a torrent tumbling between rocks, at a great depth below. But we did not confine ourselves to the Continent of Scotland; we visited some of the principal Islands of the Hebrides. We spent a week in Mull, Ulva, &c. and from thence embarked for Iona and Staffa, which latter place I was anxious to see, because Fingal's Cave is the basaltic boast of Scotland; and we had seen the Giants' Causeway in the Irish part of our tour; but, unfortunately, the surf among the rocks was too high to let us land.

“Our poetical and theatrical reveries gave us a great deal to do in the course of our journey. We visited the cottage in Ayrshire where poor Burns was born; peeped into Kirk Alloway with him; and traced him to his last home in the churchyard of Dumfries. I was delighted to hear that his three sons were all provided for in the public service, and his widow enjoying a neat mansion, and a comfortable competence in the town of Dumfries,—the fruits of his labours. But we did not neglect living poets in our respect for the dead; the Minstrel's last Lay was not forgotten, nor was any part of the scenery of the Lady of the Lake left unexplored. We set out for Loch Katrine, of course, and

“ ‘In the deep Trossach's wildest nook,
Our solitary refuge took.’

From the glen of the Trossachs we embarked on the lake, and landed at the ‘Goblin Cave,’—

“ ‘A wild and strange retreat,
As e’er was trod by human feet.’

From which we crossed to Ellen’s Isle, and climbing up

“ ‘From underneath an aged oak
That slanted from the islet rock,’ we reached her supposed habitation. From this part of the world the muse of Walter Scott sent us to the banks of the Teviot and the Tweed, along which we travelled with William of Deloraine, from Branksome Castle to Melrose Abbey, which, of course, in obedience to the poet’s instructions, we took care to visit by the ‘pale moonlight.’ Our labours did not end here; we traced the whole topography of Macbeth, though the different places connected with his history lay some hundred miles asunder. We visited all his castles, Cawdor, Glamis, Inverness,—the scene of Duncan’s murder, and travelled along the blasted heath, uninterrupted, however, as Johnson says, in his own dry way,—‘uninterrupted by the promises of crowns or kingdoms;’—inquiring as we went of every lonely traveller we could venture the quiz on, in our best tragic voices, ‘How far is’t called to Forres?’ On we travelled to Forres, and saw the stone erected in memory of the defeat of ‘Sueno, Norway’s king,’ for licking whom Macbeth got his second title: from thence we traced the tyrant to the southward, to Birnam Wood and Dunsinane, and did not part from him till we came to the field where he fell by the hands of Macduff; from which we attended his successor, Malcolm, ‘to see him crowned at Scone.’ In short we travelled near 1,500 miles, and saw everything interesting in Scotland. An extraordinary and very pleasant adventure happened to us at the commencement of our tour. We fell in with two of the most delightful young men I ever saw—two brothers—the elder a young Templar, the younger an under-graduate of Oxford; and after half an hour's conversation in one of the most romantic passes on the Western Coast, we liked each other so well that we became companions for the rest of the journey: they lived with us for six weeks! Our mode of travelling was the same,—each a chariot and post-horses,—so that by changing with each other we had a constant variety of company. I think I see you heartily tired of my gossiping account of our adventures; but after Pat has seen anything new or wonderful, you know he always meets his friend open-mouthed, and without even waiting to ask him how he does, begins and tells him his story all at once, without stopping.

“It's high time to ask you, my dear fellow, how you are, and how ‘my dear Mrs. Moore’ is, whom, by all the rules of the Lex Talionis, I am entitled to call by that name; but I'll not tell you the half of what I feel in this letter, because I'll send it to Maria to add—not her post-script (for the best of reasons), but her inscript—you might else have two tours through Scotland, so this shall go to Madam to-night; and before to-morrow's post goes out I'll give you a line or two on business,—till when Heaven bless you and yours.

“JAMES CORRY.”

From James Corry, Esq.

“Lurgan Street, Nov. 8. 1813.

“Pray forgive me, my dear Moore, for my delay in sending you this promised supplement to my Scotch Rhapsodies, but in faith the arrears of business that accumulate in the course of so long an absence from the shop, has been the means of keeping me so busy since my return, that I have been often obliged to throw myself on the indulgence of my friends, and few I know are more disposed to forgive than you.

“If I thought you would allow me to say one word more of Scotland, it would be this. I spent some time with Lord and Lady Kinnaird*, at their beautiful seat in Perthshire, Rossie Priory, and it was no small addition to our happiness there to hear them speak in a way of you that was delightful. Whenever I hear you flattered I always hold up my head the higher, as if part of the praise belonged to myself. Maria and I often wished for you both, although I am not sure whether Mrs. Moore would have liked to have heard so lovely a woman as Lady Kinnaird say so many pretty things of you. We had Mr. and Mrs. Henry Siddons there for two days.

* * * * * Lord K.'s kindness to us was not confined to his hospitalities. My way was towards Edinburgh on leaving him. Had your friend Jeffrey been there he would have given me a letter to him; but Jeffrey is gone to America, it seems, upon some matrimonial speculation. He gave me an introduction, however, to a most able and intelligent man, a Mr. Murray, who is at the Scotch Bar; *—I believe a literary ally of Jeffrey's in his review—so at least they told me. He spoke to me of you as a poet, in the kindest manner, and before I said I knew you, he told me he considered your ‘Twopenny Post Bag’ the cleverest thing you had written. The Dinner he said he preferred to everything else, even to the Insurrection of the Papers. I thought, as the conversation proceeded, it would have been uncandid in me (for a week's residence in Edinburgh made us very intimate) not to tell him how far I had presumed upon my friendship for you, in writing to you when that work came out. 'You were right,' says he, 'if you bottomed your opinion on the impolicy of such a man's spending himself in detached writing, for detached writing will never convey that portion of fame which the talents necessary for compositions of that nature would bestow on a writer who succeeded in a greater work; but you were wrong if you thought it unworthy of his talents; for I must repeat to you, that I think it the cleverest thing he ever wrote.' Our two young English companions, whom I mentioned in my last, told me they thought it was more generally read in London than any book they had ever seen, and everywhere as generally admired. I know you will regard all this as atonement for my errors of judgment. But no, Moore, upon my honour I am only telling you, and truly too, what others have said. Those two young Englishmen—Messrs. Rickets (their father was Attorney-General in Jamaica for many years)—said they would give the world to know you. I gave them a letter of introduction to you when we parted, but I have learnt from their letters since, that they met letters at Edinburgh, which obliged them to abandon their carriage and hurry in the mail to London; one of them said, that somewhere in Derbyshire he travelled for a while on the roof, and there met a young lady who was going to your cottage.

* Olivia, daughter of William Robert, second Duke of Leinster.

† The present Lord Murray,†—one of the best, kindest, and most generous men living.

"Dublin is now pretty full. Poor Miss Grattan! You know of course of her death. Her nephew, Gervas Bushe, succeeds to most of her property. Mr. Grattan and his wife, and Henry and the two girls, have been, I may say, living at Richard Power's for these ten days past. And I (being a bachelor) have been living with them. The elder girl is to be immediately married to Blackford. I meet the Daltons there every day, both looking very well, but poor Dalton appears to me more lame every day. You know Mr. Grattan's peculiar way of thinking and talking. I can't help telling you what he said of the Catholics, speaking of their conduct to the Prince. 'They have abused him in every possible shape; for first they have abused his person, of which he is very vain; and secondly they have abused his mistress, of whom he is very fond; and thirdly, not content with all that, they have praised his own wife. Poor gentleman, he is sadly used.'—I expect my wife home to-morrow. She tells me that she has made a request of you—to accept, whenever you revisit Ireland, a bed in this house;—is there the most remote chance of our ever having such a happiness as that? Such an arrangement would make us too proud. A thousand loves to Mrs. Moore. Farewell my dearest friend, and ever believe me, Moore, “Yours most faithfully and fondly,

“JAMES CORRY.”

From Miss Godfrey.

“(Probably Feb.) 1814.

“We were rejoicing in the thoughts of seeing you again, and just going to tell you so, when Rogers informed us your plans were all changed, and that you had put off coming to Town for the present. We felt quite disappointed, and very earnestly hope you will come up in the spring. We rather wish, however, that you may be able to keep clear of Lord Ellenborough's wig; it cannot be a very pleasant sight to you, who have never treated it with the smallest respect. But pray bring your poem with you. The time you have been about it is quite absurd in the nineteenth century, when poets produce something new at least once a month. 'The Corsair' is very much liked; and it certainly has many beauties; but surely the dedication might have been done with as kind a feeling and yet with better taste and better judgment. Lord Byron never ought to write prose,—don't you think so? Is there not a sort of inelegant pertness in his style? I give him credit for kind feelings towards you, but we are both very angry that he did not express them better. Perhaps you may think us unreasonable and unjust, and so I shall say no more upon the subject. Madame de Staël never ceases expressing her desire to know you, and always asks when you are coming. She is a great admirer of your talents. About a fortnight since, we met her at dinner at the Duke of Gloucester's, and his band played 'Lady fair' twice in the course of the evening, to her great delight, and her son and daughter, who, I believe, set up for a sort of musical geniuses, were quite in raptures. This dinner was given to bring about a meeting between her and Mr. Wilberforce, which was very interesting. But I have given you so much of her in my letters of late, and she is so much talked of, and occupies so considerable a place in the society of London at present, that I am almost tired of her name. I shall, therefore, send her off with Lord Byron. You have no idea of the very great anxiety that every soul feels about the affairs of the Continent. People tell us we are to have peace immediately, and alas, with Bonaparte! for which thanks to the shabby Austrians, who preserve him to trample upon mankind a little longer. And to say the truth, mankind well deserves it, for it has a wonderful respect for tyrants.

* * * How have you all got through the winter? Such a winter never was felt before in this country. We have all been invalids in one way or another, and are still plagued by coughs and colds, which will probably see the winter out. We have been extremely quiet, seeing only a few friends in a very quiet way, and going on just as you have seen us go on for years. Rogers says you have sent up your Epilogue. I dare say it is very good, and will succeed well. Give our love to Bessy. What sort of little girls are yours—are they like father or mother? Are they strong and healthy? A thousand kind things to you from us both.

“ M. G.”

To Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“ Jan. 13. 1814.

“ My dear Rogers,

“ Living in the fields, as we do, we cannot stir a step without pioneers and shovels, and I cannot find it in my heart to send a servant into Ashbourne through the waste, so that I am obliged to lay hold on any unfortunate person who brings me a message, and make him useful to me by taking ten times as many messages back again. Just such a return-courier is now in the house, and I take the opportunity of writing by him a very few lines, lest you should leave Lord Spencer's before you receive at least an acknowledgment of your very, very kind letter from Althorpe. I can hardly wish you where I am in this very anti-cottage weather, but I wish heartily we were together somewhere, for I want you, selfishly want you, often; and the glimpses I get at you through letters, is something like what we have of the sun at this season, —very bright, but distant and cheerless: yet not cheerless, either, except in comparison with the same kind things, said à quattr' occhi over a good fire, with one of your best smiles illustrating every word. That's what I want, and that is what, for some months to come, I fear I shall not have. Lord Byron dedicates his 'Corsair' to me, which I look upon as a very high niche in the Temple indeed,—to be placed so near you, too! Between you and Lord Holland I fear I shall have applied to me the reverse of the famous epigram,—

“ ‘Wisdom and Wit full-sized were seen,
And Folly, at small length, between.’ ”

I think there are few more generous spirits than Lord Byron's, and the overflowing praise he has lavished on me in his dedication (if he preserves that of which he has sent me a copy) is just such as might be expected from a profuse, magnificent-minded fellow, who does not wait for the scales to weigh what he says, but gives praise, as sailors lend money, by 'handfuls.' Let others think what they will of it, he has made me very proud and happy; and the more he commits his judgment for my sake, the more grateful, of course, I must feel for his goodnature.

“ My return post-boy is clamouring below stairs, so I must have done, and shall write to you a longer letter next week, directed to St. James's Place.

“ Ever yours affectionately,

“ THOMAS MOORE.”

To James Corry, Esq.

“Tuesday, Feb. 28. 1814.

“My dear Corry,

“I have been very slow in thanking you for your kind panegyric, which had all the features of the warm heart and sound head it came from. I suppose you have before this seen Lord Byron’s overflowing eulogium. He has got into a tremendous scrape with the Carlton House faction by the avowal of his ‘Lines to the Young Princess.’ ‘The Courier,’ ‘Morning Post,’ &c. &c. have been all, as he says himself, ‘in hysterics’ since their appearance; and I have come in for my full share of the bespatterment. When scavengers become assailants, there is no coming very clean out of their hands. Indeed, ‘The Courier’ has taken the only method such dull dogs could hit upon for annoying Byron, by raking up all his past and suppressed abuse of those he is now friends with; and they have quoted the very passage upon which I called him to account (and from which sprung our intimacy), to contrast it with his present praise of me. Byron tells me that till his avowal of those formidable lines to the young Royalty, the Regent always thought they were mine.

“What has Bryan been doing? I have seen some severe strictures upon his conduct; and as I am a good deal interested about him, you will oblige me very much by telling me frankly, and, of course, in perfect confidence, what is the general impression his conduct has made, as I have only seen ‘The Dublin Evening Post,’ and that paper is naturally under much irritation against him.

“The spring is beginning to shine out upon our cottage very deliciously, and my only alloy is that Bessy is not as well and strong for the enjoyment of her garden and flowers as I could wish.

“ I believe I told you that I had been requested to write an Epilogue for Mrs. Wilmot’s forthcoming tragedy. Were you of the party with Power to hear her read when you were in London?—if not, ask Power whether the play she read was ‘Ina of Sigiswold,’ for that is the name of the tragedy to which I have written the Epilogue. I hope it may be done but half the justice to in the speaking that my Kilkenny one was.

“ I am getting on with my poem, though I begin to tremble about its appearance this season; this, however, shall not interfere with my Grand Memoir—as once over the fit period for publication, I have a long summer for all my jobs before me.

“ Still in debt to Mrs. Corry! If warm and frequent remembrances are a satisfactory interest upon the debt, I pay them faithfully; and am, dear Corry, “ Hers and yours, very truly,

“ THOMAS MOORE.

“ I have a copy of ‘The Corsair’ lying by me for you ever since it was published; but I have been startled by the idea that it would be too heavy for your franking privilege. I feel your pulse in that way with an inclosure now, which I must beg you to forward for me immediately.”

From Leigh Hunt, Esq.

“ Surrey Jail, March 4. 1814.

“ My dear Moore,

“ I do not see why you should have had the ‘unquiet conscience' of which you speak. I took your criticism upon critics in the very best part, I assure you,—and for more than one reason. In the first place, you are inclined, after all, to agree with me on the subject of the dews and flowers,—at least to a certain extent, and that is all which your admirers would demand. I protest, therefore, against performing the part of a Derbyshire blight, and being considered as an interferer with your floral enjoyments,—enjoyments, which I would riot in if I could, as well as yourself. In the next place, I am very much inclined to agree with you on the subject of critics in general, considered as mere critics; but you must know, I make a modest exception on this point with regard to myself, for nobody has the free and unfettered interests of poetry more closely at heart; and one of the main objects of my notes on the Feast, was to give another finishing blow to the cold critical French school that established itself on the neck of our better literature. Let us return to our old fancy and feeling, and our fine, various, pregnant language, and my criticism will be nothing but panegyric; or, rather, I shall lay down my critical pen for ever, and try to be a poet as well as the rest of you. Yourself I have always considered, in the general cast of your genius, as opposed to the school of poetry that has now existed for a hundred years back. Your fancy belongs to the former age; and what I have ventured to object to your style in any respect, was for fear you should be considered by those who did not know you as well as I do, as countenancing the monotony and confined sphere of inferior spirits. You are capable of enjoying all nature, and are bound to do so.

“The author of the criticism upon you in ‘The Champion’ I know. He is, as you handsomely acknowledge, a very clever fellow, but he is apt, also, to go to extremes both in his censure and his praise, and is aware how much I differ with him in the present instance. He has no ill motives, however, of any kind; and I think I can undertake to say for him, that he will be ready to acknowledge his mistake in his very warmest manner, when he discovers it, as he must do in the course of your future writings. He shall be acquainted with such facts of your letter as are necessary for him to know, with the caveat, of course, that you mention. By the way, I must not forget to tell you, that I saw Brougham yesterday, who is one of your admirers, political as well as poetical, and who expressed his regret upon this occasion.

“The ‘Missionary,’ I suppose, is my brother editor, poor Montgomery. I have not heard of the circumstance, but I guess him to be the man. Talking of poets and their destinies, pray do you know anything of Lucien Bonaparte and his epic? * I am curious to know what is thought of him by those who have seen his verses. You are bound to gratify my curiosity in some way, as you have excited it in speaking of your own poem. Why did you not send me a paragraph,—a single paragraph? It would have come upon me like the glimpse of a spring day; and I assure you I could not pay you a better compliment in my anticipations, for never was sick prisoner more heartily tired of a winter than I have been; and yet the fellow seems resolved to hold it out to the last, with his chills and blusterings. Unfortunately, my two oldest friends and companions have been compelled to be much away from me for the last six months,—one of them, indeed, in the country during the whole time; and as I am not fond of ordinary acquaintances, and have rather avoided them, I have had the least portion of society at the very season when I most wanted it. By this you may guess how much I regret your non-appearance in Town this March. The other day I had a visit from two handsome young ladies, and had scarcely sat down with them, when I was interrupted by some members of a Lancasterian institution. You will allow that, under all the circumstances, this was a hard trial of my philanthropy at the expense of my philoguny.

* “Charlemagne.”

“Yours, my dear Moore, most sincerely,

“LEIGH HUNT.”

To Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“Mayfield, April 10. 1814.

“My dear Rogers,

“Though I owe many letters to many people, and don’t owe you one at all, yet you see, like Charles Surface, I let my generosity outstrip my justice, and write to you. The last time I heard of you, you were at Hope’s with the Donegals; but I dare say, long before now, you have bid him and his magnificence farewell (Spes et Fortuna, valete!) and are now preparing to take flight somewhere for the Easter. I wish I had Cornelius Agrippa’s glass to trace you through your rambles; though it would not do if I could not hear as well as see you in it; and when shall I either see or hear you? I suppose the Donegals have told you that I think of making my next move near to London, and then, what delight I have in anticipating, my dear Rogers, that we shall go on seeing each other every day, perhaps, till the end of our lives. This is a pleasant prospect, and what chiefly determines me to the step, for there are many considerations against it, of sober and shadowy hue, economy, prudence, &c. &c., all which are best consulted in the country; but then I flatter myself I am become steady enough (with Bessy's aid, who is a very Minerva of economy) to resist all the Town's temptations to expense; and then the times are getting cheaper, and I shall, I hope, be getting richer, and to crown all, I shall see you and the Donegals — shall hear music — go laugh at Liston — go walk in Hyde Park, and a thousand other intellectual amusements. Here, I really am in a desert; if I go to a dinner, the dulness of the good people is like suffocation, — I can hardly draw my breath under it. I have hopes, too, that the change of scene may do poor Bessy service, who has fallen off in everything but her sweetness of heart, most sadly; but you'll take her by the hand kindly, and that, too, will do her good. Au reste, I am going on as usual, at the easy rate of ten lines a day, with but little interruption. I made a figure at Derby the other day, at a Lancasterian dinner, where I spoke about fifteen speeches, which astonished not only the company but myself. I have got half entangled with my Derby friend Strutt (you know my unlucky facilities in this way) to accompany him for a fortnight to Paris, in a month or two hence. I am certainly most anxious to take a peep at it before another Revolution, perhaps, lays it in ashes; and as Strutt, I believe, gives me a seat in his carriage, I may not find the opportunity amiss. My ambition has long been to see it with a very different sort of companion, namely, yourself; and who knows but even this may happen some fine spring or other? but the Louvre! — the pictures! — ‘and echo answers, where are they?’ Oh, what a pity I wasn't with you last summer!

“ Give my best regards to your sister, who I hope does not forget Bessy, but will let her come to Highbury with us sometimes.

“ Ever, my dear Rogers, most truly yours,

“ THOMAS MOORE.”

From Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“ Tuesday, April 12. 1814.

“ My dear Moore,

“ I have indeed thought it long since you received my last letter, but I am glad you have not quite forgot me. You must now be growing more and more an object of envy every day, with your woods and your meadows, and your rural neighbours. Have the scarlet cloaks yet made their appearance before your windows? You live in the fields, you say; pray what are you doing there? Lord Byron, as you know, has removed into Albany, and lives in an apartment, I should think thirty by forty feet. He is satisfied with the ‘ Quarterly Review,’ and I am glad G. Ellis has let him off so gently, for I suspect they have no good will towards us. Some years ago I delivered a message to you from those said Reviewers, which you answered as I knew you would do. I have now a commission of a much pleasanter kind, and I hope it will meet with more success. I send you Jeffrey’s letter in confidence; it was not, perhaps, intended to be seen; but it will speak best for itself. Perhaps you had better write such an answer to it, addressed to me, as I can send to Jeffrey; not, however, discovering in it that you have seen the very letter itself. I must say I think it would be a respectable thing at least to have written two or three articles in the 'Review.' Your name will be studiously circulated by Mackintosh, Brougham, Horner, Playfair, and Jeffrey, and they may be such as may afterwards, with slight alteration, be re-published in another form. Campbell wrote one article,—‘A General Review of English Poetry;’—and I have often heard it mentioned with praise. What a dream have we had lately! A man a fortnight ago disdained to accept the throne of Louis XIV., and now retires to a little island in the Mediterranean on a pension of 250,000*l.* per annum. How could he overlook Caprea? I am glad you like the ‘Wanderer.’ I have not read it, but here it is not liked. Mr. P—— of Iona is to me unknown.

“SAMUEL ROGERS.”

From James Perry, Esq.

“Strand, July 25. 1814.

“My dear Sir,

“I have had a friendly conversation with Mr. Longman. I told him, of course, that I had no authority to enter into any negotiation with him; but that, as your friend, I should be happy to communicate to you any proposal that he might wish to make to you on the subject of your poem. He said that he was most desirous to treat for it,—that he understood from Mr. Orme I had mentioned the sum of 3000 guineas as the price that I thought you should fix upon it,—and that this sum was so large as to make him desirous of seeing the copy of the poem before he made up his mind. He begged to be understood that he felt the most perfect confidence in you, and was ready to own that no one but yourself could be entitled to ask such a price; but that from long experience he conceived himself capable of judging of the probable demand that there would be for the work, and it would satisfy his mind if he could have an opportunity of forming this judgment. At the same time he said he would pledge himself to you that no other human being should see it, for he wanted no advice on the matter.

“ This is, in short, the substance of our conversation; it run into some length, and he spoke with the greatest admiration of your talents. His anxiety as to previously looking into the poem arose simply from the experience, that so much depended on the catching nature of the subject, as to the popularity and rapidity of its run. He was sure of the intrinsic poetical beauty, of the strength and harmony of the versification, the warmth of the passion, and the brilliancy of the images, &c. All that he wished to ascertain was the character and design of the fable. You will be the only judge of your conduct on this proposal. I did no more than say that I should faithfully consult you, and let him know your feeling on the matter. I think him quite in earnest as to his wish to treat. Of his judgment in the way of anticipating the popularity of a poem I can form no estimate. There may be a book-seller's knack; but I foresee an obvious inconvenience in this mode of treating. If after seeing the copy he should hesitate in giving the sum, or attempt to chaffer, he might wound your delicacy, and even injure the character of the work, by saying that he had refused it. I am not sure, therefore, my dear sir, whether I ought not to tell you my own sentiment on the matter, which is frankly to decline the previous communication. If you agree to show it, I shall say that it is not merely a proof of the high confidence you have in his honour, but of your own most liberal and generous nature, since you thereby incur a risk which you might safely avoid.

“ I need not tell you that I shall execute your commands literally ; and I shall have great pleasure if I can do it to your satisfaction. I envy you the enjoyment of fresh air this delightful weather. I have as yet no news from Mrs. Perry, and I am sick with anxiety, as it is a month since she sailed from Lisbon for Bourdeaux.

“ With respects to Mrs. Moore, believe me to be,

“ My dear Sir,

“ Your faithful Servant,

“ JA. PERRY.”

To Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“ Mayfield, Sunday night, 1814.

“ My dear Rogers,

“ I have taken it for granted that you have all been too occupied with your sovereigns, &c., to give one thought to an humble cottager like myself, and have accordingly refrained from interrupting your ‘emperorial’ (as the Myronian Gallery has it) delirium, till the fever had been well sweated off in balls and processions. From what I read in the papers, I conclude that, mad as London has often been, it never was so gloriously mad before ; and if I could have known with certainty that another week would have brought on the fit, I should have been very glad to have waited to witness it, though, as it is, I feel so happy and quiet once more with my cottage, and my Bessy, and my books, and my Barbara, that I cannot say I much regret the loss ; and I shall the less care about it, if you will write me a long account of all that has been ridiculous (for that is the best part, after all) in these shows and ceremonies. How does 'our fat friend' go on? among all these fighting chieftains, he seems particularly to distinguish himself in what is called fighting shy. Is he or is he not hissed wherever he goes? and is the Princess of W. likely to survive Paul Methuen's speeches in her favour? Tell me all these important points, and likewise, whether you faced the sovereigns in full dress anywhere, and whether they expressed curiosity to see any of us Authors, or were merely contented with the Prince Regent, and such food as their worthy chamberlain catered for them? Were they civil to the Opposition, and did Lady Jersey tell them, as she told Prince Paul and many others, that the Regent was a 'bête?' I hope she did.—You see I leave you no excuse for withholding news from me, for I put all the questions that I wish to have answered, and as the Sovereigns leave town on Tuesday, you will have time to attend a little to me.

"Poor Bessy is beginning to cry out a little, and I should hope in my next letter I shall have to announce the dear girl's safe recovery; her delight at my return, and her gratitude for my hastening it, more than repaid me for a hundred such sacrifices. I have written but sixty lines of my work since I came down; it really required some time to recall my emigrant thoughts, and establish order in the capital again; but I shall now go on vigorously.

"Where is Jacqueline? * she too, I fear, has suffered in this bustle of royalty. Do send her down here as soon as possible out of such company. Ever yours,

"T. MOORE.

* Jacqueline, published with Lara, and called by Lord Byron "Larry and Jacky."

“ Pray remember me to your sister. One of the things I have thought of since I came away is, how very little I saw of your brother Henry while I was in town.”

From Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“ Brighton, Aug. 19. 1814.

“ My dear Moore,

“ I hope by this time you are relieved from all your anxieties, and Psyche from her miscalculations, and that in your next, addressed to me at the Poste Restante, Geneva, I shall hear that all is as you wish. I am here on the sea-shore with my sister and Mackintosh, who both desire to be most kindly remembered to you. We have secured a cabin in the ‘ Nautilus,’ and in three hours shall be on the great ocean. To-morrow we hope to breakfast at Dieppe, and to arrive in Paris on Tuesday. There we propose to spend three or four days, and then press on to the Ice-Mountains in Switzerland. I wish with all my heart that you were with us, my dear Moore, and so do we all; but as that is impossible (a human soul with all your intelligence, in a human frame with all her sensibilities, being bound hither, from what pre-existent state I know not), all I can do is to tell you of my regret, and to send you the last bit of paper I shall scrawl upon before I leave England. Lord B. has been at Hastings; he is now in London, and I had a glimpse of him in his vis-a-vis the day I left Town, but his sister was with him, — so much did not pass between us. He talks of instantly setting off for Paris. Murray, I hear, has sold 10,000 copies of ‘ Lara.’ Jeffrey’s review of him has delighted him much. I am happy to hear of your prose, though I could wish you had overlooked poor Lord T. I hope your verse is as flourishing. An Epistle the other day in the 'Chronicle' I could not mistake; but, I will confess to you, exquisite as it is, I wish you would take up your satirical pen and throw it into the bottomless pit. Write a Lutrin, a Vert-vert, a Rape of the Lock, though, if you will; and I flatter myself, when the Peris have ceased to be your nightly visitants, that you will do some such thing. Lady Donegal and Miss G. are now, as you know, at Tunbridge. Your friend, the Regent, is here, and probably in the arms of Morpheus at this moment; though the god must envy Atlas himself this weather. How long we shall remain abroad I cannot say—set a beggar on horseback, &c. &c.;—but I hope to see you, or your annual Revelation of yourself, in May next. Pray give my love to the Madonna della Scdia—for such she is by this time again, I hope—with her babes about her; and believe me to be,

“ Ever yours,

“ S. R.”

To Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“Donnington, Monday, Aug. 29. 1814.

“ My dear Rogers,

“ This is by way of answer to a letter of yours which I have not received; for I left home on Tuesday last, and Bessy tells me there is a letter from you waiting me there. I am come for a few days' rummage of the Library, on the subject of the Fathers, which is to form one of my articles for Jeffrey. People will be a little surprised, I think, at my leaving the mothers and daughters, to take to the Fathers; but, heaven knows! it is time for me — a third child! only think. My dear Bessy got over it very safely and stoutly, and I left her coming on as well as possible. I took the Derby Races and Ball in my way hither, and met a very tolerable cluster of London stars there: your old friend Miss Fawkeners in the character of Mrs. Henry Cavendish; which connection I was so totally ignorant of, that I told her I was quite surprised to meet her in Derbyshire! The Duke of Devonshire has given me a very kind invitation to Chatsworth for next Thursday, to meet the Harringtons, and stay a week; but I do not think I shall go. I have no servant to take with me, and my hat is shabby, and the seams of my best coat are beginning to look white, and — in short, if a man cannot step upon equal ground with these people, he had much better keep out of their way. I can meet them on pretty fair terms at a dinner or a ball; but a whole week in the same house with them detects the poverty of a man's ammunition deplorably; to which, if we add that I should detect the poverty of theirs in another way, I think the obvious conclusion is, that we ought to have nothing to do with each other. At the same time, I think the Duke one of the civilest persons in the whole Peerage; and he took every opportunity of speaking kindly and familiarly to me at Derby.

“Are you thinking of France? I have put it out of my head for some time, upon many accounts. This reviewing, and my Sixth Number of ‘Melodies,’ has thrown me back considerably in my work; and if I let pass this next season without producing it, I fear it will turn out a fausse couche entirely. I am more anxious than ever that you should keep my secret about the plan and the title, as I really am so nervous upon the matter, that I have serious thoughts of passing off a pious fraud upon the public, and saying, when I publish these Tales, that they have merely sprung out of the poem I have been employed upon, and that I reserve that for publication at some future period. This will not only take away all air of pretension from the Tales, but it will keep indulgence alive by giving a hope of something better unproduced. Don't betray me;—no one but yourself and Bessy knows the truth; and I will not venture to ask your opinion upon the morality of the step, lest you should say something to scare me out of it. For my own part, I think every possible trick fair with that animal feræ naturæ, the Public.

“How do ‘Lara’ and ‘Jacqueline’ get on? I see them on every table; so I suppose they prosper. There are some of our fair neighbours who read ‘Jacqueline’ much oftener than their prayer-books.

“Ever, my dear Rogers, yours most truly,

“THOMAS MOORE.

“I shall not get your letter (to which this is an answer) before Wednesday evening.”

From Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“Venice, Oct. 17. 1814.

“My dear Moore,

“Last night in my gondola I made a vow I would write you a letter if it was only to beg you would write to me at Rome. Like the great Marco Polo, however, whose tomb I saw to-day, I have a secret wish to astonish you with my travels, and would take you with me, as you would not go willingly, from London to Paris, and from Paris to the Lake of Geneva, and so on to this city of romantic adventure, the place from which he started. I set out in August last, with my sister and Mackintosh. He parted with us in Switzerland, since which time we have travelled on together; and happy should we have been could you and Psyche have made a quartett of it. I hope all her predictions have long ago been fulfilled to your mind, and that she, and you, and the bambini are all as snug and as happy as you can wish to be. By the way, I forgot one of your family, who, I hope, is still under your roof. I mean one of nine sisters—the one I have more than once made love to. With another of them, too, all the world knows your good fortune. Apropos of love, and such things, is Lord Byron to be married to Miss Milbanke, at last? I have heard it. But to proceed to business; Chamouny, and the Mer de Glace, Voltaire's chamber at Ferney, Gibbon's terrace at Lausanne, Rousseau's Isle of St. Pierre, the Lake of Lucerne, and the little Cantons, the passage over the Alps, the Lago Maggiore, Milan, Verona, Padua, Venice,—what shall I begin with? but I believe I must refer you to my three Quartos on the subject, whenever they choose to appear. The most wonderful thing we have seen is Bonaparte's road over the Alps—as smooth as that in Hyde Park, and not steeper than St. James's Street. We left Savoy at seven in the morning, and slept at Domo Dossola in Italy that night. For twenty miles we descended through a mountain-pass, as rocky, and often narrower, than the narrowest part of Dovedale; the road being sometimes cut out of the mountain, and three times carried through it, leaving the torrent (and such a torrent!) to work its way by itself. The passages or galleries, as I believe the French engineers call them, were so long as to require large openings here and there for light; and the roof was hung with icicles, which the carriage shattered as it passed along, and which fell to the ground with a shrill sound. We were eight hours in climbing to the top, and only three in descending. Our wheel was never locked, and our horses were almost always in a gallop. But I must talk to you a little about Venice. I cannot tell you what I felt, when the postillion turned gaily round, and, pointing with his whip, cried out, 'Venezia!' For there it was, sure enough, with its long line of domes and turrets glittering in the sun. I walk about here all day long in a dream. Is that the Rialto, I say to myself? Is this St. Mark's Place? Do I see the Adriatic? I think if you and I were together here, my dear Moore, we might manufacture something from the ponte dei sospiri, the scala dei giganti, the piombi, the pozzi, and the thousand ingredients of mystery and terror that are here at every turn. Nothing can be more luxurious than a gondola and its little black cabin, in which you can fly about unseen, the gondoliers so silent all the while. They dip their oars as if they were afraid of disturbing you; yet you fly. As you are rowed through one of the narrow streets, often do you catch the notes of a guitar, accompanied by a female voice, through some open window; and at night, on the Grand Canal, how amusing is it to observe the moving lights (every gondola has its light), one now and then shooting across at a little distance, and vanishing into a smaller canal. Oh, if you had any pursuit of love or pleasure, how nervous would they make you, not knowing their contents or their destination! and how infinitely more interesting, as more mysterious, their silence, than the noise of carriage-wheels! Before the steps of the Opera-house, they are drawn up in array, with their shining prows of white metal, waiting for the company. One man remains in your boat, while the other stands at the door of your loge. When you come out, he attends you down, and calling 'Pietro,' or 'Giacomo,' is answered from the water, and away you go. The gliding motion is delightful, and would calm you after any scene in a casino. The gondolas of the Foreign Ministers carry the national flag. I think you would be pleased with an Italian theatre. It is lighted only from the stage, and the soft shadows that are thrown over it produce a very visionary effect. Here and there the figures in a box are illuminated from within, and glimmering and partial lights are almost magical. Sometimes the curtains are drawn, and you may conceive what you please. This is indeed a fairy land, and Venice particularly so. If at Naples you see most with the eye, and at Rome with the memory, surely at Venice you see most with the imagination. But enough of Venice. To-morrow we bid adieu to it,—most probably I shall never see it again. We shall pass through Ferrara to Bologna, then cross the Apennines to Florence, and so on to Rome, where I shall look for a line from you.

“ Pray, have you sermonized the discordant brothers? I hope you have, and not forgotten yourself on the occasion. When you write to Tunbridge, pray remember me. Tell Lady D. I passed the little Lake of Lowertz, and saw the melancholy effects of the downfall. It is now a scene of desolation, and the little town of Goldau is buried many fathom deep. It is a sad story, and you shall have it when we meet. I received a very kind letter from her at Tunbridge, and mean to answer it. I hope to meet you in London-town, when you visit it next; at least I shall endeavour to do so. My sister unites with me in kindest remembrance to Mrs. Moore; and pray, pray believe me, to be,

“ Yours ever,
“ S. R.

“ At Verona we were shown Juliet’s tomb in a Convent garden! In the evening we went to the play, but saw neither Mercutio, nor ‘ the two Gentlemen ’ there.”

To Miss Godfrey.

“ Oct. 29. 1814.

“ I ought to have written much oftener lately (I mean much oftener than—not at all), but that I have been most overwhelmingly busy, making up for a whole month’s idleness, which was inflicted on me by a visit from my musical friend, Sir John Stevenson. We did something, however, in Power’s way, with whom I am again to start, as before, next March. This was my own wish, as I am anxious to keep the rest of this year unencumbered by any more jobs for him, and free for the final completion of my never-long-enough-to-be-expected poem. I suppose you have, before this, seen my débüt as a reviewer. I have heard nothing of it but from Jeffrey and Byron; the former of whom says ‘ nothing can be more entertaining or more cleverly written; ’ and the latter, ‘ There is wit, taste, and learning in every line of that critique, and by G—— I think you can do anything. ’ My article upon Mr. Boyd’s Translations from the Fathers is to be in the next number; and then, I think, I have done.

“ I am sorry, very sorry, to hear that dear Lady Donegal still suffers from those attacks, and I really think the sooner she tries other air and other scenes, the better. It is a sad thing to think that there is such sweet sunshine going on in France and Italy, which we might all be enjoying instead of coughing and shivering through the fogs of this most unamiable climate. How nice it would be (you recollect my old word) if you should be starting next year at the same time that I set out on my experimental or pioneer visit to prepare the way there for the transportation of my whole family. This is a wicked trick of Mr. Vansittart's, if true, to send the income-tax riding double after all travellers. He sticks to one like the little old man in the 'Arabian Nights.'

"My good Bessy is very well, and getting up her looks again; but I am sorry to see this last little one has increased her figure a good deal; and I very much fear she will grow large. She does not like the idea of going to France, and has hopes that I shall be disappointed and give up my resolution, when I have seen it myself; but she makes no difficulties about anything I wish, and I know she would soon get reconciled to the change; but still it is very possible that what she looks to may happen, and that I shall not like the country well enough, upon trial, to make it my residence. The moment I mention its cheapness all her objections vanish. Tell me a little of what you hear about it in this respect when you write.

"I agree with you that a great part of 'Lara' is very prosy and somnific; but it has many striking parts, and the death is very fine. 'Lara's' waiting-maid, poor 'Jacqueline,' is in general, I find, thought rather niaise than otherwise; which I am sorry for, as Rogers sets his heart upon fame, and his heart is a good one, that deserves what it wishes.

"You must not mind the blunders and blots in this letter, as I write it after dinner, with Barbara on my back.

“ Ever affectionately, with love to Lady D., and kindest remembrances to Philly, “ Yours,

“ T. M.”

From Miss Godfrey.

“ Tunbridge Wells, Nov. 12. 1814.

“ You should have heard long since how pleased we were with your Petit Tableau de Famille. If we had not been so very much occupied in restoring the Bourbons to the throne of their ancestors—that job being performed to the astonishment of all mankind—one may now quietly sit down and ask oneself whether one is really awake, or only in a sort of extraordinary dream; and as I am at present pretty sure of being awake, I just civilly beg to know what you think of it all? Have you no ode, satire, or ballad ready for the occasion, and will you let that greatest of tyrants make his exit without hissing him off the stage? Have you seen Lord Byron’s ode? They say it was written in five minutes. I think it was a pity he did not take a quarter of an hour, and make it more perfect. It is not a bad outline; at least one rejoices so in the subject, that one is disposed to judge favourably of the poem. You will rejoice to hear that our Most Gracious Regent is in the third heaven, and attributes every wonderful event now passing in the world to his own great talents. To say the truth, I am not surprised at his delight, for he has been in a most glorious run of luck. Bab was presented to Louis XVIII. and the Duchess d'Angoulême at their drawing-rooms, and was very much pleased with them both. The King has a happy talent of expressing himself, and has gratified several people by àpropos compliments. Among others, the Grattans. He said to James Grattan, that he must congratulate him upon being the son of such a father. It is said to be an absolute fact, that Bonaparte expressed a wish to be let live in this country, as he felt a reliance upon the generosity of the English character. I think it was a great compliment. When do you think of coming to town? Pray come soon, and look on a little at the wonders of the day. The Emperor of Russia is to be here in a fortnight, and the Duchess of Oldenburg is established here for the present. They say she inherits all the talents of Catherine, with a pleasing appearance and very captivating manners. If you get a cheap little lodging, it will be your only expense; for as to breakfast, dinner, and supper, you know you have always more waiting for you in every corner of the town than you can possibly eat. If Bessy comes with you, she will always find us too happy to have her, and only regretting that we have no bed to offer her. So pray, dear Moore, let us hear that you have arranged all your plans to pay us a visit very soon. Bring your poem with you, and publish it; for it really is time to send it forth to seek its fortune. Rogers' friendship for us has all oozed out, like Acres', and we are here waiting till that happy moment arrives. We have outlived everybody at Tunbridge except the Fincastles, Hopes, Rogers, and Lady Ellenborough. The Fincastles grow upon me; I am always pleased in their society. * * * William Spencer has been here from time to time for a week, but never longer. He wrote a prologue for Lady Susan's play, and another little thing, that I will copy for you in this letter if I can. It was written upon seeing a rose-tree between two willows.

“ Yon lonely rose, that climbs the eaves,
How bright its dew-dropp'd tint appears !
As if Aurora on its leaves
Had left her blushes with her tears.

“ And see two drooping willows nigh,
What heat their sickly foliage blanches !
As if a lover's burning sigh
Won all the gale that fann'd their branches.

“ Ah ! wish ye not, pale plants of woe,
Yon rose's blooming state your own ?
Methinks I hear them murmur, ' No ;
Yon rose is blooming — but alone !

“ ‘ Know'st thou two hearts by love subdued ?
Ask them which fate they covet, whether
Health, joy, and life in solitude,
Or sickness, grief, and death together.’ ”

“ I suppose no woman in her sound mind ever wrote any man so long a letter before. Well, I shall be more moderate the next time. Philly desires her compliments to your sister (why should not I do the same?), and her love to you. Yours, very truly and sincerely,

“ M. G.

“ Say kind things for us to Lady Charlotte Rawdon. Do you see her much ? ”

To Miss Dalby.

“ 1815.

“ My dear Mary,

“ You will, I am sure, be sorry at the news Bessy has given you ; and I assure you, you and the sweet fields about us are the only regrets we have in the place ourselves; but what can we do? Shaw will not let me have this house, and you will not make Mr. Milward let me have his, and with those children in this nutshell I should get crazy (or rather cracked, as it's a nutshell); but come see us you must as soon as the weather grows fine, and we will then arrange about 'annihilating both space and time' for our meetings hereafter.

"I am writing away hard and fast, both at my Poem and the 'Sacred Melodies.' My week at Chatsworth was very delightful. You cannot imagine what a sensation my 'Song to the Prince' produced (which is now four verses): copies were sent off in all directions to all possible Whig lords and ladies.

"Bessy is very indignant at Lady Loudon's calling her 'little.' She says it is all owing to me that she is supposed to be little.

"Yours ever,

"T. MOORE."

To Samuel Rogers, Esq.

"Mayfield Cottage, Monday, May 22. 1815.

"Welcome, my dear Rogers, most welcome back again. I was beginning to feel seriously anxious about you, and feared very much I should not hear any tidings of you before my departure — yes, my departure. You have caught me upon the wing for Ireland: this very evening we set off. I have long, you know, been promising my dear mother a sight of her new relations; and, anxious as I was myself to see them altogether, I would willingly have still deferred it a little longer; but the declining health of my mother, and poor Bessy's very delicate state, both in spirits and health, since the loss of our last little child (Olivia Byron), have altogether determined me to sacrifice my own convenience to their gratification. The sight of her little grandchildren will be new life to my mother, and the change of scene and air will be sure to do Bessy service. You will hear from our friends in town that I had determined upon a trip thither, and I now more than ever regret my inability to achieve it, as I should have had at least one shake of the hand from you; but the exchequer was not adequate to the two journeys, and I was obliged to sacrifice London to Dublin. I shall return myself in August; but if the sea-bathing agrees with Bessy, I shall prevail upon her to stay behind me as long as she can take advantage of it.

“ I have sold my Poem (for so it must be called still) for three thousand pounds! There will of course be a revision of the contract, and perhaps a retractation, when I disclose the real nature of the work; but I have gained at least the tribute to my reputation, and I do not much fear any considerable diminution of the sum, when they find the same quantum of poetry they have bargained for (5000 lines!), but divided into tales instead of one continued poem. Pray keep my secret about it with your accustomed fidelity. Your calling it ‘my tales’ in your letter quite startled me — I felt as if the whole thing were known, — for I never call it anything but my poem.

“ I cannot write any more now, for we are in the very agonies of packing; but you shall hear from me from Dublin.

“ Your letter from Venice I received, but not till the end of March, when I knew it would be useless to answer it. It made me unhappy for days. How I envy you!

“ Best regards to your sister. The next time we meet, my dear Rogers, it will be, I hope, for a long spell.

“ Ever, ever yours most affectionately,

“ THOMAS MOORE.”

“ To Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“ June 7. 1815.

“ My dear Rogers,

“ I snatch one moment from the bustle of greetings and visitings that assail us here, to tell you of our safe arrival and the thousand hearty welcomes we have met with. If we had as many hands as Briareus, they would be all nearly shaken off. My friend Richard Power, who is now in England, has lent us his house (one of the best in Dublin, with an excellent library,) during our stay, and all Dublin is at our doors, in carriages, cars, tilburies, and jingles, from morning till night, to the no small astonishment of a Derbyshire maid we have brought with us to take care of the little ones. The sight of us has been quite a renewal of the lease of life to my dear good mother and father, and I had the happiest dinner among them all on my birthday,—far the happiest I have enjoyed for a long time. They loved Bessy upon trust, before they saw her, and the little children are never out of their arms. We are going to pay some visits at country-houses next week, amongst others to Lord Granard's, and altogether I shall have but little breathing-time till my return to the dear cottage, which I hope to achieve before the end of August, and to which (in spite of all the cordial chaos about me) I look forward with a feeling most ungratefully impatient.

“ I have seen Curran once ; he talked of the ‘ intensity ’ of your attachment to me, and, for once, I hoped his style was not exaggerative. Of Lord Moira, too, he spoke much, but in a far different strain :—‘ I have mourned over him ; I have held an inquest upon the carcase of his dead fame, &c. &c. ; ’ and then finished by a climax quite characteristic of his eloquence,—‘ that, in short, it was but too true he (Lord M——) had a great dash of the Piper about him ! ’ Notwithstanding all this bad taste, there is nothing like him for fancy.

“ Do, my dear Rogers, let me hear from you as soon as possible, and direct, 7. Kildare Street, Dublin. Bessy, I hope, is somewhat better, though she hardly knows how she is in this eternal bustle. She has this instant looked over me, and bid me not forget ‘ her love.’

“ Best remembrances to your sister, from,

“ Ever faithfully yours,

“ THOMAS MOORE.”

To Lady Donegal.

“ Kilfane, July 3. 1815.

“ Your letter, which Arthur gave me in Dublin, found me so whirled about in visitings, dinnerings, hand-shakings, &c., that I had not a moment to myself, and I knew you would forgive my deferring my answer till I got a little out of the bustle. Our reception, indeed, has been highly flattering and gratifying, and the attention every one has paid to Bessy is as creditable to themselves as it is pleasant to her and me. We are now with Richard Power’s brother, who has a most beautiful place here, and gives us a very hospitable welcome. We have been with the

Bryans for a week or ten days, and a few days with Joe Atkinson's daughter, Mrs. T. Kearney. Next week we return to Dublin, that Bessy may get a little sea-bathing, which has been ordered as quite necessary for her; and thence we have two more visits to make, to the Duke of Leinster and Lord Granard, if the latter family shall have sufficiently recovered their grief for poor Hastings* to admit us. What fearful and wonderful things are happening! Tragedy and farce come so mixed up together, that to do justice to the world, we ought to be like the grimacier at Astley's, and cry at one side of the face while we laugh with the other. I suppose it is all over with the Great Nation, and with the Napoleons, both great and small. His Imperial Majesty, I perceive, is coming quietly to England, and you will perhaps have an opportunity of letting your house in Davies Street to him; though I rather think you would burn it to the ground after such profanement, as the gentleman did with his mansion after the Constable Bourbon had slept in it. I am afraid you and I would have some little squabbles about the poor Bourbons if we were together just now; and I hope, for the sake of your repose in this very hot weather, that all the persons around you are thorough coinciding, sympathising, and never-ceasing Tories. Reprobate as I am, I am sure you will give credit to my prudence and good-taste in declining the grand public dinner that was about to be given me upon my arrival in Dublin. I found there were too many of your favourites, the Catholic orators, at the bottom of the design,—that the fountain of honour was too much of a holy-water fount for me to dabble in it with either safety or pleasure; and, though I should have liked mightily the opportunity of making a treasonable speech or two after dinner, I thought the wisest thing I could do was to decline the honour. Being thus disappointed in me, they have given a grand public dinner to an eminent toll-gatherer, whose patriotic and elegant method of collecting the tolls entitles him, I have no doubt, to the glory of such a celebration. Alas! alas! it must be confessed that our poor country, altogether, is a most wretched concern; and as for the Catholics (as I have just said in a letter written within these five minutes) one would heartily wish them all in their own Purgatory, if it were not for their adversaries, whom one wishes still further.

* Honourable Hastings Forbes, killed at Waterloo.

“I have written to Lord Byron about your Tunbridge friend, though I fear the application will have but little success. Did you hear that I was applied to to join the Committee?

“Bessy, as you may collect from what I have already said, is not very strong; but the little ones are quite well, and go about with us everywhere.

“Best love to dear Mary, and believe me, ever

“Most affectionately yours,

“T. MOORE.”

To Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“Dublin, Aug. 9. 1815.

“My dear Rogers,

“I am most anxious to hear something about you. I’m sure you do not like me in Ireland, for you never write to me here. There are now two able and full-grown epistles of mine unanswered near three months. However, on matter for that, I do seriously believe that they who bottle up their remembrance of each other have it in much higher order and effervescence when they meet, than they who let it out, drop by drop, through the post-office ; and I can answer at least for my own being at this moment as strong, cordial, and racy as ever, my dear Rogers.

“ We have made two country tours since I wrote to you, and are now just returned from a three weeks’ visit to my married sister in Tipperary. Alas ! it would be but a poor return for your delicious pictures of Italy—your ‘ thoughts that breathed ’ of the sweet air in which they were born, and your ‘ words that burned ’ with the pure sunshine which they described, to give you any account of what I either felt or saw in the foggy, boggy regions of Tipperary. The only thing I could match you in is banditti ; and if you can imagine groups of ragged Shanavests (as they are called) going about in noonday, armed and painted over like Catabaw Indians, to murder tithe-proctors, land-valuers, &c., you have the most stimulant specimen of the sublime that Tipperary affords. The country, indeed, is in a frightful state ; and rational remedies have been delayed so long, that nothing but the sword will answer now. We lost a visit to the Grattans by this barbarous trip—a sort of sacrifice which I am often obliged to make, but which your savoir-faire so happily always extricates you from. On our return to town last week, in high spirits at the prospect of sailing immediately for England, and getting back to our dear, doubly dear cabin once more, poor Bessy had to encounter the shock of finding our darling Barbara (whom we left at my father’s) dangerously ill of a bilious fever. Nothing could be more unseasonably distressing. She is now, however, recovering rapidly ; and if in a week after the receipt of this you will sit down, like a good fellow, and answer it, your letter may find me, I trust, at Mayfield Cottage.

“ Persia, of course, has suffered by Tipperary ; but I shall work double tides to make it up again.

“ Best regards to your sister from hers and yours, faithfully,

“ THOMAS MOORE.”

To Mary Godfrey.

“ Mayfield Cottage, Thursday night, Oct. 19. 1815.

“ There is nothing like demanding an answer by return of post. It is the only way with such correspondents as I am, and I wish you always had some baron or other to put me in requisition, for many is the self-reproach it would save me ; but I know no more of said baron than of the man in the moon, nor has William Spencer (who will be ‘responsible,’ poor fellow ! for any thing but his debts) ever written me a single line on the subject ; you know, however, I cannot give words for music to any one but Power. I am bound hand and foot,—at least my lyrical feet,—and you may tell the Baron it would cost me five hundred a year to give him even so much as a ‘Down derry down’ of my own composition. Strange that such penalty should be on Tweedle-dum and Tweedle-dee, but so it is, and you can swear to it, for you read the deed. We arrived here two or three weeks since, after the most anxious journey I ever had to encounter. Poor Bessy (who was by no means well when we embarked) suffered so much on a long and sickening passage, from her own illness and attention to the children, that on our arrival at Holyhead, she was most alarmingly indisposed, and it was with great delay and many difficulties that I was able to get her along the road at all. The sight of her own little home, however, and the comfort of being there after the very bothering bustle of our Irish visit, was like magic in restoring her, and though she is still very weak, I have great hopes that rest and care will bring her about again.—Among other welcome things that greeted me at home, was your thrice-welcome letter from Tunbridge, and if yours were but ‘generous letters that no answer wait,’ or if there were any way in which you could know how thoroughly they delight me, and how warmly I remember you both every hour of my existence, without my taking a dirty pen in my hand to tell you so, the whole pleasure of the thing would be as unalloyed as it is delightful ; but since it is impossible, I suppose, for me to enjoy that perfection of friendly correspondence, where (as Sir Boyle Roche says) ‘the reciprocity would be all on one side,’ and where you alone should write and I should read, I must only endeavour to muster up as much reciprocity as possible, and if you will even give me two letters for one, I shall be satisfied.

“ I am returning to work again, but the idleness of our Irish trip, and the necessity of completing my year’s job for Power, make sad havoc in my time and thoughts. How unlucky I have been in not seeing Paris before it was ‘shorn of its beams!’ Often do I think with regret of the opportunity, the golden one, you gave me and I missed. It is a proof perhaps that my life has not been very miserable, when I say that the loss of that opportunity is one of the things I most regret in the course of it. How do you like the way your friends, the legitimates, are disposing of the world? At all events, the ball is completely at their feet, and we shall see whether old women priests and fat regents, assisted by French renegades and drunken corporals, are, after all, the best agents of Providence for the welfare of mankind. I suppose they are, at least it is but loyal to think so. The boxing epistle is mine, the only thing of the kind I have done for a long time.

“I have written often to Byron about your Tunbridge friend; but he seems to say, like King Arthur, ‘petition me no petitions,’ and will not mind me; I will try Kin-naird next.

“Love and regards from both to both.

“Ever yours,

“T. M.”

From Mary Godfrey.

“Nov. 6. 1815.

“As I have the happy talent of believing everything I wish to believe from those that I like, I take au pied de la lettre all the kind and flattering things you say to us in your last letter; and being very willing to pay any price for the pleasure of hearing from you, we agree to the proposal of sending you two letters for your one; and, I assure you, if you knew the aversion I have taken to writing and Bab’s idleness upon that subject, you would understand in some degree how much we value your letters. We were quite amused at the way William Spencer had done the honours of you to the poor Baron, who was in despair at his disappointment. It seems Mazinghi (I really don’t know how to spell the man’s name, if I were to die for it) told him that he knew you could not assist him on account of your engagement with Power. But William Spencer said that was all fudge; he would settle that with you. Bab is very busy preparing for a visit to Windsor to-morrow. She is to be in the Castle and to spend a few days there. She implores you, for her sake, to spare all the females of that family and the Duke of York. The Princesses are the greatest admirers of your Melodies, and even of the last. The Princess Augusta has composed very pretty variations to 'Love's Young Dream.' And these are the Princess Elizabeth's own words in a letter written about a month ago: 'My music goes on ill without I am tempted to sing an Irish Melody. I hear that your friend Anacreon Moore is bringing or has brought out another set. How lovely is his taste!' Bab trembles lest anything in this Cumberland* business should tempt your wicked pen; but she knows for her sake you will resist temptation this once. As to our fat and gracious Regent, he is very much at your service to do whatever you like with him, though, to say the truth, you have done pretty well for him already. I wish Bessy would copy your boxing epistle and send it to us. We are sincerely glad to hear she is recovering. Alas! I fear the air of Ireland is good for none but rebels. When is your poem to be ready for the press; and when shall we see you again? Walter Scott's 'Waterloo' is not the Duke of Wellington's Waterloo. It is by all accounts a very poor performance. I have not seen it yet, nor am I very impatient about it, as I have read the gazette of that grand battle, in which it is better described, and just as poetically, as I am told. Money, however, is his object; and besides what he makes by this poem, he is to publish his 'Travels to the Netherlands,' the price agreed on, before he set out, five hundred pounds. Rogers is just returned from Paris, and in the very extreme of agreeableness.

* The suicide of Sellis, the Duke of Cumberland's butler, which caused great scandal at the time.

“ The post bell rings ; so farewell. Very kind remembrances to Bessy.

“ Truly and sincerely yours,

“ M. G.”

To Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“ Mayfield Cottage, Dec. 26. 1815.

“ My dear Rogers,

“ As this is about the time you said you should be on your return to London, from your bright course through that noble Zodiac you’ve been moving in, I hasten to welcome you thither, not alas ! with my hand, as I could wish,—that joy must not be for a few months longer,—but with my warmest congratulations on your safe and sound return from the Continent, and hearty thanks for your kind recollections of me—recollections, which I never want the outward and visible sign of letter-writing to assure me of, however delightful and welcome it may be, in addition to knowing that there’s sweet music in the instrument, to hear a little of its melody now and then. This image will not stand your criticism, but you know its meaning, and that’s enough—much more indeed than we Irish image-makers can in general achieve. My desire to see you for yourself alone, is still more whetted by all I hear of the exquisite gleanings you have made on your tour. The Donegals say you have seen so much, seen everything so well, and describe it all so picturesquely, that there is nothing like the treat of hearing you talk of your travels—how I long for that treat !

You are a happy fellow, my dear Rogers; I know no one more nourri des fleurs of life, no one who lives so much 'apis matinae more' as yourself. The great regret of my future days (and I hope the greatest) will be my loss of the opportunity of seeing that glorious gallery, which, like those 'domes of Shadukiam and Amberabad,' that Nourmahal saw in the 'gorgeous clouds of the west,' is now dispersed and gone for ever. It is a loss that never can be remedied; but still perhaps our sacrifices are among our pleasantest recollections, and I ought not to feel sorry that the time and money, which would have procured for myself this great gratification, have been employed in making other hearts happy,—better hearts than mine, and better happiness than that would have been. With respect to my Peris, thus stands the case, and remember that they are still to remain (where Peris best like to be) under the rose. I have nearly finished three tales, making, in all, about three thousand five hundred lines, but my plan is to have five tales, the stories of all which are arranged, and which I am determined to finish before I publish—no urgings nor wonderings nor tauntings shall induce me to lift the curtain till I have grouped these five subjects in the way I think best for variety and effect. I have already suffered enough by premature publication. I have formidable favourites to contend with, and must try to make up my deficiencies in dash and vigour by a greater degree, if possible, of versatility and polish. Now it will take, at the least, six thousand lines to complete this plan, i. e. between two and three thousand more than I have yet done. By May next I expect to have five thousand finished. This is the number for which the Longmans stipulated, and accordingly in May I mean to appear in London, and nominally deliver the work into their hands. It would be then too late (even if all were finished) to think of going to press; so that I shall thus enjoy the credit with the Literary Quidnuncs of having completed my task, together with the advantage of the whole summer before me to extend it to the length I purpose. Such is the statement of my thousands, &c., which I am afraid you will find as puzzling as a speech of Mr. Vansittart's; but it is now near twelve o'clock at night, which being an hour later than our cottage rules allow, I feel it impossible to be luminous any longer—in which tendency to eclipse, my candle sympathises most gloomily.

“ Your poor friend Psyche is by no means well. I was in hopes that our Irish trip would have benefited her; but her weakness and want of appetite continue most distressingly, and our cold habitation in the fields has now given her a violent cough, which if it does not soon get better, will alarm me exceedingly. I never love her so well as when she is ill, which is perhaps the best proof how really I love her. How do Byron and my Lady go on? there are strange rumours in the country about them.

“ Ever yours, my dear Rogers,

“ THOMAS MOORE.”

From Lady Donegal.

“ Jan. 7. 1816.

“ A thousand happy Christmases to you and yours, and a hundred thanks for your two little notes, particularly for the last, which announces your intention of trusting yourself in this wicked town early in February; and so determined are we to have you all to ourselves, that we shall not name this intention to any one. And if we should be asked about you we intend to look very grave, and to lament over your love of the country, your never coming to town, &c. &c.; and so to reward us for this pious fraud you must breakfast, dine, and sup with us every day you are in London.

“ Barbara sends you lines written by William Spencer on her names, which are many. He passed six weeks at Tunbridge this autumn, and was a great acquisition; at times, however, his spirits failed him, and one could not help feeling the greatest compassion for him. Then they would return again, and he would become the life and soul of the party. Rogers we have seen but twice since our return. Jekyll is become a dear friend of ours; and, as I have not yet heard the same story twice, he amuses me very much. He talks of you with great regard for yourself, and admiration for your talents; besides which, he loves music passionately, and is delighted (if there is truth in man) with Barbara’s playing. But, what is more to the purpose, Cramer, who is now giving her lessons, says that she plays ‘charmingly.’ We are anxious that you should hear her, and we intend to bore you to death about her music when you come.

“ Do you know anything of St. Michan’s Church in Dublin? Lord Clifden tells miraculous stories of the wonderful things lately discovered in the vaults, such as— I have not time to tell you now, for I am later than I thought I was. Our loves to Bessy. Mary says she will not have her little Thomas forgotten for your John Russell. Barbara says she should like to join in the practical jokes very much.

“ Ever yours,

“ B. D.”

From Miss Godfrey.

“Monday, 1816.

“I have nothing to say for myself. With regard to my promise, I have broke it as gallantly as any French marshal could do. I think I shall behave better for the future—at least it is my intention, for I know I promise myself a great pleasure when I provoke a letter from you, and therefore I think I shall act no more à la Française, but adhere honourably to my engagements. I like Longman’s gallantry to Bessy prodigiously, and I hope you will reward it without loss of time, by giving him an immediate opportunity of publishing your poem, which all the world is expecting with impatience. Bab, who is the most heroic and loyal of women, wants you to celebrate Waterloo, the Duke of Wellington, ditto of York, &c. &c. As to Walter Scott, he ought to be shot upon the field of battle as a peace offering to the manes of the illustrious dead whose deeds he has so ill recorded. Charity, that covers a multitude of sins, and does many other kind and good acts, certainly does not produce good poems. ‘Waterloo’ was written for the benefit of the subscription for the soldiers, as ‘Don Roderick’ was for the Portuguese; they are both the worst things he has written, and not half so much to the purpose as a charity sermon. Rogers is wandering in the troubadour style from one great baron’s castle to another, recounting his adventures. Whether the ladies of the castles reward him with their smiles or not I have not heard, but I am sure he tells his story admirably well. He has seen everything so well, and tells it all so distinctly, and is so picturesque and so sentimental, that I think it a very great pleasure to listen to him when he is put upon the subject of his travels. He has been at Woburn, and is now at Bowood. I am surprised he has not written to you. London is very quiet, which suits us very much. The Berrys give parties; nobody else does; so they pick up all the curiosities they can lay their hands on. They are going to show off to-morrow evening Generals Sebastiani and Flahaut; they are come here for safety while the trials are going on at Paris. Sebastiani, by way of being very correct and proper, went to consult the French ambassador upon the propriety of going to the houses of the Opposition: he asked whether he might do it without giving offence to the English Government. The ambassador said he might certainly, for though the French Opposition were all traitors, in this country the Opposition was made up of loyal and respectable men. He then asked whether there would be any impropriety in going to the Miss Berrys. I suppose he was told not as he has been there three or four times since. How do you like the peace we have given the French? I am afraid, as it was you who wrote the boxing epistle, that you will not like it. You think those tigers and monkeys should be still left at large to worry their fellow-creatures. But you who love liberty, why don't you rejoice that its greatest enemies are punished and tied up? Don't be so inconsistent as to lament over the fall of a tyrant and his most willing and obedient slaves. I love freedom too well not to rejoice at the present prospect of things. That poor wretch, Ferdinand, is serving the cause in Spain; and Louis is much more ready to give a free constitution to France than France is to take it.

“ And so farewell till the next time. With kindest remembrances to Bessy, earnest prayers for the speedy appearance of your poem, a warm wish for something about Waterloo,

“ I remain, ever,

“ Yours sincerely,

“ M. G.

“ I did not receive your letter till Saturday, and intended to send you this to-day, but I find my frank is for to-morrow.”

From Leigh Hunt, Esq.

“ Vale of Health, Hampstead, Feb. 1816.

“ My dear Moore,

“ I believe I have owed you a letter for some time ;— I have tried to believe otherwise, — I was going to say I flattered myself you did not expect one, but this would have been a very erroneous phrase ; for the fact is, I have flattered myself that you did, and yet I have sent none. I preferred a bad conscience before a twinge to my self-love. Sticking fast, therefore, to the latter quality, I have hastened to make an author's amends by sending you my poem the moment it is out. You will receive in company with it a second edition of the Feast, which you ought to have had sooner ; but why do I stand making appeals to the forgiving part of you ? At all events you will see what I think of the said part, and will allow that I have not been making my court to an Edinburgh Reviewer. By the way, my recognition of you in that quality was just the reverse of what you seem to have imagined, for I did not detect you as the critic of Lord Thurlow, and did as the 'orthodox reviewer of the Fathers.' Do you think I have read Abelard and Eloisa for nothing? And yet I did not see why you should have escaped me in the other criticism. The touch about 'that eternal old gentleman Tithonus' was taking exquisite advantage of a common phrase, and haunted me like a tune long before I knew whose it was. I have never mentioned Tithonus since under any other cognomen.

"And now you must not think me coxcombical, if I say a word respecting an incident in my poem. It is about the book the lovers were reading when their passion overpowered them. You know you have written books which appear to me somewhat dangerous on this score, though it is a theory of mine that works of that description, upon the whole, do not do injury, otherwise (see my Pangloss Philosophy) Providence would not have suffered them. But I carry this theory, or whim, still farther, — or at least undertake to analyse it still farther; and it appears to me that those only are wrong in writing them who have a sense upon them of the injury they may be doing in some respects. In that case, the consciousness should outweigh the eventual excusability. Thus I should think you culpable now, if you have the suspicion that it would be wrong; but for the rest, I can only compare works of this nature to fuel which Providence seems to think it necessary occasionally to administer to such as are of dull natures, and *counter-*works to an equally judicious application of water when the fire threatens to be too great. Pray admire, at all events, the depth of my speculations. I was going to say something to this effect in my Preface, but thought that the public would not understand me. Indeed I profess to have no moral, as it is, in my poem, except perhaps charity; and a hint about the danger of progressiveness in love-matters; and some persons, I find, think me rather lax than otherwise.

“ If you see the Examiner here, as I hope you do, it may not be disagreeable to you to know that my chief coadjutor in the Round Table, and the writer of the theatrical criticism, is a brother reviewer of yours, and author of the articles on Novels and Romances, Sismondi’s Helicon Literature, and, I believe, a forthcoming one, on Schlegel’s Dramatic Essays. Pray encourage me, at your leisure, to write you another letter, and believe me, my dear Moore,

“ Ever sincerely yours,

“ LEIGH HUNT.

“ You must know I demand, as a poet, a right to interest myself in all ladies and their proceedings, and therefore give you plain notice of my regard for Mrs. T. M. on the score of her maternal affections. Mrs. H. wishes to know her, if it is only on that account.”

From Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“ April, 1816.

“ Many, many thanks, my dear Moore, for your very kind letter. I can assure you in everything I shall rejoice to meet you two-thirds of the way; and happy indeed shall I be to realise with your assistance all the delightful castles we have been building and furnishing so long. In six weeks I shall hope to see you. Though I have not pelted you with my correspondence, I have not thought of you the less ; and if you had received every letter I have begun to you, you might have perished under the papers. But pray, pray dine with me to-day, and bring Psyche and her babes,—the last shall be the ornaments of the dessert. You will meet the Dunmores, Spencer, and our friends from Davies Street, whose eyes twinkle whenever they talk of you. There are a thousand things I should like to say to you, a thousand very near my heart I should like to ask you about, but I dare not trust myself on paper, for I should never end.

“ Lord B.’s farewell, have you seen ? It is very beautiful. He goes to Italy in a few days. I see him now as he looked when I was leaving him one day, and as he cried out after me, with a gay face and a melancholy accent, ‘ Moore is coming, and you and he will be together, and I shall not be with you.’ It went to my heart, for he loves you dearly ; but I hope his feelings are as transient as they are acute. More of these things and of many others hereafter. My sister was with me when I received your letter yesterday morning, and desires to be remembered very affectionately to you. The oftener you and yours knock at her door at Highbury, the warmer, if possible, will be the welcome. If you had seen the tears she shed, poor thing, the day she left Italy, thinking I should never return with her, and knowing my brother never would, you would have liked her better than ever. Little Barbara is very anxious to see your little ones. She is a very engaging child, and grows more and more so every day. The Dunmores are the same as ever. Spencer I have not seen for many months.

“ Ever yours,

“ S. R.”

From Leigh Hunt, Esq.

“ Hampstead, May 21. 1816.

“ My dear Moore,

“ I left my card in Duke Street, after receiving your first kind note. I intended to catch you there, if possible, some morning early; but a world of unexpected and unpleasant business kept intercepting me day by day. I will, however, most assuredly be with you on Thursday morning, not indeed to breakfast,—which my health, though a great deal better upon the whole, will not allow,—but between 12 and 1 o'clock, when I shall perhaps catch you at yours; and will take a biscuit for my luncheon, whether I do or not. You see I give up all hope of seeing you here; not because I have not a great desire for it, as well as one or two other friends of mine who would give a great deal to meet you; but because I know how your time must be snatched out of your hands by all sorts of admirers, who have the advantage of me in point of situation; and I beg you will look upon this as one of the best and most generous proofs of my friendship I could give you. I shall therefore, as Montague Matthew* said in the House, when amidst calls for order, he contrived to mention all the horrors in Ireland, under pretence of waving the

* Montague Matthew, formerly M. P. for Tipperary; an eccentric character, but not without some native humour. Upon one occasion he was confounded (by some one in the House of Commons) with Mr. Matthew Montague (afterwards Lord Rokeby); on which Mr. Matthew very indignantly retorted, that there was as much difference between Matthew Montague and Montague Matthew, as between a horse chesnut and a chesnut horse.

detail,—say nothing about the absolute beauties of this place, neither shall I touch upon the hourly stages to and from London, nor make any suggestion of the pleasant association a certain visit would have left hereafter with me and my valley, nor stop to enter into any description of a study I have, commonly called a parlour, containing just room enough to hold a couple of us, together with a pianoforte, some pictures, a set of books, including the productions, poetical and musical, of one Thomas Moore. All this you will look upon as not having been said, in order to leave the generosity above-mentioned complete. Remember, therefore, between 12 and 1. Your shake of the hand is too good to lose at any time, especially after the experience of all sorts of meannesses and treacheries that I have witnessed and partly experienced lately. The cordiality of your last note told me more even than it usually does, and I said, ‘he has seen the Quarterly Review.’ One does not like to be the object of unpleasant criticism, whatever it is, especially if it tends for a while to hurt one’s fortunes; but in other respects, I can venture to tell you, that the article in question is too bad in every way to annoy me. I was prepared, of course, for a reasonable carbanado from the Government quarters, and even for a good deal of stout objection perhaps from more friendly ones, as far as difference of theory was concerned; but this assault is mere foaming at the mouth. I cannot bring myself to believe that the author is either Southey or Gifford, with all their party passion; and though the latter must have sanctioned the article, I think the passage upon the two extracts describing† * *

* * * should alone exonerate them. But I am chattering away here, as if I were already in Duke Street.

† MS. obliterated.

“Yours, my dear Moore, most heartily,
“LEIGH HUNT.”

To James Corry, Esq.

“Mayfield, July 1. 1816.

“My dear Corry,

“It is not right that you and I, whatever may be our respective lazinesses, should continue so long without hearing from each other. I thought to provoke you into some signs of animation, by sending you, about a month or two since, a newspaper with some account of my oratorical proceedings at Derby. But you were silent, and though I know of old that your epistolary fountain can run as readily as it runs pleasantly, yet, somehow, for me it has dried up of late, and you seem resolved to join the ranks of those unreasonable friends of mine, who will not write to me for that worst of all possible reasons, because I do not write to them. I was in hopes, as our friend Sam says, that you were above such ‘vulgar prejudices.’ Rogers and I, with quantities to say to each other, exchange letters about once a quarter. The Donegals (the most generous of you all) give me by regular agreement three letters for every one of mine; but Joe Atkinson is the most favoured of my correspondents, for he receives two letters from me every week — for my mother, and answers them punctually.

“I heard from him, of your celebration of Richard Power’s recovery, and I only wish, next to being there, that I had had your own account of it. When does he return?

“Do you know, between ourselves, I think it not at all unlikely that I shall, after the publication of my poem, take to living for two or three years in or near Dublin? What do you say to this? Or will you still continue saying nothing to me? I have some thoughts of undertaking a very voluminous work about Ireland, (if properly encouraged by patres nostri — the Longmans,) and this will require my residence, for at least the time I have mentioned, in Dublin. I think I shall be free, quite free, for the Kilkenny work, by the time Richard Power returns; but really till I get this three-thousand pounder fired off, it is in vain to think of doing any thing else well, and well should that be done which is done for you and him.

“Sometimes Bessy and I have thought it possible we should receive a line from you to say that you were coming to England this summer, and would give us a sight of you and Mrs. Corry at the cottage, — now or never, 'tis our last summer here. I go to town in January; to press in February; and to the dogs (I mean the Critics) about the beginning of May.

“Best love to Mrs. Corry. I'm afraid she does not like me so well since my marriage. Women never do. But if I wrong her, let her say so stoutly; and at all events, remembrances as warm as ever to her and you, from “Yours most faithfully,

“THOMAS MOORE.

“Bessy sends her kindest regards to you both.”

From Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“ London, Aug. 9. 1816.

“ My dear Moore,

“ Many thanks for the encouraging intimation that you will navigate a lake or two with me. To make my chance a certainty, I have given you time for preparation,—time which I am very sure you have transmuted into pure gold. I have taken my place, and shall start at five o’clock on Tuesday morning, and sleep away my weariness at Leicester. On Wednesday I shall proceed, and arrive to a late dish of tea at Mayfield. If you wish for a walk, and the sun shines, pray wander that way towards seven o’clock. I have just received a letter from Byron, dated Diodati, near Geneva. He has been a few times at Coppet; all there are well, except Rocca.* The Duchess† seems grown taller, but, as yet, no rounder — since her marriage. Schlegel is in high force, and Madame‡ as brilliant as ever. I have circumnavigated the lake, and shall go to Chamouni, but really we have had such stupid mists, fogs, rains, and perpetual density, that one would think Castlereagh had the foreign affairs of the kingdom of Heaven, also, upon his hands. I have read ‘Glenarvon.’

“ ‘From furious Sappho,’ &c.

and have also seen Constant’s novel.§

“ There is a third canto of ‘Childe Harold’ (a longer than either of the former) finished, and some smaller things, among them a story on the ‘Chateau de Chillon.’ I only wait a good opportunity to transmit them to the grand Murray.

* Second husband of Madame de Staël.

† Of Broglie.

‡ De Staël.

§ Adolphe.

“ ‘Where is Moore? Why ain’t he out? My love to him.’

“In short, he writes cheerfully. Farewell, and believe me, though in haste, yours, as ever,

“ S. ROGERS.”

From Lord Moira.

“ Calcutta, August 27. 1816.

“ My dear Sir,

“ Any circumstance must be grateful to me which occasions my receiving a letter from one whom I regard with so lively an interest as I cherish towards you. The name and character of Lieut. Cooper could not, therefore, have been introduced to me under better auspices. The becoming acquainted with them would have been more satisfactory could I have given you an encouraging answer; so far from it, I am forced to say to you at once, that I do not see the means of serving him. This must seem so extraordinary, under the notions entertained in Europe of a Governor-General’s patronage, that I should be persuaded it never could be explained to you were you not likely to meet Lady Loudoun; to her I refer you for minuter information on what can be only stated generally by me. There is scarcely a situation of even moderate advantage to which the Governor-General can appoint any one but a servant of the Company. The very, very few which are at his disposal, require, I believe without exception, a ready command of the Hindostanee language; and scarcely any of them are of a function or estimated rate that would be reconcilable to the feelings of one who had appeared as an officer. In the military line, there are just three officers in all India to which an officer in the King's service can be appointed. You may guess what priority of claim there must be upon them; and they are only Brigade-Majorships, most inadequately paid. The general officers in command at the other Presidencies always come upon me with solicitations (relative to those posts) which it would be difficult to resist, because the Brigade-Major has to transact business confidentially with them.

“This outline will suffice to show you that I could not encourage Lieut. Cooper's coming out hither, without the sense of leading him into inevitable disappointment. Should my position alter, of which I can have no expectation, I would apprise you.

“We are in great prosperity here. To our surprise, large remittances of money have been made to us from England, when our treasury was overflowing with cash. Every branch of the revenue has been increasing, and will continue to augment; and every native power is crouching to us.

“I smiled at what you have communicated about Lord Thurlow, not as referring to you, but to myself. Observe, however, that I had, at the time of my conceiving he might have a vigorous wing, read none of his poetry, but a compliment to myself, which I could not but deem exquisite.

“Adieu, my dear Sir. Offer my best remembrances to Mrs. Moore, and believe me, with sincere esteem and regard,

“Your faithful Servant,

“MOIRA.

“Thomas Moore, Esq.”

From Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“ August. 30. 1816.

“ My dear Moore,

“ Many, many thanks to you and yours, not forgetting the two personages at the second table. I can assure you I left you all with a heavy heart, as I went all along (faithless deserter!) and many and many a time in my rambles with Wordsworth have I lamented your absence, when the mists and sunbeams gave us revelations of Heaven. This is indeed a most enchanting country, and I shall leave it with a sigh, but leave it I must. I came here yesterday; and shall depart in two or three days. To the North? No, I think, but what will become of me I cannot say, till my foot is on the first step of my chaise.

“ Believe me to be yours ever,

“ SAMUEL ROGERS.

“ I have spent some very delightful hours with Southey, and could you see the neatness of his house, the beauty of his girls, the cheerfulness of his fireside, and the order and completeness of his library, you would see (though some of the said ingredients are a little more matured by time — I allude to the second and the last) a reflection of your own, Signor Tomaso.”

From Mary Godfrey.

“ Dec. 24. 1816.

“ What are you about? and why are you not come? and how are you all? and where is the poem? You said in your last letter you would soon write again, to tell us when you were to come, and you have never written since. So pray do give us a line, or tell Bessy to do so, to let us know all about you. I am afraid she has suffered from this dreadful season, as you said your house was neither water-proof nor wind-proof. As to ourselves, we go on soberly. My sisters and Barbara have been visiting at Lady Kingston's and Lord Clifden's, and I established myself at Lady Shaftesbury's in their absence. I am sorry to say Bab returned from her last visit extremely ill, and continued so for some days with her old faintings. She has now got quite well again, but I am afraid we must expect returns of the complaint, it seems to have taken such complete possession of her constitution. All the physicians who have attended her declare there is no sort of danger in it, which is a great consolation. We have not seen Rogers for a great while; he called when we were out of town, and when we returned he was gone to Lord Spencer's. He has been very amiable to us since he came back from you, and has called here very often; he never hinted at the unfortunate journal. How do you like Lord Byron's last gloomy productions? He now comes out openly and fairly—the hero of his own tale. Some people say those pretty lines, from the banks of the Rhine, are addressed to his sister. Others will not allow that they can be addressed to a sister. He has written to Lady Byron to ask to be reconciled; and Madame de Stäel, not knowing Lady Byron, has written to Lady Romilly to beg she would use her good offices to second his wishes. To this letter Lady Byron returned an answer herself, saying, that Lord Byron well knew that they could never live together again. There is nothing to be seen or heard of but wretchedness and poverty, which there is a general wish and effort to relieve. Everybody is doing their best to assist their fellow-creatures in distress; and it is a satisfaction to see how much good feeling and humanity there is to be found in time of need in this wicked world. The town is empty, and our only gaiety is the play, where we have been very often. It would grieve you to see Miss O'Neil in 'Volumnia,' and Kemble her 'dear boy.' They said she did Constance well; but, I own, I thought it a part quite out of her line. I liked her in Lady Townley; but I had never seen it acted before, and I thought she looked so pretty, and so like a woman of fashion, that I had much pleasure in the performance, though the critics said her gaiety was not gay enough. But critics are the very pests of society, and will not let one be pleased with anything. We heard yesterday—but I don't answer for the truth of it—that both playhouses were in so ruinous a state, that they would be obliged to act but three times a week. I can't think it is the case with regard to Covent Garden; but every one says the other is in a wretched way. The King of France is in very bad health, and then Chaos is to come again, for the discontent and divisions of that country are beyond all conception, according to every one's account.

“A thousand kind remembrances and good wishes to you and yours, from me and mine.

“God bless you all, and good bye.

“M. G.”

From Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“ London, Jan. 21. 1817.

“ My dear Moore,

“ You have done bravely, and I am rejoiced to think it has ended as it has done, to their credit and your comfort. By some chance, I have not been in Davies Street for a long time till yesterday, when she told me generally of your illness and your anxiety. The removal, she said, was owing to us reformers; but that it had ended in half-pay. Of her own exertions or yours she said nothing, nor shall I.

“ But, my dear Moore, if I may judge from your silence, you are as yet undecided as to your dwelling. I have heard of your visitants, and now of vexations mental and corporal, no doubt productive of much mischief to the finer organs, to their operation in the goose-walking among the currant-bushes.—My sister wrote me word of your kind attentions at Derby. She said you were the king of the place, and that your notice made her proud. Bowles was in town in December, but I was at Petworth, and missed him. I came yesterday from Holland House, where I have been passing a few days with Luttrell, and where you were much wanted. I have been idling away my time in many castles of indolence, and to-day am going to my brother and sister for a week, before I establish myself finally to prepare for you, you false one! Though you make no mention of your wife and children dear, I shall not let them escape. Pray give my love to the first, and a kiss a-piece to the two last. To the first I dare not send one, even by proxy.

“ Ever yours,

“ SAMUEL ROGERS.

“What a quiet spring is before us: the Lansdownes, Cowpers, Jerseys, Douglas’s, &c. &c., on the right side of the Alps. The Hollands come to town to-day for the winter.”

From Lord Strangford.

“Clifton, June 20. 1817.

“My dear Moore,

“I beseech you to make my excuse to the Irish Wittenagemot, which is to assemble to-morrow at the ‘Thatched House.’ My departure for Sweden takes place so much sooner than I expected, that I have found myself obliged to visit my mamma and sisters this week instead of the next. Pray, my dear Moore, do the apologetic for me in your prettiest style.

“I plucked up courage, two days ago, and called on Rogers, who was quite delightful. We got on famously together, and I have lost so much of my terror that I shall assault him with frequent visitations on my return to town.

“My mother is a bit of a saint; she is reading your book at the other end of the room. The following dialogue has just passed between us:—

“Sinner. ‘I am writing to Moore.’

“Saint. ‘I am reading Moore.’

“Sinner. ‘What shall I say to Moore?’

“Saint. ‘That I am shocked at my own wickedness in admiring anything in THIS world so much as I do his Poem!’

“God bless you.

“Ever most affectionately yours,

“STRANGFORD.”

From Miss Godfrey.

“Sunday, Sept. 21. 1817.

“I will not attempt to say how much we all feel for you and poor Bessy. I merely write to implore you to stay on in Davies Street as long as ever it may be the least convenience to you to do so. And believe that it is a great gratification to us to hear that you find yourselves tolerably comfortable there, and that the servants attend to you as they ought to do. Mary wrote to you on Friday last, which letter you ought to have got yesterday; and you will see by that letter, that it immediately occurred to us that Davies Street was the only place for you to go to in your distress. We sincerely hope to have a better account of you both soon, though we can hardly expect it; but submission to the will of Heaven is our first duty.

“I have been very unwell with my old faintings; and though they have ceased, they have left me languid and uncomfortable, as they always do for some little time after they are over; but in a day or two I hope to be as well as usual.

“We are very sorry to hear the account you give of your own health, and earnestly beg of you to take great care of yourself, for a hurt in the leg is always a troublesome thing to get rid of, and requires great caution as to eating as well as drinking.

“This is all I can write, for my head is still far from well.

“Give our loves to poor Bessy.

“Bab forgot to add that whenever you can come down here we shall be delighted to see you. She repeats again that she hopes you will consider yourselves at home in Davies Street, and make yourselves as comfortable as you can; but I am afraid you must want many things that cannot be got at in our absence—forks and spoons, &c. &c., which are always sent to Mr. Hoare's; but it is not when one is suffering real griefs that one thinks of such wants as these. Indeed, we feel for you both beyond what it is possible to say,—and particularly for poor Bessy, who must long miss that dear little child, and often feel a bitter pang when she sees Anastasia playing about without her little companion. We quite agree with you in what you say of all Bessy's amiable feelings, and cannot but lament that they have been destined to so severe a trial. Religion is the best and, I believe, the only consolation in severe affliction; and I am very sure she is a person who will feel that. Pray let us hear often how you are going on, and take very good care of yourself.

“ Ever sincerely yours,

“ M. G.

“ Will you give the enclosed to Farrance?”

To James Corry, Esq.

“ Sloperton Cottage, Devizes, Wilts, Dec. 8. 1817.

“ My dear Corry,

“ I owe you a letter, but I owe you much more for the kindness of that which you wrote, when you little knew to what extent we wanted such sympathy. Our loss* has indeed been severe, and we feel it much more than those who mingle again with the world, and forget themselves in the distractions of society; for, in our quiet life, every little thing reminds us of the sad vacancy that has been left in it. However, 'time and the hour' cures all. We have got a very snug little thatched cottage here, which Lord Lansdowne most friendlily volunteered to find out for us. I pay for it furnished but forty pounds a year, and yet I think it promises to be by far the most comfortable dwelling we have had. Lord Lansdowne's library is within a moderate walk of me, and as most of my London friends come down to visit him in the course of the year, I shall have just those glimpses of society which throw a light over one's solitude, and enliven it.

* The death of his daughter Barbara.

"I have not time now to tell you any particulars of myself, but I shall enclose you one or two of my twin weekly letters to my mother, in the course of this month, and shall accompany them with a word or two each time, to let you know some things you may like to hear.

"Yours ever, with best regards to Mrs. Corry,

"THOMAS MOORE."

To Samuel Rogers, Esq.

"Sloperton Cottage, Devizes, Wilts, Dec. 9. 1817.

"My dear Rogers,

"I wrote you a little note the other day to go in a packet to Power, but it was left out by mistake, and was not worth sending alone. We find our cottage as yet very comfortable; even during these last and stormy days it has neither smoked nor let in water—et c'est beaucoup pour Sloperton. The Lansdownes have not yet made their appearance, so that I suppose neither of them has returned to Bowood. Bowles was very early in his welcome of us, and has since brought Mrs. Bowles; but I was out, and Bessy did not venture to encounter them alone. How are you going on? I long to hear that you have achieved those remaining lines, and that Spring is likely to number you among her family as ‘madre de’ fiori, &c. Alas! the ‘gioventù dell’ anno’ is not our youth, and I begin to think that Spring is but a tantalising recurrence. I am sorry to say these thoughts come rather too thick upon me of late, and, notwithstanding the society of the Fudges, whom I endeavour to make as agreeable as I can, still I droop sometimes. I suppose it is natural that Death’s first visit among those dear to us should leave this desolate feel behind it; and a little time, perhaps, will make all right again. I have just finished a long letter from Mr. Fudge to Lord Castle-reagh, and am beginning young Bob Fudge’s account of a gourmand day in Paris—excellent subjects, if I can but muster up gaiety of imagination enough to do them justice. You see the sixth edition of ‘Lalla’ is out, and (the Longmans tell me) a great many of it sold; so there I leave her—my paternal anxieties are over, and she will now, I think, be able to shift for herself.

“If you hear any comical anecdotes connected with French politics, or our own ministers, pray let me have them, or, if anything occurs to you in Miss Fudge’s way, it will be but gallantry to communicate it for her, and, at all events, let me hear from you. Bessy has, for the first time, produced your beautiful book to stand in her book-case; and, indeed, it is the first time, poor girl, she has had a sitting-room fit for it. She sends her best remembrances to your sister and yourself, with those of, my dear Rogers, yours very truly,

“THOMAS MOORE.”

From John Murray, Esq.

“ Albemarle Street, Dec. 31. 1817.

“ My dear Sir,

“ Although I had some doubts about writing to you respecting the critique, before I received your letter touching it, I certainly had no delicacy afterwards, and have been prevented from writing to you by eternal interruptions alone. I will fabricate a proper letter for the author of the ‘ Critique; ’ but I confess to you I was indignant — it is so completely unworthy of you — totally devoid of congeniality of thought, or power of composition, and I am glad that your inherent delicacy has not quitted you upon so trying an occasion.

“ Respecting pounds, you may at once draw for sixty at two months, and it shall be placed either to Mr. Sheridan, or any other account, as we may hereafter find mutually convenient.

“ The Fourth Canto is now on its way. I had a very long epistle yesterday from Mr. Hobhouse, who was then going to set out with it in three weeks, and report speaks goldenly of its merits.

“ I am about to commence a Journal (monthly) to comprise all subjects of literature and its varieties, and to exclude totally, as will be stated in the advertisement — Politics. I am very anxious that you should do me the favour to take it into your thoughts; you can, I am sure, from floating materials write hundreds of little essays, or letters, or scraps — on society, manners, &c., which will not occupy, but rather relieve your mind from severer studies, which would be infinitely valuable to me. I will send you the first Number, which will be published next month, and I shall consider your communications as a very peculiar act of kindness. I shall keep an account with you, and at the end of every three months its amount will not, I trust, prove unworthy of your acceptance. I entreat you be forming memoranda for such a class of communications.

“ I am happy to find that I anticipated your desire to have Northanger Abbey, &c., by enclosing a copy for Mrs. Moore’s acceptance, yesterday, with a copy which I got that day by mail, of the ‘ Edinburgh Review,’ which is not yet published in London: but here I find I have been anticipated, as I rather expected.

“ You say the ‘ Quarterly Review ’ is dull; did you read Joe Davis’ article on Africa? You think nothing lively unless some poor devil be cut up, and then, O shame! if it be one of your friends; but, take out political articles, you will ever find a store of valuable information to be very interesting. It is a positive fact that I print as many as they do of the ‘ Edinburgh Review,’ which really depends upon Jeffrey, in whose department we have no match.

“ I sincerely wish you and your family many happy returns of the year. And remain, dear Sir,

“ Your faithful servant,

“ JOHN MURRAY.”

To James Corry, Esq.

“ Jan. 14. 1818.

“ My dear Corry,

“ If I did not feel a craving come over me now and then for a little intelligence from Lurgan Street I do not think you would ever receive a letter from me; so that it is pure and downright selfishness makes me write. Besides, extracting one of your long, delightful letters, by means of such hurried little scraps of notes as mine, is like the trick they play in foreign parts, of throwing pebbles at monkeys, in order to be pelted back with pine-apples in return; and therefore, with all my aversion to the private use of the pen (being doomed, for my sins, to the cursed public employ of it) I cannot resist, now and then, the temptations which such double compound interest on my notes offers. I very much agree with you about your character for the next Kilkenny, except as to Falstaff, of which I think you could give the orations most successfully. Power is a shabby fellow not to write to me; particularly as he has a house of mine on his hands, in an unfinished condition, which I expected long before now to have restored to me. Tell him this.

“Lord Dandy is a good fellow; and I often remember with gratitude that he once condescended to call me a dandy. ‘Laudari a Lord Dandies (laudandis) viris,’ is something in this world.

“Give my best love and remembrance to Mrs. Corry, and believe me, “Ever faithfully yours,

“THOMAS MOORE.

“In looking over this note, it strikes me that I have somewhere used the simile of the monkeys before: if to you, remember I am in your debt a new simile in place of it, which I shall take the first bright moment of discharging.

“I am not writing Fudges in London. But, believe me, personal satire is the only one that will ever make fools and rascals feel. Any thing else is fudge indeed.

“What is the story of Fanny Helsham?”

To Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“Sloperton Cottage, Feb. 6. 1818.

“My dear Rogers,

“Though I think it not unlikely that I shall, in the course of next week, be shaking hands with you in St. James’s Place (as those musical but inharmonious brothers, the Powers, who might well be called brothers-in-law, have given signal for combat on the 13th, and I fear I am to receive a subpoena on the occasion), yet I cannot help writing you a short letter, just to ask how you do in this very cold weather. March was the month I looked to for being ready with the Fudges, and at the same time devoting three or four weeks to a rummage in London on the subject of Sheridan, who must be my next victim; but this cursed law trip will disconcert my plans a good deal; still, however, I shall contrive to be ready for the press in March, as I have now about 1400 lines written, and there will not be more in all than 17 or 1800. I have done it, I think, pretty well; but, as usual, not half so well as I had pre-imagined it. The Lansdownes have been particularly amiable to us. The day that Bessy dined there was indeed a sad operation to her, for there were a good many people, not one of whom she knew; and among whom she sat, poor girl, in a state of dignified desolation; but before they went to town Lord and Lady L., with Pamela*, walked over one morning and lunched with us, and listened to music; and then we all rambled together to the church at the other side of the valley, and Lady Lansdowne was all heartiness and good-nature; and Bessy, whose element is home, was seen, I flatter myself, to much advantage; so that we shall get on with them, I have no doubt, most comfortably; and, as they will only come like comets now and then into our system, we shall enjoy a little of their light and warmth without being either dazzled or scorched by them. I have, indeed, got to like Lady L. exceedingly; she is frank and sensible, unaffected, and certainly very pretty; and altogether she has so won me over that I am going to dedicate a set of national airs to her,—there's my anti-aristocracy for you! He is delightful; and, if I could but once forget he is a Lord, I could shake his hand as heartily as that of any good fellow I know. We passed three or four days at Bowles's since I last wrote to you. What an odd fellow it is! and how narrowly, by being a genius, he has escaped being set down for a fool! Even as it is, there seem to be some doubts among his brother magistrates; but he is an excellent creature notwithstanding; and if it is not of Helicon that his spirit has drunk, it is at least of very sweet waters, and to my taste very delightful. Bessy has had a long letter from Crabbe, with 'Fair Lady!' in every page: he, too, is an odd fellow. Then there's Crowe, whom I like much. He sent me a message that he wished to meet me, and we dined together at an ex-attorney's in Devizes; much to my gratification, for he certainly is one of the few, and there is something very racy even in his lees.

* Daughter of Lord Edward Fitzgerald; married Sir Guy Campbell.

"Tell the Donegals they are very lazy not to write to me; and, with best remembrances to your brother and sister, believe me,

"My dear Rogers, faithfully yours,

"THOMAS MOORE."

From Leigh Hunt, Esq.

“ 13. Lisson Grove North, near Paddington,
“ March 24. 1818.

(“ Eheu, fugaces, Posthume! Posthume! — Alas! now when I am closing my letter, it is April 6.)

“ My dear Moore,

“ In sending you a copy of my new publication I must thank you very sincerely for being kind enough to remember me the other day when you wrote to my excellent friend, Mr. Shelley.* I had not forgotten you, believe me, — I neither could, nor ought; but we happened not to hear from each other for some time before your large poem came out, and then a most villanous habit of delay, which want of occupation in early youth, and sickness afterwards, conspired to fix into the very bones of me, made me so creep on from week to week without paying it the proper attention in the ‘Examiner,’ which I nevertheless used to swear to myself, week after week, to do, that at last I fairly became ashamed of noticing the book at all, much more of writing to yourself. One or two similar circumstances, which other real friends have tolerated in the kindest manner, but which have induced another of a more doubtful complexion, in spite of greater infirmities of his own of the same sort, to read me a very hot lecture upon, have made me think very seriously of this habit of mine. It is certainly very much against my theories of friendship, and, I think I may say, not at all compatible with the rest of my practice of it, which has ever been accounted somewhat romantic and over-zealous. I have been assaulted enough in my time for imaginary offences, and need not add real ones to them. You have seen or heard, perhaps, of this anonymous raf who attacked me in a Scotch magazine. My brother, in his over-zealousness for me, unfortunately inserted a paragraph about me in the paper, and then I was obliged to notice him in the same way. We have not succeeded in dragging or provoking him forth; and he has since, after a certain growling but always mean fashion, recanted, pretending he did not mean to attack me privately. He is supposed by most people to be a former acquaintance of mine, who has every reason in the world not to attack me, and whom they consider as a sort of moral phenomenon. But enough of this. I hope that you are setting about something fresh, and that now you have got all the experiences of your poetry, you will give us some story or other poem by itself. ‘Lalla Rookh,’ to be sincere with you, appeared to me to be too florid in its general style; but there are exquisite passages, and you have so truly a poetical character of your own—you are so truly, by birth, a poetical animal, out of the pale of book-associations, and a free inhabitant of the most Elysian parts of nature—that the more you resolved to speak and to feel out of the sincerity of your own impulses, without thinking it necessary to search for ideas, the more to your advantage, I am persuaded, it would be. You are a born poet, and have only to claim your inheritance—not to be heaping up a multitude of anxious proofs, which, though mistaken by some for ostentation, are in reality evidences of a diffidence of pretension, which you ought not to feel. On the other hand, I would not see you restrained so much as I formerly would have done in certain amatory respects; nor, indeed, are you so, perhaps, notwithstanding one of the morals in your book, in which, I think, you overshot the mark in making repentance a better thing than a wish to make amends. Repentance is undoubtedly a very good and delicate thing in some minds, and should reasonably make the amends when they are not to be made otherwise; but, generally speaking, it is mere regret for the loss of something on one's own part, not a social and just feeling; it is as much as to say—I'm very sorry I missed the plum-cake I might have had. The world, I think, does not want repentance, especially for the more kindly errors; it wants kindness itself, unselfishness, justice, imagination, good taste, love and friendship—all that leads it to think of one another,—in short, gain for all, as opposed to gain for the individual. Now to produce this, I would see even some abuses hazarded on the gentler side of things, especially as some of the abuses themselves arise out of a gross and selfish misconception of guilt and innocence, and of forms for essentials; so that the most kindly and virtuous natures are repeatedly sacrificed, either to the most painful and unnatural self-denial, or to the gratuitous wretchedness of imaginary guilt—or, worse than all, are turned cold-blooded and worldly, out of a false notion of their own natural self-defence. I would have no insincerity, no such thing as seduction, no gross selfishness of any sort; I would only have the world think as well as they can of all the gentler impulses, and as badly as they can of all the violent, the proud, and the exclusive ones: but as the majority go on at present (though somewhat shaken by philosophy) they proceed upon the blessed absurdity of making as much guilt as they can out of the former, and surrounding the latter with all sorts of 'pride, pomp, and circumstance.' But you will take me for one of your old friends the Fathers if I go on at this rate; or rather, for one of their young Pagan relations. If you want to act up to that brilliant Christian principle, and 'heap coals of fire on my head,' you will write to me instantly, and exhibit all the epistolary virtue which I possess not; if otherwise you will take your time, both to write my letter and read my book, or at least to pronounce any good opinion of the latter. And yet I hope it will not be long first either, that I hear from you; for, indeed, if you will allow me to use a tone which some might construe into an assumption, even between friends, I have a very great regard for you, and think of you often and often. You shall see that I do, now that I have mustered up face enough to write your name again. Mrs. H. begs her best remembrances. Pray make mine also to fair Arganda the Unknown, whose old inclination to have a good opinion of me I am impudent enough to think she would not diminish if she knew me.

* Percy Bysshe Shelley.

"Most sincerely and heartily yours,

"LEIGH HUNT."

To Samuel Rogers, Esq.

"April 6. 1818.

"My dear Rogers,

"I just dispatch a line to say that we shall meet, I hope, on Sunday or Monday next. I may be in town on Friday or Saturday, but shall be too busy with Proctors and other Fudges to call upon you. Proctors! only think; all my dreams of comfort and independence at once menaced, if not destroyed. I take for granted you have seen Lady Donegal, and heard my doleful story. I was about answering a letter of hers, when I was served with the awful monition. I have heard no particulars; but the proceeds of a ship and cargo must be considerable, more, indeed, than I can ever attempt to pay. We are neither of us, however, thank Heaven! in the least cast down by it. As it is by no misdeed or extravagance of our own, conscience is, at least, left untouched, and there lies the spring of happiness after all. I have felt more, at large, from a small debt of my own than I shall feel, in a prison, from thousands thus incurred.

“I ought to have had security; but the place was so trifling, when I appointed him, that it was almost made a complaint his taking it. To show you, however, that it has not affected my spirits much, I have been able to write one of Biddy Fudge’s gayest letters since I heard of it.

“Good bye, my dearest Rogers. I know you will visit me in the Rules, when I can no longer be with those Pindaric poets who are ‘lege solutis.’

“Ever yours faithfully,

“THOMAS MOORE.”

To James Corry, Esq.

“May 15. 1818.

“My dear Corry,

“The week after next I hope to present myself to you in Lurgan Street; and as I have but eight days to stay amongst you, you must make the most of me. I hope Richard Power continues in Dublin, but I heard some alarming rumours of his being expected in London soon after I left it. This will be indeed ‘from love’s shining circle, the gem dropped away;’ but I will hope I may be lucky enough still to find him there; as for you, you must be there; it would be contrary to all laws, human and divine, that I should not have a glimpse, and many a glimpse, of you while I stay; and I am happy to find that my father's lodgings (where they have a bed for me) is close in your neighbourhood.

“Happy as I am to see you all, it is with regret I leave my sweet, quiet cottage at this ‘rosy time of the year,’ where, in addition to the sunshine we have always, thank God, within, there is some prospect (if these ice-bergs would permit), of a warm gleam or two without; but you must make it up to me in your heartiest smiles; and be assured that, there or here, I am always, dear Corry,

“Your very faithful friend,

“THOMAS MOORE.

“Love to Mrs. C.

“Bessy bids me say she depends upon you for franking a letter of mine to her every day.”

To Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“June 18. 1818.

“My dear Rogers,

“I am afraid you will think me a sad truant, but the truth is, I had persuaded myself, before I set off for Ireland, that I had really written to you soon after my leaving London, and that it was you who were in my debt a letter, but the startling truth of the case broke upon me one fine morning, in no less romantic a place than Manchester, as I was on my way to Ireland, and I sat down forthwith to write to you a long apology for my silence, when, lo! the arrival of the coach hurried me away; and from that moment to this I have been in such a giddifying labyrinth of bustle, acclamation, hurrahs, &c. that, though your name has often been upon my lips, I have never had a disposable minute to write a line to you. Never, certainly, was there anything more enthusiastic than my reception in Dublin. It was even better than Voltaire's at Paris, because there was more heart in it, and the call for me at the Theatre, and the bursts of applause when I appeared with my best bows at the front of the box (which I was obliged to repeat several times in the course of the night) were really all most overwhelmingly gratifying, and scarcely more delightful to me on my own account than as a proof of the strong spirit of nationality in my countrymen.

"There was a tolerably good report of the speeches at the dinner in the Irish papers; but I am not sorry that Perry has shortened the account so much, for we were none of us in very good taste, I think; and Phillips, who compiled the speeches, has left the marks of his own paint-brush upon us all; but the effect at the time was admirable, and never was there a day of more strong feeling witnessed.

"I have heard, with some surprise, of your Poem lying at Murray's. He kept the secret so well from me, that I was in hopes he would be equally secret with others. He has not, however, I believe, told more than that he had such a thing in his possession. What have you done with it? Do pray write to me soon, and do not visit my own transgressions upon me in kind.

"I have had a heavy complaint from Wilkie about the unwillingness of Charles Sheridan, or his advisers, to come to anything decisive with respect to the sanctioning his publication of the works.

"Good bye; best regards to your sister.

"Ever yours,

"T. MOORE."

To James Corry, Esq.

“ June 20. 1818.

“ My dear Corry,

“ You perceive how Perry has shorn us of our beams ; between his stinginess of room and his zeal for me, he has made but an awkward monopolising concern of his report, and I most anxiously hope some of the other London papers may have done us more justice. You may guess how glad I was to see my quiet garden again, but I have hardly yet recovered from the giddiness of my Dublin fortnight. The hip, hip, hurrahs ! seem still sounding in my ears, and I feel as if a good fit of sea-sickness (which, for the first time, I was not blessed with) would have been necessary to carry off the indigestion of glory I brought away with me. I arrived here at ten o'clock on Monday night, and found Bessy walking about the garden (as she had been for several nights before) watching for me. It seemed a long month to her. Your real and hearty kindness to me, my dear Corry, has not been forgotten in my report of the transactions to her, nor shall it ever be forgotten as long as I have a heart to feel and a hand to record my gratitude to you. I have often been regretting since that we had no conversation about the Kilkenny Memoirs, which, as I told Richard Power in Paris, I have not been unmindful of, but, whenever I have met with anything in my reading that bore upon it, have never failed to note it down, with a view to what, ere long, you will see I shall execute.

“ My ‘ Life of Sheridan ’ still remains in a very doubtful state, from the indecision of Charles Sheridan, with respect to any arrangement with the booksellers. Till the family are allowed some share in the publication, I feel delicate, of course, in availing myself of their papers for the advantage of the booksellers.

“How are you getting on, my dear fellow? I hope that plaguing pain is gone, and that you are as flourishing and happy every way as you deserve to be. I grieve that I did not see more of Mrs. Corry while I stayed, and most particularly grieve that I had not a better opportunity of singing her some of those new things, which I know she would have liked. My best regards to her, and believe me ever faithfully, “Hers and yours,

“THOMAS MOORE.”

From Miss Godfrey.

“July 9. 1818.

“I have been thinking of writing to you from time immemorial, and at last I am determined to begin, and talk to you a little about you and yours and me and mine. We have been reading of your honours and glories and speeches with great interest and pleasure, knowing how gratifying it must all have been to your feelings and to Bessy's. At the same time, however, that I congratulate you upon the flattering manner you were received in by your countrymen, let me whisper a little word of congratulation also at your having got away safe from them before it came to throwing stones at you, or throwing you into the river, which they intended to do by Mr. Grattan. I would not say it out loud upon any account, for fear of a flowing tirade from that sunflower of eloquence Mr. Phillips; but I heartily rejoice that you have got off with all your popularity and whole bones into the bargain, and are safely lodged in your own cottage, where I hope you found Bessy and Anastasia as well as your heart could wish. Have you heard anything more of your Bermuda affairs? Pray write soon, and give us a long account of yourselves. The last we heard of you was through Rogers, who read us the letter you wrote to him upon your return home. As to ourselves, I have but a tragical history to give. Our expedition to Brighton, which we intended for health and economy, failed in both. I came back very ill; and no sooner had I got well, than Bab had a return of her old faintings, from which, thank God! she is now almost quite recovered; but she has had a very bad attack, I grieve to say. We propose going next week to Tunbridge Wells to stay two or three months. Philly and Barbara are already there. I suppose you are in the very joy of your heart at the success of the Reformers, and expect great doings in this new Parliament. We have had some fine specimens of liberty during the Westminster election, which make one tremble in one's skin. We were in hopes that some great Whig, in either England or Ireland, would have brought you into the House of Commons; but I dare say your great Whigs would be pretty nearly as much afraid of you as your great Tories, for you do now and then take them by surprise with some unlucky truth that they would rather not hear.

“ Rogers just called, and, seeing this frank on the table, desired me to tell you he was writing to you; but I think it is only in his imagination, so don't be surprised if the letter never comes. I have not a word of news to tell you,—we have been so much shut up from the world since our return to town. We both join in everything most kind to you all, and shall be very happy to hear a good account of Bessy's health. Truly yours,

“ M. G.”

From Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“ July 12. 1818.

“ My dear Moore,

“ Many thanks for both your letters, — for that which you wrote waking, which came to hand, and for that which, you say, you wrote, dreaming, which I have not yet received. Your reception did honour to Ireland. An anniversary dinner on the birthday of a living poet is what reminds us of the good old times: and we shall soon hear of a coronation in the capital. Little has occurred here since you left us, but dinners, balls, and election bets. Luttrell, to escape the din of the dissolution, fled to Holland, and is at this moment sitting between two tobacco-pipes in a treckschwytt. Crabbe has been here for a fortnight, and, being a lover of peace and quiet, took a lodging at the Hummums, when the Westminster uproar was at its height. Crowe passed an hour with me yesterday. He is gone to-day. My sister has been very ill since you went, but is better. As for me, I think of visiting Scotland, and in that case shall not, I fear, return in time for a western circuit, but my movements are very uncertain. Murray did not return the MS. till I went again; and since that time I have not seen him. I am not sorry, as the dissolution rendered the thing impossible for some time to come, and I have much to do to it. Spencer is at Darmstadt, and has received some order from the elector. Sheridan has called upon me twice.

“ Pray give my love to Psyche and Anastasia, and believe me to be ever yours,

“ S. ROGERS.”

To James Corry, Esq.

“ July 13. 1818.

“ My dear Corry,

“ I have to thank you for two most welcome letters. I remember Cicero bids one of his correspondents write letters worthy of him,—‘scribe literas te dignas:’ he need never have given such a hint to you; but the worst of it is, I am always in too great a hurry to follow your example, and can only give you, what my friend William Spencer calls ‘legs and wings of thoughts.’ I don’t even throw in the merry-thoughts, though I would if I could. In answer to Mrs. Corry’s grave charge of ‘not liking her as well as I did at Kilkenny’—how can she be so unjust? Only let her give me fair play,—I call for a ring and fair play: the bottle-holders shall be a few staunch hearts I could name; the ground either here or in Lurgan Street, the time of any duration she pleases, the longer the better; and if I don’t beat her out and out in liking, why, I’ll consent to wear the white feather of falsehood in my heart for ever after. Like her! ‘like Ossian!’ says Werter,—love is the word, and I hereby fling down the gauntlet upon it boldly.

“ You delight me by your report of Peel’s speech. He is one of the Dii Majores of our political Olympus, and I only wish he did not wield the Birmingham thunder of such Salmoneasses as his present masters. You know, at that college dinner it made me melancholy to think what a clever, manly-minded fellow they had got amongst them.

“Poor Joe Atkinson is at last gone. For this long time he has been but ‘jocus, et preterea nihil;’ but his death was as gradual and easy, poor fellow, as his life had been prosperous and amiable. I shall miss him exceedingly.

“I have written to Power to come to us. I hope he will.

“Yours ever faithfully,

“THOMAS MOORE.

“I dine to-day at Poet Bowles’s (whom I so shamefully omitted in my rigmarole of Bards) to meet Lord Lansdowne, Methuen, &c. &c.”

To Mrs. Lefanu.

“Sloperton Cottage, Sept. 16. 1818.

“My dear Madam,

“I have been prevented from acknowledging your very kind and useful communications by a visit of business which I was obliged to pay to London, and from which I am but just returned. I am sorry that Mrs. Canning does not permit me to give her name, because her testimony to your brother’s kindness of heart is very important, and would, of course, be much enhanced by the authority of the name. We must, however, be content to leave it anonymous, as she wishes it. You may depend upon my not committing you, in any way, with the important personage to whom you allude. Indeed, strong as is my feeling with respect to some parts of his conduct to your brother, I mean to let the facts speak for themselves, without any colouring or comment from me. I have not yet had time to look over the papers you have sent me; but I have no doubt that they are highly useful and interesting; and I shall take the liberty, whenever I find myself in any puzzle, to apply to you for a clue to help me out. Mr. W. Linley and I have had some correspondence lately, and he promises me not only several poems of his sister, but one or two of Mr. Sheridan's which have never been printed. I find too from my neighbour Lord Lansdowne that he expects Mr. Thomas Grenville at Bowood for a few days; so that I shall have an opportunity of uncorking (to use an old joke) all the remains of Sherry there are in him, which, you may suppose from the opinion I expressed of him, I do not expect to be of the most racy or sparkling quality. But, altogether, my materials (at least for the early part of the Life) are much more promising than I expected.

“When I was in town, I took an opportunity of mentioning Miss Lefanu to the Longmans, and they beg that she will allow them to read her novel, when it is finished. I added to my mention of her name all that I was likely to feel after seeing and conversing with her; so that I trust she will find them disposed to do her every possible justice. But I need not tell you how little depends on favour in literature; even merit is not always sure of a good reception; saleability is the thing with the book-sellers.

“Pray tell Miss Lefanu how exceedingly obliged I am by the trouble she has taken in collecting and copying so much for me; and with my best regards to her and Mr.

Lefanu, I beg you to believe me, my dear Madam, very faithfully,

“ Your obliged servant,
“ THOMAS MOORE.”

From Miss Godfrey.

“ Saturday, Oct. 5. 1818.

“ We have long been intending to write to you, but have gone on putting it off, owing to one disagreeable circumstance or another, till at last we were ashamed to begin; but Rogers called here yesterday, and told us that he was very much afraid your odious Bermuda business would turn out much more vexatious than was at first apprehended. The sincere concern this information gave us soon put laziness to flight; and I have got a frank to write to you, for I am sorry to say Bab has not been well for some days, and her head does not allow of her doing so. Pray write immediately, and tell us in what state the business is at present, and what you really think will be the consequence of it to you. We are most anxious to know. Rogers said he had written to you upon the subject, but that he had not received an answer. But pray don't serve us so, or we shall be very angry with you; and, at the same time, tell us how Bessy is going on. I am afraid she must be worried by this troublesome affair; but I trust and hope that it will at last end to your satisfaction. It is so very hard a case, that I think Mr. Sheddon, the uncle, cannot suffer you to be the victim of his nephew's dishonesty, if he has any honour or principle himself, as it was at his desire you continued him in the office. The affairs of this world don't go on at all to my satisfaction at present ; but hope follows on, and it is always the best companion upon our dreary road. We have had beautiful skies, and brilliant suns, moons, and stars this year, but not much health to enjoy them, and the old worries of knaves and fools, which it seems to be poor Bab's fate never to be able to get rid of; but I must say she bears it, as well as a very indifferent state of health, with great heroism. We returned to town about a fortnight since, and are established here for the winter. We were obliged to leave Tunbridge sooner than we intended, on account of the smallness of our house, and the illness of some of the servants, which made it necessary to give up some of our rooms for the use of the sick. So here you will find us if anything should bring you to town. We got your 'Melodies' last week; and Barbara is gone mad after 'This Earth is the planet.' She begged leave to play it between each of her lessons; and she goes singing the delights of this world all over the house, as if it was quite her opinion that it was all sunshine and gaiety; long may she think so: but the time too surely comes that one gets behind the scenes, and the brilliant spectacle vanishes.

"There are people in town, going and coming; but none staying, I believe, but ourselves. We both like London at this quiet time of year; and though we have workmen repairing the house, and we can only inhabit part of it, we have made ourselves very comfortable. I got a frank for Saturday to Calne by mistake; I recollected, afterwards, that Devizes was your post town, so I was obliged to put off my letter till to-day. How is dear little Anastasia? is she as rosy and pretty as she was when we saw her last? Bab joins with me in everything kind to you and Bessy, and in begging for an early answer to this letter. I hope you will not be lazy, as usual; indeed, you must not be so.

“ Adieu! and God bless you all.

“ M. G.

“ Rogers begs to know if you got a letter which he enclosed about a fortnight ago to Mr. Power for you.”

To Miss Lefanu.

“ Sloper-ton Cottage, Devizes, Dec. 21. 1818.

“ Dear Miss Lefanu,

“ It was a little unlucky that I did not receive your letter in London, from which I am but just returned, as I could then have requested you to send your manuscript up instantly, and presented it myself in Paternoster Row. As it is, I think the surest as well as speediest way will be for you to forward it immediately by the coach, directed to Messrs. Longman, and I shall lose no time in preparing them to receive it. As they must be your ultimate judges (at least before publication), it would be, perhaps, but a waste of time to let me have the previous perusal of the manuscript, however gratifying and flattering such a reference to my judgment might be. In all this, however, I shall be guided entirely by your wishes, and if it be your desire that I should look over the work before it is submitted to them, you have but to forward it to me by the coach, as you did the papers relative to your uncle. But I must repeat that as the booksellers are to be your grand jury, either to find the bill or throw it out, you had perhaps better, in the first instance, send the manuscript to them, and you may depend upon my backing it with all the recommendations which my opinion of your talents, as well as my warm interest in yourself, incline me to give it. I am sorry to tell you that the interference of Burgess and the creditors has produced such a hitch in our Sheridan affairs as I fear will be fatal to their further progress.

“ With best regards to Mr. and Mrs. L., believe me, “ Faithfully yours,

“ THOMAS MOORE.”

To Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“ Paris, Dec. 23. 1819.

“ My dear Rogers,

“ There is but little use now in mentioning (though it is very true) that I began a letter to you from Rome, the first fragment of which is now before my eyes, and is as follows, ‘ One line from Rome is worth at least two of even yours from Venice; and it is lucky it should be so, as I have not at this moment time for much more.’ There I stopped; and if you had ever travelled on the wing as I have done, flying about from morning till night, and from sight to sight, you would know how hard it is to find time to write, and you would forgive me. Taking for granted that you do forgive me, I hasten to write you now some very valueless lines indeed, as they must be chiefly about myself. I found a letter here on my arrival, from the Longmans, telling me that I must not venture to cross the water (as was my intention, for the purpose of reaching Holyrood House) till they had consulted you and some others of my friends with respect to the expediency of such a step. I have heard nothing more from them on the subject, and therefore I suppose I must make up my mind to having Mrs. Moore and the little ones over, and remaining here. This is disappointing to me in many respects, and in few more than its depriving me of all chance of seeing you, my dear Rogers, and of comparing notes with you on the subject of the many wonders I have witnessed since we parted. Lord John has, I suppose, told you of the precious gift Lord Byron made me at Venice — his own memoirs, written up to the time of his arrival in Italy. I have many things to tell you about him, which at this moment neither time nor inclination will let me tell; when I say ‘inclination,’ I mean that spirits are not equal to the effort. I have indeed seldom felt much more low and comfortless than since I arrived in Paris; and though if I had you at this moment à quattr’occhi, I know I should find wherewith to talk whole hours, it is with difficulty I have brought myself to write even these few lines. Would I were with you! I have no one here that I care one pin for, and begin to feel, for the first time, like a banished man. Therefore, pray, write to me, and tell me that you forgive my laziness, and that you think I may look to our meeting before very long. If it were possible to get to Holyrood House, I should infinitely prefer it.

“ Lord John, in a letter I have just received from him, says you have not been well; but I trust, my dear Rogers, you are by this time quite yourself again.

“ Ever yours most truly,

“ THOMAS MOORE.”

To Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“La Butte, July 17. 1820.

“My dear Rogers,

“As I have just been answering a letter of Sir J. Mackintosh, and thereby got my hand back into some notion of letter-writing, I shall slip in a hasty line or two to you. As you have never written to me, and I have only written once to you, the difference of virtue between us is so small that I shall not crow over you upon the strength of it; besides, the solitary letter I did write was of so dreary and croaking a nature (at a time, too, when you might have expected me to return with all the sunbeams of Italy fresh about me), that I do not wonder at your having waited for some pleasanter tones to send an echo to. I afterwards got into a much happier mood, having exchanged my wretched entre-sol in Paris for a very pretty cottage in the Allée des Veuves, where I contrived to get on very comfortably indeed. Often and often did I think of communicating my bright side to you, as I had done the dark one; but I had no time for letters; scribbling of another kind came so hard upon me. The necessity of doing some jobs for Power, and my anxiety to finish the work I had promised to the Longmans altogether absorbed every instant of my time; and, having got into arrears of letter-writing with every friend I have in the world, I had not the courage to begin discharging the amount, but thought a declaration of insolvency at once to all was the only decent and honest mode to pursue. You have heard, I dare say, that the Longmans have suppressed my book, at which I am not at all sorry, for I can make a much better thing out of its materials at another time, and I have availed myself of their readiness to withhold the publication, though with very different views from those upon which they recommended it. Nothing can be more liberal, considerate, and kind than the conduct of those men to me. It is really friendship, assuming the form of business, and making itself actively useful, upon a fair debtor and creditor account of obligations.

“We are now passing the summer months at a place which you would delight in. It is the house (forming part of Belle-Vue) which hangs over Sèvres, and faces you as you cross the bridge. The view from it of woods and palaces is superb, and the grounds (about fifty or sixty acres in pleasure-ground) include every variety one could wish. It was bought by a friend of ours, a Spaniard, with whose wife we were very intimate in England; and he has given us a beautiful little pavillon near his house, where I pass my mornings quietly and independently, and then join the rest at a dinner as good as one of the best artists from the Rocher de Cancale can make it. The walks about us, through the Woods of Meudon and St. Cloud, are of the true kind for study; and, in short, I enjoy myself so thoroughly here, that if the sun would but go on shining this way all the year, and the flowers blooming and the nightingales singing, I should begin to care very little about the Treasury or Doctors’ Commons, and sigh for nothing in England but the never-to-be-forgotten friends I left behind me there. But, then, winter will come, and then Paris is the devil.

“Pray write soon, my dearest Rogers, and add to my sunshine by showing that I am remembered by you as kindly as ever, in spite of my one letter in eight months, and your — none.

“ Bessy sends her kindest regards. Anastasia is quite well, and is pronounced here to have a Grecque face, and little Tom, in spite of his teeth, flourishes.

“ Remember me most kindly to Miss Rogers.

“ Yours ever,

“ T. MOORE.”

From Lady Donegal.

“ Davies Street, Jan. 4. 1823.

“ I ought to have answered your letter immediately, but a thousand things prevented my doing so, for which I am very sorry. So pray pardon my apparent indifference to the subject of it, for I can assure you with truth (and I know you will believe me) that we both feel anything but indifference on this occasion, as well as upon all others in which you are any way concerned. I, however, still plead guilty to feeling strongly all the objections I have already made to the ‘ Angels.’* I may, perhaps, be too strict, or too prudish, and I ought perhaps to be influenced more by the opinions of others; but I am too old to change, so you must make the best of me, and allow me to go on praising or condemning as the spirit moves me. And this privilege I claim in right of a friendship of twenty years’ standing. And, according to my ideas of friendship, my friend is bound to tell me when he thinks I am wrong, or likely, from want of thought, to incur the censure of the world, or of individuals in it. So I do only as I wish to be done by. Mary does not agree with me in my objections to the poem, though she does wish with me that you had fixed on some other subject. In justice, I must acknowledge that there are some very beautiful passages in it, but this is all the praise I can agree to; and, thinking as I do, I cannot even wish to change my opinion of it.

* “ Loves of the Angels.”

“I cannot say how much I should be gratified to hear that you had immediately begun upon some unexceptionable subject, more suited to the powers of your mind. I once heard a very sensible man say that the present state of Greece would be a proper subject for your genius, and that, with your classical knowledge and poetical powers, you might make a beautiful poem out of it. Why not take this into your serious consideration, and do your talents the justice they deserve, by giving them a subject worthy of them? I heartily wish some of your literary friends at Botany Bay, where many better men have gone before; for people will suppose that your mind has received a bias from them, which I know not to be the case, but others will not know that; and I should hate to hear your name mentioned in the same day with theirs. Pray let me hear soon from you, for I shall be very anxious to know that you do not feel displeased at the openness with which I have expressed myself. In the meantime, be assured of the best wishes and best regards of our fireside to your fireside.

“I have written myself blind.

“Ever most sincerely yours,

“B. D.”

To Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“Friday, May 23. 1823.

“My dear Rogers,

“I have to ask a great favour of you, which is that you will take an opportunity (as soon as you can conveniently) of putting my name down to the Greek subscription for five pounds, and paying that sum for me. I would not give you this trouble, but that Power is in Ireland, and that I do not like employing the Longmans any further in this way till I have settled my account with them. As soon as I return to town, I shall pay you with many thanks, and you will, I know, recollect that I wish the thing to be done before any new list of subscribers is printed.

“ It was very kind of you to write to me so encouragingly about the ‘ Fables ;’ but I fear (from not seeing any announcement of a second edition) that the sale begins already to ‘ drag its wounded length along.’ To be sure, the first edition was 3000, and (as you say sometimes) one used to be satisfied with such things.

“ I am beginning very seriously to turn my attention again to Sheridan, and shall not be, this time, diverted from it by anything.

“ I see ‘ Italy ’ quoted everywhere. Bessy hopes you do not forget her old claim (like that of the Universities), that a copy of every work of yours should be duly deposited with her. She is still of the dual number.

“ Ever yours, faithfully,

“ THOMAS MOORE.”

To Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“ Sloperton Cottage, Jan. 18. 1824.

“ My dear Rogers.

“ On my return from Ireland the latter end of last week, I found my table and drawers heaped with letters and manuscripts (among the latter a Tragedy, a Poem, and the rough copy of the Memoirs of a Rebel Chief, sent to me from America), and your precious little letter lay so modestly lurking under all this mass, that it was but the night before last I fished it up, like a pearl, from among them. Thank you, many, many times, for the encouraging things you say about my book. It certainly succeeds with the public, which ought to be a consolation to me for the heart-burning it produces in various quarters. Radicals hate me for my praise of the aristocracy, Whigs hate me for my candour to the Tories, and Tories hate me for all possible reasons. The cannonade from the Royal battery which you mention is, I suppose, only reserved, and may perhaps be dealt out to me in small shot though the 'Representative,' or kept to give éclat to the commencement of the Lockhart dynasty. Should there be anything worth answering (which as yet there has not been, the statement in the 'Westminster,' as to the gift of the four thousand pounds, being, I am pretty sure, false), I must take the field in a pamphlet, like Bowles. In the mean time, during all this my private affairs go on most dishearteningly — 'en attendant l'amant périt.' You have heard of my refusal of Lord Wellesley's offer, and think, perhaps, with others (who have a different standard for a poor man from that which they go by themselves) that I ought to have accepted it. But if you knew all the circumstances, and heard my own view of it, you would not think so. Such a favour from the other side at this moment, coming in coincidence with the impression on some minds that I have courted the Tories in my book, would have left a vulnerable point in my character through life; and as character is my only property (though a damned bad property I find it), I must only endeavour to make the best of my bargain.

"Bessy is better than I have known her some time; she and Anastasia enjoyed the Twelfth Night at Bowood without me. God bless you, my dear Rogers: it will be a good while before we meet, as I mean to work without intermission, if I can, for the next six months. You will ask — at what? and that's the question, for I have not even yet decided; but it must be at something little short of coining, or I'm ruined.

“ Yours ever,

“ T. MOORE.”

From James Corry, Esq.

“ Dublin, 15. Merion Square, Sunday, Nov. 27. 1825.

“ My dear Moore,

“ You have returned, it seems, from the north to your own little cottage, which therefore unites again all its former claims to distinction,—

“ ‘ Wit, poetry, friendship, and beauty.’

“ I was delighted to hear of your northern excursion, and am glad of your return. Ever since I read ‘ Sheridan's Life,’ I have been longing to write to you, but while you were winning applauses from every one about you, I thought it would not be fair to ‘pursue the triumph’ with a dull letter, to which you could not find time to attend. It is very gratifying to the lovers of poetry to think, that the Bard of the Western Island has at last shaken hands with the Poet of the North, and that they are pleased with each other. But your excursion has done more for you than afford to Scott an opportunity to know you. It has enabled the British Athens, his own ‘romantic town,’ to show their respect for your talents: this is not less gratifying than useful, because it will hereafter assist you towards receiving ‘golden’ opinions’ from booksellers at home. I cannot tell you how much I admire your ‘Life of Sheridan.’ It is the most interesting piece of biography I ever read, and I felt a greater interest in it, from believing that you wrote many passages of it after having dipped your pen in your own heart. In short, my dear Moore, I suspect that often while you were writing about Sheridan, you were thinking about yourself, as thus — that ‘poverty is the best nurse of talent;’ that he married a young and lovely creature before frequent exhibitions before the public had injured in her ‘that fine gloss of feminine modesty, for whose absence not all the talents and accomplishments of the whole sex can atone;’ that ‘labour is the parent of all the lasting wonders of the world, whether poetry or pyramids;’ that ‘talents in literature, unassisted by the advantages of birth, find it difficult to break through the well-guarded frontier’ of the aristocracy. Thus (after putting all distinctions of honour and directness of character out of the question) have I amused myself in supposing similarities between you; but I have nearly omitted a most important one. I think you say somewhere that he was very fond of an Irish stew, and I have made your mother laugh herself to tears at this part of the parallel. You know she always cries when she is very happy. I wish poor Bryan’s tears always flowed from the same source. North was very eloquent in praising your book to me the other day. We are all well here; I include your family with my own in this account. Braham and Stephens are picking our pockets — full houses every night. My library has been enriched lately with nine quarto volumes of ‘Moore’s Works,’ splendidly bound, most of them inlaid; they grace a shelf opposite the fire, over which your picture hangs, so that when a TORY stands with his back to the grate, let him turn which way he will, he is well roasted between all he sees, and feels, and hears. I intended to have inlaid your lines on the Strainer in one of the blank leaves in the front of Anacreon, vol. 1.; but, alas! neither high nor low can I find them here, and they derive half their value from being written in your own hand. Will you, like a good fellow, transcribe them for me, when you are at leisure? and Mrs. Corry will join me in giving you a thousand thanks for your kindness. Did Sir Walter Scott ever mention my humble name to you? I was introduced to him by Blake, as your friend. I met him at Blake's house. I wrote to him a polite and humble note, addressed to Edinburgh (through Rees), asking him to receive from me (as 'your friend and Blake's'), a little tooth-pick case of Irish black oak, enriched with a little Irish gold, and Irish diamond on the lid; the whole thing not worth two guineas. Were it of any value beyond its Hibernicisms, I should have thought I took a liberty with him; his silence makes me sure of it. Mrs. Corry unites with me in best regards to Mrs. M.

"Farewell,

"JAMES CORRY."

From Lady Donegal.

"7. Clarges Street, Jan. 24. 1826.

"I was very happy to receive your letter, melancholy as the subject of it was, but we were anxious to hear from you, and to know all we could about you, after the affliction you had suffered, and the trying scenes you had to go through with your family. Your conduct towards them is most kind, and like yourself; but I own I do regret that Lord Wellesley's offer was not accepted of, for it might have been done without your having any part in it; and you are not accountable for the actions of your mother, who might have taken it all upon herself.

"I may be wrong in thinking so, but I cannot help regretting heartily that you have thus added to your difficulties, when it might have been avoided. However, every one must give you credit for your feeling, which was independent and noble, and I sincerely wish you had an income to keep pace with your generous mind. One thing I grieve over is, that you will now write in a hurry, and not do yourself justice; but I do hope and beg you will be guarded, and even sacrifice a little for the sake of conciliating friends, for, after all, they are necessary to one's happiness in every way in this uncertain life.

"Ever most sincerely,

"Yours, &c.,

"B. DONEGAL."

*To Dr. Bain.

"Sloperton Cottage, Devizes, April 17. 1826.

"My dear Friend,

"I wrote to Charles Sheridan yesterday, begging him to apply to you upon a subject in which we are all pretty equally concerned; but, upon second thoughts, I feel that I ought not to have taken this roundabout way, but to have written to you decidedly myself. You see the 'Quarterly Review' has fired its long-threatened cannon-

* See Memoirs, Vol. V. p. 55.

ade, and though it is more noisy than mischievous, yet some of my friends (Lord Lansdowne among many others) think I ought to take notice of it. My intention therefore is, in the preface to the next edition, to put two or three paragraphs, as good-tempered and conciliatory as possible, disclaiming all idea of imputing a general want of generosity, in pecuniary matters, to the illustrious personage concerned in these transactions, but at the same time defending the accuracy of my own statements. It is odd enough, that the only points of importance which they affect to disprove, is the account of the £200 sent through Vaughan, for which I had the authority of the two persons concerned in it, Vaughan and yourself. They say the sum was £500, and that it was accepted, made use of, and afterwards repaid. Now, what I want of you is (and indeed you could not render me a more signal service, to say nothing of what is due to the family and yourself), to let me put two or three lines, as follows, with your signature :—

“ ‘ My dear Sir,

“ ‘ The statement which you have made in your Life of my friend Mr. Sheridan, that £200 was the sum proffered to me by Mr. Vaughan, and that it was respectfully declined, is perfectly correct.

“ ‘ Yours, &c.’

“ If you prefer having the words addressed to Charles Sheridan :—

“ ‘ My dear Charles,

“ ‘ The statement which Mr. Moore, &c., &c.,’ it would do equally well, and perhaps better. I know it is far from pleasant for you, and God knows I heartily hate it myself, much as I am used to it, to have your name brought before the public in any way ; yet, if honest men did not stand by each other on a pinch, this world would not be worth living in ; besides, as your authority is already pledged on the face of my statement, this would be only the repetition of it in a more formal way, and would be, indeed, the only mode of settling all controversy on this point at rest for ever. You may depend upon my answer being such as will tend very much to remove any impression there may have been of my wishing to attack the King unfairly ; and your assistance in the way I ask will materially assist me towards that object, as, in enabling me to show that I am correct in my statements, it will give me the power of being more candid and conciliatory in my admissions ; in short, it will carry us triumphantly through. Though I had no answer to my last letter to you on my return from Ireland, I know from Charles Sheridan that it was received and acted upon. My best remembrances to your daughters, and believe me, “ Ever very truly yours,

“ THOMAS MOORE.”

To Dr. Bain.

April 18. 1826.

“ My dear Sir,

“ I wrote to you to Heffleton yesterday, feeling that I had taken a more roundabout way than was necessary, in applying to you through Sheridan ; and being anxious to explain to you more fully than I had done to him the great importance of your testimony on this occasion. I am sorry that my letter of yesterday will be so long in reaching you, as I felt sure, in writing it, that you would not hesitate at granting the request it contains. I have just had a letter from my excellent and honourable friend Lord John Russell, who also thinks (this between ourselves) that something ought to be said in my answer to the 'Quarterly.' The three main points on which I am charged with omission and inaccuracy, are, with respect to the 4000*l.* for the seat, the liberation of Sheridan from the prison, and the 200*l.* through Vaughan. On the two former I am prepared with an answer; and you can render a triumphant one on the last. I hope they will forward to you my letter from Heffleton: at all events, do not answer this till you receive it.

"I do not forget my promise for summer, and trust that my stars will be propitious enough to allow me to keep it.

"Yours most truly,

"THOMAS MOORE."

To Dr. Bain.

"July 8. 1826.

"My dear Friend,

"I made a most egregious blunder in writing to you the other day. According to your desire, I dispatched my letter on the Wednesday, in order that it should catch you before your departure from town on the Friday, and, as an Irish way of gaining this object, I directed the letter, in a strange fit of absence, to Heffleton. As this, however, cannot now be helped, I should not have thought it worth while troubling you with a new despatch about it, if I had not another object. You may remember, on my last visit to you, I mentioned that my friend Bowles had expressed a longing desire to accompany me, and that you said you would have been very glad to see him.

Now he has been with me to-day, expressing the very same wish, and it has occurred to me that you would at least like to know the circumstance, in order that if it suited your arrangements, you might have an opportunity of asking him. If you have any difficulty about lodging-rooms, you know you may put me in your worst Poet's corner, and let Bowles have the gîte intended for me. His address is 'Rev. W. L. Bowles, Bremhill, near Calne,' and if you should write and ask him, let me have a line at the same time to say so.

"Yours, in a furious hurry,

"THOMAS MOORE."

To Samuel Rogers, Esq.

"April 21. 1828.

"My dear Rogers,

"I have just heard that you are not very well. Pray let me have one line to satisfy me on the subject.

"I have been getting on pretty well with Byron, though not so rapidly as I expected. Biography is like dot engraving, made up of little minute points, which must all be attended to, or the effect is lost. At every step some small subject of inquiry starts up which costs me half-a-dozen letters, to say nothing of being obliged to wait for the answers.

"Our Anastasia is going on as comfortably as we could expect. How is your sister? I had determined never to ask you this question again; but feeling gets the better of pique; and so there it is. Answer it.

"Ever yours faithfully,

"THOMAS MOORE."

To Philip Crampton, Esq.

“ Sloperton Cottage, Devizes, July 31. 1828.

“ My dear Crampton,

“ I have ventured to introduce to you by letter our great gun of the press here (Barnes, the editor of ‘The Times’), who is about to take a trip to the lakes of Killarney, and means to stop a day or two in Dublin on his way. The chief service you will have to render him, is to keep him out of the hands of the Catholic Association, who are in a state of deadly ire against him (and with justice) on account of his late views of our Irish Question, which I disagree with him on, toto cælo, or rather totis inferis, myself. He is, however, a good fellow, as well as a devilish clever one, and has done more for the Catholic cause here than ever O’Connell could undo, let him try ever so hard. This I say merely as relates to England, for Dan’s Irish career has, of late, my entire approbation. Be kind to Barnes, if he gives you the opportunity. He takes also a letter from Lord Lansdowne to his agent at Kenmure. You will be glad, I know, to hear that my little girl is going on better than we could possibly have expected. She has been sitting up for some hours every day this week past, and there seems no danger of any return of inflammation in the hip.

“ God bless you, my dear Crampton. Ever affectionately yours,

“ THOMAS MOORE.

“ I did so lament leaving London before your reign there was over.”

From Thomas Barnes, Esq.

“Thursday, Sept. 11. 1828.

“Dear Moore,

“I reached Town after my Irish trip on Sunday last, but have not had time to write till this afternoon. I could not have the pleasure of seeing you on my return, for I was at last compelled to come to London without any delay.

“I have been delighted with my journey: it has removed from my mind a vast deal of prejudice and false impression: it has made me feel an interest for Ireland and its people which will render the support of its cause no longer a task, but a cordial service.

“I saw a great deal of the people; though, unfortunately, I was not able to avail myself of all your introductions. Mr. Corry had left Dublin; Lord Kenmare was away for Killarney; and I was too much pressed for time in passing through Kilkenny to see Major Bryan. I met Shiel in society at Dublin, and found him not only what I expected—a clever, lively companion, but what I did not expect—a very rational and candid person, even on his own exciting subject of Catholic politics. I did not see the ‘great Dan O’Connell,’ but I met one of his brothers at Killarney. I don’t know whether he was aware of his companion, but there certainly was no instinctive antipathy. We passed a very pleasant afternoon in a party given by Major Mahoney of Dunloe.

“I am glad to find your face turned again towards us; and think you will see no reason to turn it away. Our views and principles are, in the main, so similar, that there cannot be any permanent disagreement.

“ Mrs. Barnes begs me to express her cordial hope that your daughter is better. She has, like myself, contracted a strong interest for the ‘ green isle ’ and its inhabitants.

“ Yours faithfully,

“ T. BARNES.”

To Philip Crampton, Esq.

“ March 25. 1834.

“ My dear Philip,

“ How the time flies ! and how you and I keep never minding each other, till at last, some fine day, one or other, or both — but ‘ away with melancholy, ’ as the song saith, we shall have, with the blessing of God, a merry day or two together yet. Did you know that I was very near paying you a visit at the time of Lord John Russell’s excursion to Ireland last autumn ? He asked me to go with him, and for two or three days my wings were ready spread for flight. I had invitations from Bessborough and Lord Ebrington, and the Lansdownes offered to bring me back ; but, all at once, my heart failed, and I gave it up. One of my reasons for doing so you were a good deal concerned in, as I found I could not have devoted more than a day or two to Dublin, and that being my principal object (on account of you and poor little Nell), I thought the rest hardly worth the time and expense. However, next autumn, I am resolved to invade you, and this bright sudden thought is very much the cause of this sudden, but not bright letter, which will, however, I know, give you pleasure.

“ We are all well, except that I am rather plagued of late with weak eyes, which to a poor 'working-day' author is rather inconvenient. We hear of you sometimes and of your still blooming looks, which we pray heartily for the continuance of; being ever, my dear good fellow,

"Most heartily yours,

"THOMAS MOORE.

"Meant dually to include Bessy also, though we never were more one in our lives, which is saying a good deal, this being the anniversary of our marriage — the twenty-third year!"

To Samuel Rogers, Esq.

"Sloperton, Oct. 6. 1835.

"My dear Rogers,

"I should have written to you sooner after my return from Ireland, but that I thought you must have left London, and did not like to send a letter yelping at your heels. But having heard from some one that you were seen in an omnibus lately, which sounds very like the neighbourhood, at least, of London, I take my chance of this catching you in that not over-fast conveyance. I don't know whether you have heard anything of my honours and glories in Ireland; but I assure you I thought very often of you when I was among my Muses at Bannow; one of which (my Chief Muse) was a remarkably pretty girl of about seventeen, and when I turned round to her, as she accompanied my triumphal car (which went at a very slow pace), and said, 'This is a long journey for you,' she answered, with a smile that would have done your heart good, 'Oh, I only wish, sir, it was three hundred miles.' There's for you! What was Petrarch in the Capitol to that?

"But to come to prosaic matters. You have at least heard, with all the world, that while the People were crowning me at Bannow the King was pensioning me at St. James's (a concurrence of circumstances, I flatter myself, not common in history); and never, I must add, did golden shower descend upon a gentleman nearer what is called his 'last legs' than I was at the moment when this unasked-for favour lighted upon me. With a little time and a good deal of work I have now, you will be glad to hear, every prospect of surmounting my difficulties. With the Longmans I am deeply dipped—or rather, an aggregate of sums which I had in their hands, bestowed by different friends upon the children (viz. Lord John, Admiral Douglas, and Byron), stands confronted in their books by another aggregate, equal, I fear, in amount, of the sums which, at different times, I have been obliged to anticipate on my labours. All this I shall now be enabled in time to make straight, for it will be in my power to devote the greater part of the sums coming from the next two volumes of my 'History' to this very desirable object.

"So much for one of my creditors. I now come to my second—for I have, thank God, but two—no other human creature having a demand (beyond the common tradesmen's credit) upon my purse. That other creditor, I need not tell you, my dear, kind-hearted Rogers, is yourself; and I blush, even in this matter-of-fact statement, to have connected my obligations to you with any in which the mere quid pro quo barter of this world is concerned. But I do not the less feel the difference in sentiment for having thus mixed them up together in sober matter of fact; and that fact being that I owe you, my best of good friends, two hundred pounds: it has been some little relief to my mind to write this letter to assure you that, as soon as I possibly can, I will discharge that debt. This, I know, I need not have told you; but, as I have just said, it is a relief to my mind to give the assurance, and I have not the least doubt that you will understand and enter into all that I feel about it.

“ I leave myself always so little time to write letters, that I much doubt whether I have expressed anything here that I meant to express. But you understand me enough by this time (a more than thirty years’ experience, isn’t it?) not to translate me wrongly, however confused may be the text; and, trusting to this for your version of the above, I am, my dear Rogers,

“ Most truly yours,

“ THOMAS MOORE.”

To Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“ Sloperon, Jan. 6. 1836.

“ My dear Rogers,

“ This note will be delivered to you by a very deserving young Irish artist, who is now here on his way to London, with a portrait of my unworthy self, which he is about to have engraved immediately, and which, according to the opinion of all who have seen it, comes nearest to the sublime and lofty original of any version that has ever been made of him. It is, I believe seriously, and judging from the opinions of all my friends, a most excellent likeness; and as you are an encourager both of art and of me, I venture to introduce my young countryman to you, with the hope that you will see both him and the picture, and, if you approve of the latter, speak a good word for it among your friends. Lord Lansdowne liked it so much that he allows the print to be dedicated to him.

“ I should not so patiently have forborne from inquiring about you lately, had I not received from many quarters most prosperous accounts of you.

“ Yours, ever most truly,

“ THOMAS MOORE.

“ My friend's name is Mulvany.”

From a Missourian.

“ St. Louis, State of Missouri, U. States,

“ May 22. 1836.

“ Sir,

“ As you have written a book whose object (primâ facie) is to establish truth, and dissipate error on a subject which is considered of very high importance in Christendom, to wit, the divine origin and nature of the Roman Catholic faith, I trust you will excuse me for requesting you to reply to a question which the reading of your able and most witty work has suggested, not only to me, but to many other of my fellow-citizens in this part of the world. The question which I would take the liberty of putting is this, whether we are to consider your work, entitled ‘ An Irish Gentleman in search of a Religion,’ as a serious defence of the Roman Catholic doctrines and of their intrinsic divinity? or, whether we are to look upon it as a mere demonstration of the existence of the Roman Catholic faith (as it at present is taught) in the earliest apostolic age, without connecting it directly with the Creator of the universe, including in the idea ‘ Universe,’ not only the solar, but every other system of central stars and revolving planets and satellites which since the Christian era science has revealed to mankind?

“ That you have succeeded in demonstrating its early Christian origin, is admitted by most persons who have read your book ; that you have refuted the objections so often urged against the doctrines of the Trinity and Transubstantiation on the ground of their modern origin, is also admitted ; that you have shown the innovations of Protestantism, and its total want of title to the name of primitive Christianity, is also conceded. But, while they admit all this, there are many who insist that you by no means prove, or intend to prove, the intrinsic divinity, as a special revelation, of Roman Catholic doctrine, or even of Christianity itself in its broadest, Protestant signification ; that, on the contrary, you Gibbonise (excuse the neologism), and through your most solemn observations a tone of irony is discovered, which, in your supposed prototypic hand, as you know, is the most unparryable (here, again, a ‘ novus hospes ’) weapon ever directed against the vitals of holy Mother Church.

“ If this suspicion of Gibbonism be unfounded, permit me to recommend that you specifically disclaim any such insidious irony. If you are really sincere in defence of the Roman Catholic dogmata (particularly the dogma of Transubstantiation) you are bound to say so. By so doing you will the better attain the object which I am willing to hope you had in view. By omitting to do so, I verily believe that object will run the risk of being defeated. In conclusion I beg to assure you that whatever may have been your object, whether to sustain the Church of St. Peter, or to precipitate its fall, my opinion of your transcendent talents, and the use you have made of them in aid of the land in which I ate my first potatoe, cannot be changed; and have, therefore, the honour to tender you the assurance of the esteem and respect of “ Your very obedient Servant,

“ A MISSOURIAN.

“ Thomas Moore, Esq.”

To Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“ Sloper-ton, July 13. 1837.

“ My dear Rogers,

“ On Saturday last I returned home from my very agreeable excursion; the only drawback on the pleasure of which was my being obliged to return by Havre, and so losing my promised visit to you. My voyage down the Seine to Caen (where I deposited Tom with an eminent Greek professor) was delightful; the boat, each day, being filled with gay company, having a good band of music aboard, and passing every hour through new and beautiful scenes. The weather, I need not tell you, was a long course of sunshine; and altogether it was a very pleasant and unexpected dream. Pray tell Lord Holland that his hint about Caen (which I had never before thought of) was the rudiment of all this. The Duc de Broglie, on my making inquiries of him, suggested also Caen; and on my coming to investigate further, I found that one of my early college friends, who was forced to leave Ireland in ‘the time of the troubles,’ and entered into the French service, is now (having attained the rank of General) commanding the district at Caen. The few days I passed there with this good Irishman, talking over old rebellious times, was not the least interesting part of my trip; and his good sense and military knowledge will render his society, I trust, a source of no small advantage to Tom.

“ We attended the ball at the Hotel de Ville; and, on the night of the fireworks, Tom was saved, perhaps, from being among the asphyxiés in the Champ de Mars, by being seated on the roof of the Tuileries, looking at bouquets and fire-balloons.

“ My love to the Lady of the Park; and believe me ever, my dear Rogers,

“ Most truly yours,

“ THOMAS MOORE.”

To Thomas Longman, Jun., Esq.

“ Nov. 23. 1837.

“ Dear Tom,

“ With respect to what you say about ‘Lalla Rookh’ being the ‘cream of the copyrights,’ perhaps it may, in a property sense; but I am strongly inclined to think that, in a race into future times (if any thing of mine could pretend to such a run), those little ponies, the ‘Melodies,’ will beat the mare, Lalla, hollow. As to the other things being ‘unproductive,’ why, it is to make them productive that the edition is contemplated. What have ‘Madoc,’ ‘Joan of Arc,’ &c., been producing all this time?

“ Yours, my dear Tom, very truly,

“ THOMAS MOORE.”

To Philip Crampton, Esq.

“ Dec. 23. 1838.

“ My dear Crampton,

“ In my hurry yesterday I forgot to mention what was certainly next to Tom’s case in my mind, and that was your Discourse or Lecture, which I read a few days since in one of the Irish papers, and was truly charmed with it. I take for granted, however, that that was but a sketch or abstract of what you said, and that we shall have it in extenso. I saw also a clever Letter, by a brother Papist of mine, in reply to some of your observations. I rather think that must have been the work of a little priest belonging to Marlborough Street, who wrote a very good article about Galileo (much in the same spirit) in the ‘ Dublin Review.’

“ What I marvel at in you, Master Philip, is your finding time for such lucubrations. Go on and prosper, my fine fellow ; you have my hearty good wishes and admiration in all lines.

“ Yours affectionately,

“ T. MOORE.”

To Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“ Sloperton, April 18. 1839.

“ My dear Rogers,

“ Only think, two such wonders as that you should have taken the initiative in writing to me, and that I should have been so long in answering you. It was not, I need hardly tell you, from want of thankfulness for the pleasure your note gave me; but I have been busy beyond even my usual stress of business, and at three or four different tasks, too, driving four-in-hand daily; so that they all, I think, run a fair chance of being bungled. I have also had a more than usual pressure of correspondence, and lately on no very agreeable subject—the illness of our boy, Tom, who has been obliged, by rather a severe nervous attack, to get leave of absence from his regiment; while the other little fellow (as I believe you know) has also determined upon being a soldier,—an Indian one,—and is now preparing hard and fast for Addiscombe, Hobhouse having very kindly given him a cadetship.

“I did not expect you would have seen my late ‘Epistle,’ the channel through which it appeared lying so much out of your way, your ‘solar track.’ Did you at all remember the circumstance in which it originated? It was your saying to me, the last time you were at Sloperton, on seeing the prints we have hung round our dining-room, ‘Why, you have all your patrons here!’ The twelve first lines were written the day after that visit and never thought of again till very lately, when I added the remainder.

“Your friend Bessy, who ‘does all things but forget,’ sends her warmest regards and remembrances, along with mine. We trace you now and then among the shining dinner-names (in our after-dinner lucubrations), and always wish you a long continuance of such gay doings.

“Best regards to your sister; and believe me,

“Ever most truly yours,

“THOMAS MOORE.”

To Thomas Longman, Jun., Esq.

“ October 8. 1839.

“ Dear Tom,

“ I have received intelligence this morning of a most unexpected turn of good luck from your namesake Tom. By a rapid succession of circumstances he has arrived at his point of purchase for a Lieutenancy—an event many wait long years for. But this demands an instant outlay, and the sum of 250*l.* must be placed without delay in the hands of Messrs. Cox and Greenwood. Though I have little doubt you would advance me this sum on the edition or the fourth volume of the ‘History,’ I have, on consideration, preferred the plan of using Russell’s money for it, and making all straight to him when convenient. You will therefore have the goodness, in the course of to-morrow (as delay might risk the loss of this most fortunate turn-up), to deposit the above-mentioned sum in the hands of Cox and Greenwood, specifying to them for what purpose it is so deposited.

“ Yours in great haste (having returned from a visit to a neighbour, but just in time to catch the Post),

“ THOMAS MOORE.

“ I think the sum is 250*l.* — but I have annexed the scrap from Tom’s scrawl for you. I was sending this note by the parcel, but fearing you might delay in opening that, despatch it by post.”

To Thomas Longman, Jun., Esq.

“ Bowood, Nov. 7. 1839.

“ Dear Tom,

“ I sent you off from this last night Jones’s drawing from the Dismal Swamp, which (as being very precious to Mrs. Moore) you will take good care of for her. I think you would have been pleased to see my noble host, when I told him that I had advised your calling in the alliance of Jones in our edition. He said instantly, and Lady L. joined most cordially in the opinion, that we could not have selected any one so fit for the task. This I rejoiced at, for my own sake as well as Jones’s, having taken upon myself (ignoramus as I am in art) the responsibility of the selection.

“ I have set some friends of mine here on the hunt for good subjects from ‘Lalla Rookh.’ As to the ‘Melodies,’ I have already mentioned to you, I think, all that struck me as capable of being illustrated.

“ I shall send you by the next packet our third volume corrected.

“ Yours ever,

“ T. MOORE.”

To Thomas Longman, Jun., Esq.

“ Sloperton, Dec. 23. 1839.

“ Dear Tom,

“ I feel really and truly obliged to my friends Co. for their prompt and kind compliance with my request.

I recollect an old woman in Dublin, Mrs. Mackavino (how such a Mac got there, I don't know); but she was a pensioner of my mother's, together with her daughter; and the usual form of their petition used to be 'a couple of shillings for a couple of grateful hearts.' Now a couple of hundreds deserves a proportionate amount of gratitude, and I hereby remit you the same.

"Yours ever truly,

"THOMAS MOORE."

To Thomas Longman, Jun., Esq.

"Sloperton, April 18. 1840.

"Dear Tom,

"I send you the inclosed only, because it will be necessary for me to have a revise of it, which will not, I trust, be the case with what follows. Prose always gives me a hundred times as much trouble in correcting as poetry does. Besides, the printer, you will see, has made a mistake about my 'Greek Ode.'

"We have had a line from Russell by the pilot, and he was then only giddy — not yet sick. Mrs. Moore is still very depressed in spirits, and it will be some time, I fear, before she gets over her loss.

"Pray say to your lady how very much we felt her kind service and kind note.

"Yours very truly,

"T. MOORE.

"In looking over some old diaries and memorandums, I find that, however of late years I may have seen reason to grumble a little with Co. and Co., it was in former years all sunshine between us. Indeed, I will venture to say, that there are few tributes from authors to publishers on record more honourable (or, I will fairly say, more deserved) than those that will be found among my papers, relative to the transactions for many years between myself and my friends of the Row."

To Samuel Rogers, Esq.

"19. Rue Basse, à Passy, près Paris.

"July 16. 1842.*

"My dear Rogers,

"I find that, though you do not write to me, you are still thoughtful as usual about everything that may tend to either my profit or reputation, and I think it must be with a view to gratifying me on the latter score that you recommended the application from 'The Times' that Brougham has just forwarded to me. It does indeed flatter me very much to have it thought that I could wield such a powerful political engine as 'The Times' with either that strength or promptitude which such a task requires, and it flatters me the more from my being conscious that I do not deserve it. Putting my ability, however, out of the question, it is impossible that I should now undertake such an office; for, in the first place, I cannot come to England, and, in the next, if I could, there are so many tasks before me (from the long spell of idleness I have indulged in), that every minute of my time will hardly be sufficient to accomplish them. So, pray take some means of letting Mr. Barnes know that, with every acknowledgment of the honour which he has done me by the application, I feel myself obliged to decline his proposal for the present. I write in haste and by the common post, because I have understood that an immediate answer was necessary, and I would not have troubled you, my dear Rogers, with this letter, had not Brougham desired me to make you the medium of my reply.

* This letter is dated by Mr. Moore 1842, but obviously by mistake for 1822, where it would have been placed had the error been discovered in time.

“ I am afraid there is no chance of our meeting here very soon, for you must have had a sufficient dose of the Continent for some time; but, about the beginning of winter, if the Fates and the Yankees are propitious, we may stand a chance of shaking hands with each other in St. James’s Place.

“ Ever yours,

“ THOMAS MOORE.”

*To Kirkman D. Hodgson, Esq.

“ Sloper-ton, March 30. 1845.

“ My dear Sir,

“ I could much better tell you than I can write to you, the very warm and grateful acknowledgments I feel, not so much for the matter (though to a poor poet fifty pounds is no trifling matter), as for the manner of the kind service which you have been enabled to render me. It will give you pleasure too, I think, to hear that, welcome as the restored note is to myself, it is fifty-fold more welcome in another and better quarter; as I had been lucky enough to be able to conceal the loss from Mrs. Moore, so that it came to her as a gift fresh from the skies.

* This letter alludes to a Bank of England note for 50*l.* which had been lost by Mr. Moore in 1840. On the security of Mr. Kirkman Hodgson and Mr. Longman, the Bank gave Mr. Moore another note for 50*l.* The lost note was never presented for payment.

“Trusting that our friend Longman may, sometime or other, give me an opportunity of thanking you in person,

“I am, dear Sir,

“Yours very truly,

“THOMAS MOORE.”

To Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“Sloperton, June 23. 1847.

“My dear Rogers,

“When, when are we again to meet? I was in hopes that those Irish friends of mine who, as you may remember, gave me lodging under their roof these two last summers, in Albemarle Street, would again have been at their post this summer, and again made me their guest. But the state of Ireland compels them to stand to their post; and this is to me a sad disappointment, for I had set my heart, my dear old friend, on having a few more breakfasts with you (to say nothing of dinners) before ‘time and the hour has quite run out our day.’

“Yours, my very dear friend, most truly,

“THOMAS MOORE.

“I am sinking here into a mere vegetable.”

To Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“ Sloperton, June 27. 1847.

“ My dear Rogers,

“ I show how welcome was your summons by the readiness with which I respond to it. Already Bessy is preparing all for my flight, and as I have some little businesses to despatch in Town, I shall be able to get through them all before you return.

“ Yours ever most truly,

“ THOMAS MOORE.”

To Samuel Rogers, Esq.

“ July 10. 1847.

“ My dear Rogers,

“ I am but just settling down into rural quiet after the week of gay doings with which you so kindly greeted me. Long, long, my dear friend, may you be able to keep up this spirit not only in your own buoyant heart, but (as I found while with you) in the hearts of all those whom you draw within your chosen circle.

“ In this instance, too, I have brought home with me a double stock of pleasure, as your friend Bessy has heard the whole proceedings from me, and in my narrative enjoyed a great part of my pleasure.

“ THOMAS MOORE.”

· POSTSCRIPT.

BEFORE finally closing these volumes, I propose to add some remarks on the publication of Moore's Diary, and the life of which it gives an image.

The literary works of which Mr. Moore was the author had yielded him considerable sums for copyright—not less in the whole, he says, in the ninth volume of his Diary, than 20,000*l*. But these sums had all been exhausted by his yearly outgoings. He had a pension from the Crown of 300*l*. a-year, but this pension ceased with his death. As a provision for his widow, he left only his Diary and Letters,—commending them to my care. I applied immediately to Mr. Longman, his publisher, who informed me that he was prepared to give 3000*l*. for the copyright. I found that for this sum Mrs. Moore could secure an annuity for the remainder of her life not less than the income upon which she and her husband had lived frugally and quietly for the last years of his life; I therefore undertook the task, reserving to myself the power of expunging any passages I might think calculated to wound individuals, or offend the public taste.

It would not be worth while to notice in detail the critical assaults on the character of Moore. That character stands portrayed in his own letters, and his own Diary; I have transferred the impression to printed volumes, and have placed on record, in his own words, his defects as well as his good qualities. I have not pretended to be his biographer, but have left the world to form their own judgment without extenuation, not from want of regard to my friend, but from greater regard to truth. Those biographers who exalt every merit of their hero, and defend all his actions, either deceive themselves or wish to impose upon the world. That which is instructive in itself, is the study of men as they were, whether heroes, or statesmen, or poets, when they have been swept away by the storm, or have fallen in natural decay, and are scattered, “*Où va la feuille de rose,

Et la feuille de laurier.*”

It is a pleasant thing to reflect that the men of our age and of our nation, whose characters have been unfolded to the world by the publication of their letters and their lives, have been proved generally to be men of honest hearts and pure intentions. A century has made a great change for the better.

If we compare Wellington to Marlborough, Romilly and Horner to Bolingbroke and Pulteney, Southey and Moore to Pope and Swift, we shall find that the standard of moral worth, though still far too low, has been vastly raised in the period which has elapsed since the commencement of the eighteenth century.

Moore was imbued throughout his life with an attachment to the principles of liberty ; and he naturally adopted the principles of that party which contended for religious liberty and political reform. His taste for educated and refined society led him into the company of the aristocratic classes in London. Among these he was understood, appreciated, and admired. The more eminent of all political parties were charmed by his poetry, struck with his wit, and attached by the playful negligence of his conversation. A man who was courted and esteemed by Lord Lansdowne, Mr. Canning, Sir Robert Peel, Mr. Rogers, Mr. Sydney Smith, Sir Walter Scott, and Lord Byron, must have had social as well as literary merits of no common order. It was part of his nature to prize the tributes he received from such men, but likewise to doubt whether he was worthy of so much admiration. Hence his frequent recurrence in his Diary to little proofs of kindness and attention from those he himself admired for their genius, or esteemed for their integrity.

The course of politics led him into the composition of political squibs of various merit. The "Vision in the Court of Chancery," the "Slave," the "Breadfruit Tree," and many more, are replete with sense and feeling, as well as wit. Others, intended to satirise George the Fourth, when Prince Regent, are neither pure in point of taste, nor laughable in point of humour; while they have too much of personal hostility for this kind of composition.

It is singular that Mr. Moore should have been one of the gloomy prophets who predicted revolution and calamity as the consequences of the Reform Act. Lord Grey, with a truer knowledge of the English people, was of opinion that the measure, to be safe, must be large; and those who acted with him and under him, framed the Reform Bill in that spirit.

There is, perhaps, in men of letters, a tendency to be dissatisfied with the political system under which they live. Sir James Mackintosh used to observe that the greatest authors of Athens were evidently averse to the rule of the democracy. In France, before the Revolution, the most brilliant writers were as evidently hostile to the absolute monarchy under which they lived. In our own time Southey and Coleridge began with democracy, Scott as a Jacobite, Moore as a disaffected Irish Catholic. The freedom of literary pursuits leads men to question the excellence of the ruling power; and thus despotism and democracy alike find enemies among the most highly gifted of those who live under their sway. Had Reform never been triumphant, Moore would, in all probability have remained a warm Reformer.

Moore's domestic life gave scope to the best parts of his character. His beautiful wife, faultless in conduct, a fond mother, a lively companion, devoted in her attachment, always ready—perhaps too ready, to sacrifice her own domestic enjoyments that he might be admired and known, was a treasure of inestimable value to his happiness. I have said that perhaps she was too ready to sacrifice herself, because it would have been better for Mr. Moore if he had not yielded so much to the attractions of society, however dazzling and however tempting. Yet those who imagine that he passed the greater part of his time in London are greatly in error. The London days are minutely recorded; the Sloperton months are past over in a few lines. Except when he went to Bowood, or some other house in the neighbourhood, the words “read and wrote,” comprise the events of week after week of literary labour and domestic affection.

Those days of intellectual society and patient labour have alike passed away. The breakfasts with Rogers, the dinners at Holland House, the evenings when beautiful women and grave judges listened in rapture to his song, have passed away. The days when a canto of “Childe Harold,” the “Excursion” of Wordsworth, the “Curse of Kehama” of Southey, and the “Lalla Rookh” of Moore, burst in rapid succession upon the world, are gone. But the world will not forget that brilliant period; and while poetry has charms for mankind, the “Melodies” of Moore will survive.

His last days were peaceful and happy; his domestic sorrows, his literary triumphs, seem to have faded away alike into a calm repose. He retained to his last moments a pious submission to God*, and a grateful sense of the kindness of her whose tender office it was to watch over his decline. Those who have enjoyed the brilliancy of his wit, and heard the enchantments of his song, will never forget the charms of his society. The world, so long as it can be moved by sympathy, and exalted by fancy, will not willingly let die the tender strains, and the patriotic fires, of a true poet.

J. R.

April, 1856.

* Mrs. Moore, as I have before mentioned, has recorded in her memory his earnest exhortation:—“Lean upon God, Bessy; lean upon God.”

MOORE'S TOMB.

I N D E X.

INDEX.

A.

Abbot, Mr., ii. 154; iii. 288; iv. 5, 6, 10, 12, 102, 123, 124, 125, 126, 161, 162, 217, 317, 319, 320; v. 22, 24, 25, 33, 37.
 Abbotsford, Moore's visit to, iv. 330, 341; v. 5, and note, 6, 14, 132; vii. 171.
 Abercorn, Marquis of, vi. 244.
 Abercrombie, ii. 181, 244; iii. 341; iv. 53, 193, 267, 268, 313; v. 39; vi. 88, 244.
 ———, Mrs., iv. 33.
 Abercrombies, the, iv. 142, 268, 294; vi. 87.
 Abercromby, iii. 347; iv. 30, 137, 138, 155, 156, 158, 165, 167; v. 85, 86, 136, 150, 175, 241; vi. 319; vii. 34, 68, 69.
 ———, Mrs., iv. 30; vii. 68.
 Abercrombys, the, iii. 351; iv. 155; v. 136, 184; vi. 187.
 Aberdeen, Earl of, ii. 120; iv. 53, 137, 139, 140, 141; vi. 256.
 "A Bishop and a bold Dragoon," iv. 282, 283; v. 27.
 "Abraham and Agar," by Guercino, iii. 20.
 "Absalom and Achitophel," vii. 18.
 Academia delle Belle Arti, the, iii. 38.
 Académie des Inscriptions, vii. 220.
 "Achilles defending the Dead Body of the Queen of the Amazons," by Schadow, iii. 66.
 "Achin Foane," vi. 227.
 Ackroyd, i. 359, 365.
 "Acme and Septimius," viii. 121.
 A'Court, Captain, v. 235.
 ———, Mr., iv. 25.
 ———, Mrs., iv. 25, 251.
 Acquapendente, iii. 46.
 "Acta Eruditorum," ii. 169.
 Acting, not an intellectual art, vi. 311.
 Actors' mistakes, iv. 33.
 Actors of melancholy, vi. 11.
 "Adagia," ii. 148.
 Adair, Sir Robert, ii. 298, 303, 305, 313; iii. 39, 53, 58, 69; iv. 17, 78, 87, 170, 205, 302, 303, 306, 314; v. 76, 123, 159; vii. 216; his mission to Russia, and intercepted letter, iv. 267.
 Adam, Right Hon. W., iv. 74, 288, 289, 314.
 Adapting French pieces to the English stage, the great manufacture of the present day, iii. 293.
 Addington, Mr., reports of his being offered the Premiership, i. 187; epitaph on, vi. 140.
 ———, Miss, ii. 317.
 Addison, Joseph, composing at Holland

House, ii. 202; renowned for his conversation, vi. x.
 "Address to a Swan's Quill," vii. 162.
 Adelaide, ii. 36.
 ———, Madame, vii. 328.
 ———, Queen, vi. 220.
 Adelphi Theatre, iii. 293; iv. 327; vi. 147, 150, 225; vii. 25.
 Admiralty, the, ii. 27; vii. 230, 377.
 ———, Court, the, ii. 136.
 "Adolphe," viii. 218.
 Adolphus, his "History of George the Third," ii. 277.
 "A Dream of Furtle, by Sir W. Curtis," v. 169.
 Adrian, iii. 70; colossal head of, iii. 55.
 Adriatic, the, iii. 226; viii. 186.
 Advertisement, for a King of France, iv. 269.
 "Advice to Julia," iii. 299.
 Advocates of religious liberty, vi. 46.
 Ægean Sea, li. 328.
 Ægina marbles, the, iii. 74.
 Æneas, iv. 276.
 "Æneid," ii. 246, 254.
 Æschylus, "Prometheus," ii. 290.
 Affleck, Lady, ii. 231; iv. 315.
 ———, Sir Robert, iv. 302.
 "Agemia," ii. 197, 198.
 Agnese, St., church of, iii. 73.
 "Agnus Dei," ii. 171, 178.
 Aguada, Madame, vi. 329.
 Aidus, Bishop, vii. 369.
 Aikin, Lucy, iv. 37; vi. 33.
 ———, Mr., jeu d'esprit upon, ii. 209.
 "Aleen a Roon," v. 37.
 Ainsworth, v. 174; vii. 244.
 Airolti, M., iii. 183.
 "A Journey to the Moon," iv. 131.
 "Aladin," iii. 333.
 Alava, General, v. 84; vii. 242.
 Albano, iii. 20, 62, 67; "The Ratto di Proserpina," 83; "The three Marys seeing the Angel at the Sepulchre," 67.
 Albany, v. 225.
 ———, Countess of, iii. 36, 39, 78.
 Albaro, the, Lord Byron's house at Genoa, v. 233.
 "Albe," iv. 121.
 Albemarle, Countess of, iv. 214.
 ———, Earl of, iii. 7, 282; vi. 161, 191.
 Albe go di Londra, iii. 47.
 ———, di Parigi, iii. 47.
 Albert, Charles, iv. 41. note.
 ———, H.R.H. Prince, vii. 319.

- Albert, Madame, iii. 91.
 Alboni, viii. 29.
 Albrizzi, Contessa d', iii. 26.
 "Alcestes," of Euripides, ii. 291.
 Alcibiades, a sad roué, ii. 287.
 Aldborough, Countess of, iii. 218. 284.
 "Aldobrandine Marriage," the, iii. 56.
 Aldobrandini family, the, iii. 73.
 Alexander, Emperor of Russia, ii. 19. 21 ; vii. 190.
 ———, Nathaniel, Bishop of Meath, told Moore the anecdote about Sheridan's sermon, ii. 294.
 ——— VII., Pope, monument to, by Bernini, iii. 53.
 "Alexander's Feast," iii. 325.
 Alexandre, M., v. 63.
 Alexandrian manuscript, the, ii. 271.
 Alfieri, iii. 36. 39. 54. 73. 162. 248 ; vi. viii ; vii. 136. 137. 321 ; his fame, 321 ; his opinion of the English language, i. xxvii ; "Life," iii. 78 ; "Ottavia," 25 ; portrait of, 38 ; "Tragedies," 78.
 Alfred the Great, Life of, written by Milton, Hume, Burke, and Mackintosh, vi. 158.
 Algiers, vi. 100. note ; vii. 307. 326. 329. 332. 340. 342. 357 ; viii. 15.
 Ali Pacha, iii. 215.
 Allan, vi. 71.
 Allée des Veuves, iii. 128. 157. 228 ; v. 8 ; viii. 254.
 Allegra (Lord Byron's natural daughter), ii. 193 ; iii. 358 ; v. 186. 190. 226. 296.
 Allen, John, ii. 183. 198. 222. 225. 259. 261. 262. 292. 315. 317. 323. 350. 351. 353. 356 ; iii. 24. 241. 248. 250. 253. 269. 295. 298 ; iv. 22. 52. 91. 138. 226. 228. 261. 303. 313 ; v. 135. 183. 262. 279. 281. 298 ; vi. 39. 41. 109. 198. 206. 225. 267. 293. 315 ; vii. 3. 4. 11. and note ; 19. 45. 46. 175. 247. 313 ; his criticism of Moore's "History," 330 ; at Holland House, 331 ; his opinion of Sir James Mackintosh, vi. 39.
 ———, Miss, ii. 315.
 All Saints' Day at the Pope's private chapel, iii. 58.
 "Alley Croaker," v. 188 ; vi. 218.
 Almack's, ii. 308. 314. 333 ; iii. 239. 346. 349 ; iv. 58. 73. 77. 80. 184. 185. 284 ; v. 68. 78. 81. 173. 189.
 "Alone by the Schuylkill," written chiefly in allusion to Mrs. Hopkinson, i. 167.
 Alps, the, iii. 6. 16. 17. 22. 24. 128. 223 ; iv. 118 ; viii. 185. 225.
 Althorpe, Lord, ii. 264 ; v. 321. 232 ; vi. 159. 216. 290. 291 ; vii. 41. 55 ; compared by Luttrell to the manager of a theatre before a tumultuous audience, vi. 259 ; viii. 168.
 Alton, v. 228 ; vi. 288. 289.
 ———, Towers, vii. 123 ; the handsome chapel there, 124.
 Alvanley, Lord, anecdote of, iii. 341 ; vii. 171 ; pun by, vi. 321 ; story of, and Berkeley Craven, ii. 158 ; story, told by him, of a man learning the Swedish language, vi. 190.
 Amateur Glee Club, i. 355.
 "Amateurs and Actors," ii. 356.
 Amati, iii. 31 ; v. 4.
 Ambassadors, anecdotes of, v. 128.
 Ambition of style, instance of, v. 223.
 Amboyne, iii. 316.
 Ambrosio, St., iii. 22.
 Amelia Louisa, ii. 151.
 America, i. xi, xviii. 136. 155. 157. 171. 225 ; ii. 48. 193. 229. 264. 276. 277 ; iii. 134. 216 ; iv. 268 ; v. 131. 140. 152. 153. 293 ; vi. 141. 151. 180. 194. 232. 309. 340 ; vii. 41. 47. 86. 102. 253. 320 ; viii. 19. 46. 47. 44. 137. 164. 259.
 American character, i. 151.
 ——— edition of Moore's "Epistles," i. 225.
 ——— editions of Moore's works, ii. 216.
 ——— Government, the, offered Sheridan 20,000*l.* for his services in the cause of liberty, ii. 213.
 ——— intolerance, v. 140.
 ——— inns, i. 170.
 ——— laws, their diversity, ii. 276.
 ——— letter to Moore, extracts from, vii. 260.
 ——— "Life of Moore," i. 225.
 ——— literature, its backwardness and the cause of it, iii. 94.
 ——— passion for races, vi. 347.
 ——— slavery, vii. 41.
 ——— stage coaches emblematic of the Government, i. 162.
 Americanism, iv. 240.
 Americans, the, alarmed by the number of Merry's servants, and the immensity of their baggage, viii. 51 ; surprised by art, not nature, vi. 337.
 Ames, Mrs., v. 63. 67. 78.
 Amherst, Lord, iii. 164.
 "Amor possente," a beautiful duet from "Armida," iii. 330 ; iv. 79.
 Amphill, ii. 194. 195. 259. 266. 274. 284.
 ——— church, iii. 285.
 ——— park, ii. 300. note ; iii. 284.
 Amurath, a fine story for poetry, ii. 323.
 Amyot, Captain, iv. 43. 68. 210. 251 ; v. 107.
 "Anarcharsis," i. 94.
 "——, The Travels of," given to Moore as a reward for his English verses, i. 23.
 "Anacreon," commenced by Moore, i. 59 ; Dr. Lawrence's remarks upon, 99 ; permission to dedicate it to the Prince of Wales, 104 ; some of Moore's translations from, submitted to Dr. Kearney, 70 ; volume of designs from, 120 ; strange letter from a man, about Moore and "Anacreon," lending him 10*l.*, vi. 16.
 "—— chez Polycrète," iii. 8.
 Anacreontic Dinner, the, v. 48. 144.
 "Analecta Græca Minora," vii. 160.
 Anonymous letter, inclosing three pounds to Moore, as a token of a young girl's admiration of "Lalla Rookh," ii. 132.
 Ancient concerts, the, i. 110 ; iv. 205 ; v. 68 ; vi. 44. 112. 113. 116 ; vii. 321.
 Anerum, Lord, iv. 172.
 "And doth not a meeting like this," v. 253.
 Andover, Lady, ii. 241.
 Andrea della Valle, St., iii. 73.
 ——— del Sarto, iii. 37.
 Andrews, Miles P., vi. 155. 195.
 "Andromeda," by Guido, iii. 51.
 Anecdotes, iii. 258. 259 ; of a cardinal, 79 ; of actors, iv. 233 ; of a disputatious man, v. 288 ; of a dog, 227 ; of a French girl, iv. 3 ; of a hump-backed man, iii. 217 ; of a judge, v. 269 ; of the Countess of Albemarle, iv. 314 ; of Lord Alvanley, iii. 341 ; vii. 171 ; of ambassadors, v. 128 ; of an actor, in "Coriolanus," 13 ; of an astronomer, iv. 291 ; of an Irish landlord and his agent, ii. 345 ; of an Irish Member, vi. 313 ; of an Irish squire and the militia, iii. 223 ; of a rich heiress, v. 120; of a Sicilian, vi. 68; of a Spanish doctor, vii. 374; of a translator, iii. 12; of Sebastian Bach, ii. 340; of Caleb Baldwin, 234; of Dr. Barnes, vii. 95; of George Barrington, iv. 172; of Lord Barrymore and Sir A. C., iii. 216; of Bavarian Ambassador, 179; of Lady Blessington's theatricals, vi. 281; of Beau Brummel, Moore, and the Prince of Wales, v. 289; of Sir Francis Burdett, vi. 317; of Lord Byron, iv. 216; v. 191, 265, 266, 285, 303; vi. 7, 60; of Marquis Camden, v. 43; of Lord Camelford, vi. 345; of Queen Caroline, iii. 149; of the Empress Catherine, told by Lord St. Helen's, vi. 292; of Lord Cloncurry, 176; of Coleraine, v. 273; of Samuel Taylor Coleridge, vi. 331; of Kangaroo Cooke, iii. 176; of the Countess of Cork, ii. 351; of Mr. Corry, iii. 287, 288; of Crampton and Doherty, v. 300; of John Philpott Curran, v. 7, 99; of Dr. Denman, v. 247; of Doherty, and Crampton, 300; of Doyle and Provost Hutchinson, vi. 160; of Lord Dudley, v. 203, 236, 237; of Billy Egan, i. 204; of the Earl of Eldon and Leach, iii. 12; of the Earl of Ellenborough, ii. 312; iv. 302; v. 42; of the Earl of Ellenborough and figurative oratory, 297; of Lord Erskine, vi. 243, 349; of W. Farquhar, iv. 247; of Fenelon and Cardinal Richelieu, vi. 80; of Ferney and Voltaire, iii. 14; of Judge Fletcher, iv. 16; of Frederick, King of Prussia, v. 224; of the French Revolution, iii. 341; of French translations from the English, iv. 26; of George III., vi. 212; of Edward Gibbon, vii. 374; of Gordon and Don Pedro, vi. 60; of the Duke of Grafton, v. 204; of the Right Hon. Henry Gratian, iii. 287, 288; v. 26, 66; of Earl Grey, vi. 62; of Sir Henry Hardinge (Viscount Hardinge), 148; of Hare's books and the Dogana, iii. 280; of Haydn, ii. 308; of William Hazlitt and John Lamb, iii. 146; of Lord Holland, vi. 52; of Bishop Horsley, 81; of Dr. Hume and Sterling, vii. 168; of John Hunter, vi. 85; of Provost Hutchinson and Doyle, 160; of Irishmen, iv. 138; vi. 68, 109; of Miss Kelly, iv. 104; of John Kemble, vii. 6; of Lord Kenyon, iv. 193; of Charles Lamb, vi. 249; of John Lamb and William Hazlitt, iii. 146; of Pyramid Lambert, iv. 242; of the first Marquis of Lansdowne, vi. 311; of Lanza and Reynolds, iii. 243; of Leach and Lord Eldon, 12; of Lord Liverpool, iv. 39; of Louis XVIII.'s cook, vi. 88; of Charles Macklin, i. 68; of Charles Manners Sutton (Viscount Canterbury), iv. 317; of Marie Antoinette, iii. 241; of Molière, v. 204; of Matthew Montague, viii. 214, and note; of Lady Morgan, v. 297; of Murphy, vii. 239; of Sir Isaac Newton, v. 246; of Lord North, iv. 136, 166; of Robert Owen, vi. 343; of Paley and Dr. Parkinson, ii. 208; of Ralph Payne, iv. 318; of Don Pedro and Gordon, vi. 60; of the Persian Ambassador and the Provost of Edinburgh, iv. 338; of Lord Peterborough, vi. 7; of Piozzi, iv. 329; of Richard Porson, v. 2, 3, 204; of the Duke of Portland and the Westminster election, 119; of "Portrait Charmant," 163; of Abbé Prevost, 206; of the King of Prussia, 224; of the Duke of Queensberry, vii. 258; of reproachful terms, vi. 344; of Cardinal Richelieu and Fenelon, 80; of rival shoemakers, v. 305; of Sir Boyle Roche, iv. 241; viii. 5; of Baron de Rolle, vi. 347; of Sir Walter Scott's grandfather, iv. 341; of William Scott, vii. 200; of Richard Brinsley Sheridan, ii. 160, 179, 294; iii. 191, 192, 233; iv. 134, 135, 136, 286, 287, 288, 289, 295, 296; of Sheridan and Dent, iii. 179; of Sheridan and Richardson, 180; of Sheridan and Shaw, 128; of Sheridan and two French Officers, ii. 191; of Dean Shipley, v. 60; of Spanish Ambassadors, 131; of Speakers of the House of Commons, vi. 320; of Madame de Staël, 57; of Sterling and Dr. Hume, vii. 168; of Abbé St. Phar and the Prince of Wales, iv. 309; of Prince Maurice Talleyrand, v. 224; of General Tarterton, ii. 326; of Baron Thompson, v. 32; of Thorwaldsen, vii. 74; of Lord Thurlow, vi. 81; of Vanini, ii. 350; of Voltaire and Ferney, iii. 14; of H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, ii. 314; iv. 289, 289, 326; of H. R. H. the Prince of Wales and the Abbé St. Phar, 309; of Sir Whistler Webster, vi. 91, 92; of the Duke of Wellington, iv. 337; v. 57, 58, 68, 156; vi. 45, 141; vii. 174; of Sir David Wilkie, 74; of King William IV., vi. 245; of Wordsworth, iii. 163; of the Prince of Wurtemberg, 343; told by Sir Thomas Champneys, iv. 194; by Jekyll, iv. 35, 36; by Rev. Sydney Smith, vi. 26; by Lady Swinton v. 5.

An Elector's notion of reform, iii. 6.

"An Epistle to Thomas Moore, Esq.," ii. 356.

Anet, Claude, iii. 15.

"Angel, the releasing St. Peter from Prison," iii. 55.

Angelina, ii. 329.

Angell, Mr., vi. 25.

Angelo, Michael, a colossal "Head," by, iii. 52; an extraordinary person, 54; "A Vase," 36; "Day and Night," 42; his "Moses," 71; his "Moses" in San Pietro in Vincoli, 56; his "Il Crepuscolo and Aurora," 42; his ivory "Christ," ii. 32; his "Jesus Christ," iii. 35; his "Lorenzo de Medici," 53; his statue of "Christ embracing the Cross," 41; his statue of "Victory," 41; his "statue" over the tomb of Giuliano Medici, 42; his statue over the tomb of Lorenzo, Duke of Urbino, 42; "The Last Judgment," 232; "The Madonna, Christ, and Joseph," 34; "The Pietà," 53; "The Universal Judgment," 54; "Visitation of St. Elizabeth," 67.

"Angelographia," by a clergyman, iv. 46.

"Angels ever bright and fair," ii. 178.

Angerstein, vi. 56, 57, and note.

Anglesey, Marquis of, his recall from Ireland, alluded to, vi. 5; his offer to support Moore as a candidate to represent Trinity College in Parliament, 300; the King's anger with him, at his intention to treat the Catholics with kindness, v. 267.

Angoulême, Duchesse d', iii. 202.

"An Irish Gentleman in search of a Religion," viii. 274.

"Annals of Clomnaenaise," vii. 238.

"— of Inisfallen," vii. 238.

"— of the Four Masters," vii. 300.

- Anne, Queen, iv. 266; attending to hear the debates, vi. 230.
 " — Boleyn," v. 125. 147.
 — of Austria, v. 273.
 Anne's, St. iii. 29.
 Annesley, v. 248. 258.
 —, Lady, iii. 137.
 "Annibal," ii. 155.
 Annulus of Viterbo, vii. 173.
 "Annual Registers," ii. 152. 225.
 "Annunciation of the Virgin," by Fra Bartolomeo, iii. 37.
 Annunziata, church of the, iii. 37. 78.
 "An Ode to Ferdinand," v. 147.
 Anson, Colonel, iii. 295.
 —, Lady, vi. 125.
 —, Lord, iv. 265; vi. 125.
 Antenor, iii. 24. 129. 131.
 "Anthologia Hibernica," i. 23. 59; iv. 131. 229.
 "Anthology," vi. 240.
 Antigua, v. 117; vi. 263; vii. 342.
 "Antinous," the, iii. 48. 54. 59. 63.
 Antiquarian Society of Iona, Moore an honorary member of, vii. 140.
 "Antiquarian Researches," vii. 239.
 Antiquaries, Society of, Stevens's trick on them, ii. 332.
 "Antiquities of Normandy," the, iii. 194.
 Anti-Reform principles prevalent among the scholars of the Charter House, vi. 123.
 " — Union," the, iv. 127.
 Antoinette, Marie, iii. 241.
 Antonio, St., iii. 23.
 —, St., chapel of, iii. 43.
 Apennines, the, iii. 79. 81; viii. 187.
 "Apollo," ii. 59; iii. 35. 41. 48. 54. 63. 70; iv. 273.
 — and Daphne," by Bernini, iii. 64.
 Apollonius Rhodius, ii. 254.
 Appartamento Borgia, iii. 55.
 Appian Way, the, iii. 62.
 Arbuthnot, Captain, iii. 255. 263. 265. 277.
 "Arcadians The," ode on, by Guidi, iii. 66. 72.
 Archdall, Richard, ii. 149.
 —, Major, i. 102.
 Archer, iv. 217.
 —, Lady, ii. 201.
 Archilochus, saying of the Greeks respecting him, i. xxv.
 Archipelago, the, ii. 328.
 Arctic expedition, Captain Ross's, particulars of, vii. 6.
 Arden, Lord, iv. 111.
 Arguëlles, iv. 260.
 Argyll, Duke of, iv. 74. 198; vi. 317; vii. 69. 175; viii. 45. 47. and note.
 "Arianism," v. 143.
 Arians, the, ii. 265.
 Ariole, v. 199.
 Ariosto, his chairs and inkstand, iii. 29; his tomb at the University of Ferrara, 29.
 Ariphron, verses by, alluded to, iv. 229.
 "Aristippe," iii. 101.
 "Aristodemo," viii. 45. and note.
 Aristophanes, ii. 14. 265. 267. 333.
 Aristotle, ii. 152. 245; iv. 302; statue of, iii. 51.
 "Ark, The," vii. 126.
 Arkwright, Mrs. Robert, her opinion of the "Epicurean," v. 215; her singing, 215 —, Richard, ii. 29.
 Arkwrights, the, ii. 28. 31.
 Armagh, Archbishop of, and the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Dublin contrasted, iv. 117.
 Armenian Monastery, visited by Moore, ii. 28.
 Armitage, Stephen, i. 43.
 Armstrong, Colonel, vi. 62. 175.
 —, Major, iv. 206.
 —, Miss, v. 45. 219.
 —, Mrs., iii. 315. 341. 351. 365.
 Arnaud, his "Germanicus," iii. 183; his "Guillaume de Nassau," 197; translation into French verse of Moore's "Lalla Rookh," 183. 197. 268; persecuted by the government, 269; his Fables, v. 48.
 Arno, the, iii. 36; Vale of, 39.
 Arnold, Samuel J., i. 260; vii. 156; viii. 92. 93. 96.
 Arran, Lord, vii. 211. 361.
 "Artaxerxes," v. 152.
 Arthur, Dr., iii. 186; viii. 79. 196.
 —, Miss, iii. 255.
 —, Mrs., iii. 79. 214.
 Artists' Benevolent Fund, the, iii. 349; v. 61.
 "Art of Love," vii. 30.
 Artois, Comte d', iii. 253.
 Arundell and Surrey, Countess of, iv. 145. 235; v. 90. 92.
 —, Earl of, iv. 145. 153. 234; v. 89. 90. 91. 92; viii. 31; allusion to Moore in a speech of, 32.
 Arundells, the, iv. 235. 242.
 Arviragus, vi. 82.
 "As a beam o'er the face of the waters," Byron's opinion of, i. xxii.
 " — by the shore at break of day," v. 96.
 Asgill, Lady, ii. 307.
 Ashbourne, i. 298. 301. 352; ii. 28. 31. 37. 50. 61. 92. 116. 117; v. 214; vii. 124; viii. 104. 133. 144. 145. 146. 150. 158. 168.
 Ashbourne ball, the, i. 370; and dinner, 372.
 Ashbrooke Hall, ii. 29.
 —, Lady, v. 311.
 Ashburnham, Lord, vi. 54. 100. 101.
 Ashburton, Lady, vii. 149.
 —, Lord, his allusions to his change of politics, vii. 150.
 Ashburtons, the, vii. 150.
 Ashby, v. 211; viii. 65.
 Ashe, v. 126.
 —, Mr., ballad for, alluded to, i. 297.
 —, Mrs., i. 323.
 —, Rev. Mr., iv. 132.
 Ashley, Lady B., i. 332.
 —, Lord (Earl of Shaftesbury), iv. 61.
 Ashtown, Lady, iv. 277; v. 45. 219.
 —, Lord, iv. 277. 291; v. 45. 78. 217. 219. 245. 315.
 Asioli, iv. 249. 281; "Duets," 236. 251.
 Asser, vii. 137.
 "Assumption, The," by Guercino, iii. 32; by Guido, 66; by Titian, 84.
 Astley, iv. 7.
 —, Sir J., v. 98.
 Astley's Theatre, ii. 308. 309. 357; iii. 3; v. 60; vi. 49. 61. 77; vii. 244; viii. 197.
 Astræa, iii. 14.
 "As you like it," iv. 262.
 "Atala," iv. 19.
 "Athalie," iii. 159. 173. 237.
 Athassel Abbey, ii. 79. 165.

Athenæum Club, the opening of, vi. 105.
et passim.

Athens. panorama of, lii. 269.

Atliol, Duchess of, i. 122.

——, Duke of, viii. 45.

Athos, Mount, iv. 11.

Atkinson, Captain, interested in procuring the laureateship for Moore, i. 127; 144.

——, John, ii. 244.

——, Joseph, Secretary of the Ordinance Board, an acquaintance of Moore's, i. 70. 75. 88. 131. 133. 213. 303. 346; ii. 24. 100. 106. 113. 173. 174. 285; iv. 126; viii. 6. 27. 65. 89. 132. 158. 197. 216. 247; his death ii. 24. 201.

Atkinsons, the, i. 124. 219. 223; ii. 22. 35.

"Atlas, The," vi. 56. 104.

"Atonement," Dr. Magee's, v. 108.

Attacks on the Prince Regent, in the "Edinburgh," alluded to by Jeffrey, ii. 43.

Atterbury, Dr., "Epistolary Correspondence," viii. 54.

Aubertin, iii. 109.

Auckland, Lord, bon-mot of, iv. 263; grey and grave, vii. 336; his kind reception of John Russell Moore at Calcutta, 285; his letter to Moore about his son, 285. "Memorial to the States-General," ii. 224.

——, Bishop of Bath and Wells, vii. 344.

Aucklands, the, iv. 202; v. 108. 233; vii. 336, 337.

Audley, Lord, his disposing of his house, and his death, ii. 172.

Audrey, vii. 200.

Aughrim, the battle of, i. 28.

Augusta, H. R. H. the Princess, viii. 203; composed new airs to two of Moore's songs, iv. 193.

Augustine, St., i. xxx.

"Auld Robin Gray," vi. xviii.

"Aurora," by Guido, iii. 50.

Aurungzebe, iii. 203; iv. 306.

Austin, Mr., vii. 56. 341.

Austria, Archduchess Christine of, iii. 65.

——, Emperor of, iii. 21; v. 156.

Auteuil, iii. 175. 179. 184. 198. 353.

Authors and their poems, iii. 246.

—— of the "Englishman," ii. 312.

—— reading their plays in society, iii. 197.

Autographs, how obtained, vii. 355.

Ava, curious annual practice of the court of, iii. 8.

——, King of, iii. 188; his titles, 185.

Avoca, ii. 214; Vale of, vii. 109. 361.

Avon, ii. 214.

Avonmore, Lord, iv. 112.

Awdrey, v. 101. 158.

——, Jerry, v. 47.

——, John, v. 274.

——, Miss, iv. 132.

——, Mr., iv. 37. 45.

Awdreys, the, iv. 132; vii. 30.

Aylesbury, Lord, li. 159.

Aylott, Sir Joseph, vii. 19.

Ayreton, li. 167.

Ayrshire, viii. 161.

Ayton, Fanny, v. 152. 181.

B.

Babbage, Charles, vi. 108; vii. 103. 165. 180. 183. 260.

"Babylon," li. 300; iii. 145.

"Baccanali di Roma," iii. 33.

Bacchus, Temple of, li. 63.

Bach, Sebastian, li. 64; anecdote of, 340.;

——, Dr., vi. 295.

Bacon, Lord, extract from his will, lii. 187; his reasons for women's arrival at a result without reasoning, 79.

Badham, vi. 106.

Badminton, iv. 240.

Bagatelle, li. 267.

Bagni, iii. 50.

—— di San Fillipo, lii. 46.

—— di Tito, iii. 49.

Bagot, Sir Charles, vi. 84.

Bagshaw, iii. 49; vii. 309.

——, Sir W., i. 359.

Bahamas, the, i. 155.

"Baia and the Bridge of Caligula," vi. 188.

Bailey, iv. 153. 304; v. 146. 147. 222. 271;

his correction of Moore's Greek Anacreontic, prefixed to his translation of "Anacreon," vii. 160.

——, Captain, vi. 75.

——, Colonel, v. 282. 299; vi. 75. 109.

——, David, v. 295; vi. 83.

——, Lady Sarah, vi. 199.

——, Thomas, v. 55. 56; vi. 26.

——, Miss, v. 53. 279. 282; vi. 42; "Miscellany," iv. 96.

——'s Dictionary," ii. 346.

——, Colonel, v. 188.

——, Miss, v. 189. 192.

——, Judge, iv. 118.

Baillie, Dr., i. 159. 241; viii. 82. 134; visits

Moore when ill, i. 103.

——, Miss Joanna, li. 311; iv. 285. 291.

Baines, Bishop, vii. 21. 31. 257. 346.

Baird, Sir David, his roughness, v. 62.

Baker, v. 96. 283. 284.

——, Lady E., iv. 79.

——, Sir Edward, iv. 79.

Bakewell, ii. 208; v. 253.

Balbriggan, the priest of, v. 31.

Baldacchino, the, iii. 48.

Baldwin, Caleb, ii. 230; anecdote of, 234.

Balfie, Michael William, vii. 243.

Ball, Lady, iv. 240.

——, Sir A., iv. 240.

——, Sir Charles, li. 351.

Ballantyne, John, v. 9. 12.

Ballinamore, v. 209.

Ballynamona, a preceptory of the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, iv. 109.

Baltimore, i. xviii. 160. 161. 163; iii. 94.

Balzac, De, his "Letters," ii. 156.

Bandinelli, iii. 41; "Dead Christ supported by Nicodemus," 37; "The Eternal

Father and Dead Christ," 38.

Bangor Ferry, iv. 127.

Banion, his "Tales of the O'Hara Family,"

vi. 136.

Bankes, his "Civil History of Rome," li.

255.

——, William, iii. 225; iv. 79. 140. 293,

294; vi. 12. 13. 14. 213. 256.

Bank-note for 50*l.*, lost by Moore, viii.

284.

- Bank of England Charter, curious circumstance connected with, iv. 300.
 — question, the, alluded to, ii. 240.
 Banks, Sir Joseph, ii. 230.
 Banister, John, his melancholy address to his own door, vi. 85.
 Bannow, vii. 110, 111, 112, 117, 118, 318; viii. 271.
 Banti, Madame, iii. 33.
 Barante, Madame, iii. 201, 207.
 Barbarigo Palace, the, iii. 27.
 Barbat, Mrs., vi. 210.
 Barber, Mr., iv. 290, 297, 300; vi. 28, 68.
 Barbour, v. 270.
 Barclay, Colonel, i. 165.
 Bardic Society, the, v. 310.
 Baretti's Essay upon the "Pugilate of the Ancients," ii. 255.
 Barham, Rev. Richard Harris, mention of Moore in a letter, vii. 245.
 Barillon, "Life of Lord Russell," iii. 6.
 Barling, iii. 188; iv. 25, 69, 141; v. 94, 150, 174, 288, 295; vi. 37, 56, 88; vii. 175.
 —, Mrs., iv. 77, 172, 321; v. 70, 94, 270; vi. 56, 57.
 —, Alexander, iv. 87; v. 66; vi. 33, 114.
 —, Francis, v. 179, 269, 294.
 —, Henry, iii. 205, 335, 337, 340.
 —, Mrs. Henry, iii. 199, 205.
 —, T., vi. 196.
 —, Mrs. William, iv. 171.
 Barings, the, iv. 25, 73, 83, 140, 142, 294, 321; v. 184, 288; vi. 125.
 Barker, fresco of the "Massacre of the Sciots," v. 146.
 —, Sir Thomas Tyrwhit Jones, ii. 313.
 Barnard, Sir Andrew, iv. 307. note.
 Barnave, ii. 169.
 Barnes, Dr., anecdote of, vii. 95.
 —, Thomas, Editor of "The Times," proposes that Moore should write "The Times" leaders while he was ill, iii. 362; iv. 171; his opinion of Lords Lansdowne and Holland, 175; full of praise of Moore's "Sheridan," 326; wished Moore to request Lord Lansdowne to propose him as a member of the Athenæum, v. 160, 161; his character, 171; his acceptance of Moore's proposal for half the number of his squibs, 239; his "secret information" for "The Times," 263; his abuse of the aristocracy, 293; had great hopes from the Duke of Wellington for the Catholic question, vi. 4; once in negotiation with Canning, to become tutor to his son, vii. 15; letter from Moore, introducing him to Philip Crampton, viii. 268; letter to Moore, expressing delight with his journey in Ireland, 269.
 Barré, Colonel, iv. 34, 151.
 Barrington, George, anecdote of, iv. 172.
 —, Lady, vi. 283; vii. 241.
 —, Lady "Charlie," vi. 284.
 —, Lord, vi. 283.
 Barringtons, the, vi. 103.
 "Barrosa," the, iv. 108.
 Barrow, Isaac, ii. 286, 317, 346; iv. 28; v. 130, 177.
 —, Mrs., iv. 28.
 —, Sir John, vii. 230, 231.
 Barrow's "Travels," i. 223.
 Barry, Mr., iv. 220; v. 196, 234; vii. 56, 176.
 —, Colonel, ii. 280, 297, 298.
 —, Redmond, sarcasm on John Crampton, vii. 93.
 —, Smith, iv. 107.
 Barrymore, Lord, and Sir A. C., anecdote of, iii. 216.
 Bartholomew, St., iii. 334.
 Bartolini, iii. 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 289; iv. 69; vi. 52; anxious to execute a bust of Moore, iii. 44.
 Bartolomeo, Fra, "Annunciation of the Virgin," iii. 37; legend of his picture of the "Volto Divino," 37.
 Barton, Mr., v. 169, 199.
 —, Mrs., iv. 113; v. 169, 199, 200.
 Barts, the, v. 201.
 Basevi, vii. 345.
 Basilico, ii. 224.
 "Basil, St.," iv. 21.
 Basso-Hibernicon, a new musical instrument, iv. 111, 112.
 Bassompierre, v. 128, 129.
 "Bataille de Bovines," iii. 312.
 Bath, Lady Louisa, ii. 193.
 —, Lady (Marchioness of), ii. 193, 194; iii. 283; iv. 233, 334; vi. 41.
 —, Lord, iv. 173; v. 294, 313; vi. 44.
 — and Wells, Bishop of, (Law, D.D.), iv. 272; v. 47, 314; vi. 9. See Auckland, Lord.
 "Chronicle, The," ii. 188, 190, 220; vi. 282.
 —, Literary Institution, dinner, iv. 272.
 Bathurst, General, v. 270; vi. 327.
 —, Lady Georgiana, iv. 173.
 —, Lord, ii. 64, 346; iv. 137, 142, 216, 237, 240; vi. 42, 83.
 Battler, Mrs., a satirical writer, i. 40, 41, 44.
 Battle House, v. 56, 58.
 " — of Waterloo," the, ii. 98.
 — of Worcester, good story of, vii. 294.
 Baufremont, Madame, iii. 204.
 Bavarian Ambassador, anecdote of a, iii. 179.
 Baveno, iii. 17, 18.
 Bayeux, vii. 189, 192.
 Bayle, Peter, ii. 148, 168, 169; vi. 90; vii. 51, 52, 53; his "Dictionary," 31.
 Bayly, iv. 182, 273, 274.
 —, Miss, iv. 274.
 —, Thomas, iv. 177, 275.
 Bayntons, the, v. 39.
 Baynton, Sir Edward, v. 231; curious journal of his alluded to, vi. 276; extracts from the diary of, vii. 212.
 Beach, Rev. J., v. 248, 249.
 Beaconsfield, v. 223.
 Beamish and Crauford's Brewery, iv. 106.
 Beattie, Dr. James, "The Minstrel," ii. 201.
 Beauchamp, Lord, iii. 221, 335, 337.
 Beauclerc, Mrs., iv. 316.
 —, Mrs., vi. 205.
 Beauclerks, the, vi. 225.
 Beaufort, Duke of, iv. 240; v. 106; vii. 303.
 Beauharnois, Eugène, iii. 183. note.
 Beaujolois, Count, viii. 44, 45.
 Beaujon, the, iii. 119, 124, 155, 221, 229, 246, 265, 266, 269, 275, 306, 356, 360.
 Beaumont, Madame, iii. 16.
 —, Miss, ii. 337; iii. 294.
 —, Sir George, ii. 298; iv. 335; v. 66, 68, 74, 228; viii. 111; his pictures, iv. 72.
 "Beau Narcisse," iii. 179.
 Beau-Parc, i. 303.
 Beausobre, "Manicheism," iv. 41.
 "Beauties of Burke," ii. 156.
 Beauty, the next requisite to first-rate acting, ii. 161.
 Beauvais, iii. 148, 301.

- Beauveau, Prince, iii. 313.
 ———, Princess, iv. 16.
 Beauvilliers, iii. 7. 11. 87. 90. 101. 105. 153, 154. 264. 269. 270. 276. 307.
 Beaver, Miss, i. 94.
 Beazley, iv. 62. 319.
 Becket, li. 298.
 Beckett, iii. 366.
 Beckford, William, ii. 193. 196; his "Age-mia," ii. 197, 198; his "Travels," 193; delighted with "Lalla Rookh," 193; "Elegant Enthusiast," 197, 198; his two mock novels written to ridicule his sister's novels, 197; his "Vathek," vi. 283.
 Beckford, Miss, viii. 89.
 ———, Susan, vii. 241.
 Bective, Lady, iv. 78. 83. 128; v. 171; vi. 48.
 ———, Lord, ii. 7; iv. 77. 83. 128; vi. 48.
 Bectives, the, iv. 92.
 Bedford, Duchess of, iii. 283, 284, 285; iv. 259. 283; v. 187. 263; vi. 210.
 ———, Duke of, i. 101, 102. 267; ii. 166. 171; iii. 65. 98. 283. 285. 294. 295. 299. 349; iv. 46. 171. 258. 259. 269. 278. 283. 292; v. 158. 176. 177. 183. 298; vi. 36. 77. 125. 314; vii. 10. 144. 212. 348; viii. 62. 86.
 Bedfords, the, viii. 63. 194.
 Beecher, his speech on the Catholic question, ii. 301.
 ———, Mrs., iv. 110, 111.
 ———, Nick, iv. 110, 113.
 Beechers, the, v. 62.
 Beef Steak Club, the, ii. 175. 234.
 Beethoven, iii. 273; iv. 307; his mass in D., vii. 45.
 "Beggars' Opera, The," iii. 292; vi. 323. note, performed at Carton, i. 8.
 "Beggars' Woman," a, by Westmacott, iii. 349.
 "—— Woman and Child," statue of, by Westmacott, iv. 133.
 Begnis, Ronzi de, iv. 150.
 Bégrand, Maudie, iii. 332.
 Begrez, iv. 168.
 Belcher, Rev. ———, i. 372.
 ———, Fanny, iii. 294. 315.
 Belchers, the, iii. 276. 303. 315. 318. 319, 320; v. 218.
 Belfast, iii. 288; vii. 9. 342; viii. 148. 149.
 Belgrave, Lady Elizabeth, iv. 230, 231; v. 61, 62. 65. 289.
 ———, Lord, iv. 229. 230. 233; v. 61. 72.
 Belgraves, the, iv. 232.
 Belhaven, Lady, iv. 166. 199. 283; vi. 227.
 ———, Lord, iv. 166. 173. 176. 199. 205. 283; v. 10; vi. 233.
 Belhavens, the, iv. 171; v. 299.
 "Believe me, if all those endearing young charms," vii. 352.
 Bell, vi. 56.
 ———, Lady, ii. 254; vii. 20.
 ———, Peter, vii. 73.
 ———, Sir Charles, vii. 20.
 Bellamont, Lord, iv. 112; v. 45.
 Bellamy's, iii. 346.
 "Belles without Beaux," ii. 356.
 Bellevue, iii. 117. 127. 140. 243. 245. 263. 353; viii. 255.
 ———, Park of, iii. 143.
 Bellew, opinion of Moore's address to the Limerick electors, vi. 308.
 Bellingham, scene between Bailey and Byron at his execution, alluded to, v. 271.
 Bellini, vii. 216.
 Bellochi, Madame, ii. 234.
 ———, Madlle., ii. 261.
 Belloe, Madame, vi. 93. 95. 97; translated Moore's "Loves of the Angels," iv. 96. 210.
 Bell Town springs, i. 168.
 Belmore, Lady, iii. 290.
 ———, Lord, ii. 357.
 "Beloved of heaven, how passing bright," vii. 276.
 Belsham, his "George the Third," ii. 284.
 Belvoir Castle, ii. 287.
 Belzoni, iii. 241. 292; his "Atlas," 165; his "Egypt," 239.
 Benedictine nuns, monastery of the, iii. 82.
 "Benedictus," ii. 175; v. 105.
 Benet, his "Controversy on Tithes," iv. 145.
 Ben Lomond, v. 6.
 Bennison, Mr., i. 324. 340; ii. 47. 86.
 Bennet, ii. 266. 345. 349; iv. 143. 184. 215. 234; v. 54. 59. 62. 63. 64. 65. 68. 91. 98. 171. 176. 195. 196. 301; vi. 122; vii. 122.
 ———, Ethel, v. 56.
 ———, Anna, iv. 234.
 ———, Miss, iv. 61; v. 65. 172.
 ———, Mrs., ii. 310. 354; iv. 58. 71. 145. 286; v. 91.
 Bennets, the, ii. 310; iv. 33; v. 171. 176. 180. 186. 188.
 Bensarade, epigram of, viii. 137.
 Bentham, Jeremy, iii. 13; iv. 158. 176; v. 178. 224; vi. 309; his "Paulo-post prandial Vibration," iv. 255.
 ———, Miss, v. 170.
 Benthamism, vi. 309.
 Bentinck, Lady Frederick, iii. 148. 160.
 ———, Lord Frederick, iii. 158. 160.
 ———, Lord George, viii. 29; quoted Moore, 30.
 ———, Lord William, ii. 313; iv. 69.
 Bentley, Dr., his "Summer," vi. 89; his "Horace," v. 190.
 ———, Richard, vii. 20. 244.
 Bentley's "Miscellany," v. 202.
 Benvenuto, Cellini, iii. 29; "The Night after the Battle of Jena," 44.
 Beranger, his "Songs," iii. 333.
 Beresford, iii. 347; his "Miserles of Human Life," ii. 215; iii. 347.
 ———, Sir J., iv. 79; v. 188.
 Berkeley, Bishop, vi. 267; vii. 201; his "Querist," vi. 108; his acuteness on political economy, iv. 266.
 ———, Colonel, ii. 320.
 ———, Craven, ii. 158. 234.
 Berlin, court of, iii. 203.
 Bermuda, Moore's appointment to, i. 145; description of, 149—157; its markets, 291; incorrect representations of Moore's appointment at, 151; defalcation of his deputy at, ii. 133. 136; business, statement of the facts of the, in answer to an incorrect paragraph on the same, vii. 377.
 Bernard, Sir Scrope, and Co., ii. 244.
 Bernadotte, his part in the war, i. 294.
 Bernini, iii. 73. 89; "Apollo and Daphne," 64; "David flinging the Stone," 64; monument to Alexander VII., 53; statue of "Constantine," 53; statue of "St. Bibiana," 60; "Teresa," 75.
 Berri, Duc de, iii. 200. 332; his assassination attributed to the politics of M. de Cazes, 103.
 ———, Duchesse de, iii. 152. 171. 309.
 ———, the Duke and Duchess, pelted with sausages, iii. 155.

- Berrill, Miss, vi. 149.
 Berrilis, the, vi. 149.
 Berriman, Dr., ii. 271.
 Berry, Miss, ii. 44; iii. 259; vi. 202; vii. 240, 241. 273. 292.
 ———, the Misses, i. 119; iii. 259; vii. 16. 240; vii. 209.
 Berrys, the, i. 268; iv. 293; viii. 70. 79. 118, 119. 155. 209.
 Berryer, M., vii. 185, 186.
 Bertin, v. 74.
 Bertrand, M., first won, by Moore's poetry, to study the English language, vii. 187; translated several of the "Irish Melodies," ib.
 Berwick, Marshal, v. 115.
 Best, Lord Chief Justice, vi. 54; challenge to, borne by Lord Byron, 7.
 Bessborough, Countess of, ii. 89. 120. 122. 213. 241. 327; iii. 235.
 ———, Lord (Earl of), i. 250; ii. 327; iii. 235; iv. 86; vi. 339; viii. 17. 270.
 Bessboroughs, the, iii. 232.
 Betham, Sir William, vii. 239. 369.
 Beverly, Mrs., v. 275.
 Bexley, Lord, iv. 55; vi. 105.
 Beza, Theodore, ii. 168.
 Blagoli, Madame, iv. 169.
 Bianchetti, Count, iii. 32.
 Bibliotheca Ambrosiana, books and pictures there, iii. 20.
 Bibliothèque de Médecine, iii. 156.
 ——— du Roi, iii. 154; iv. 16; vii. 229. 246.
 Bickerstaff, Isaac, ii. 167.
 Biggin, Mr., i. 97, 98. 101, 102; his death read by Moore from an English newspaper, 152; his talents, 99.
 Bigottini, iii. 90. 182. 305. 307.
 Billington, Mrs., i. 121.
 Bingham, iv. 158. 160. 175. 248. 270.
 Binning, Lord, iv. 319.
 Blot, "Physical Science," iii. 338.
 Birkbeck, Dr., ii. 244; vii. 301.
 Birmingham, i. 219. 244. et passim.
 Birnam Wood, viii. 150. 162.
 Birom, Mrs., i. 102.
 Bishop's Cannings, ii. 255. 348; v. 134.
 Bishop, Henry (Sir), employed on a musical dictionary, iii. 297; Handel, Haydn, Mozart, contrasted by, 366; Moore's coadjutor, ii. 326; preparing a "Treatise on the Effects of Instruments," 235; "Song for the War Dance," altered by Moore, v. 133; thought of by Power to arrange Moore's music, ii. 256.
 ———, Walter, vi. 233.
 Black, Dr., v. 8. 10. 82.
 "——— Book, the," vii. 239.
 Blackford, Mr., i. 311; viii. 166.
 ——— Mrs., vi. 52; vii. 363.
 Blackguard, its derivation, ii. 206.
 Blackstone, Sir William, ii. 198. 213. 305; iv. 88. 130; vi. 93.
 Blackwater, the, iv. 104. 110. 113.
 Blackwood's "Magazine," a malicious article in, against Moore, ii. 207. 210; article in praise of Moore, 268.
 Blaine, Sir Gilbert, iii. 138.
 Blair, Dr., vii. 198.
 Blake, i. 67; v. 31, 32; viii. 262.
 Blanchard, Miss E., ii. 161.
 Blandford, iv. 280, 281; v. 93. 95.
 Mangini, "Duets," 94. 188. 190, 191. 196; "Notturmes," iii. 150. 167. 175, 176. 189, 190.
 Blayney, Lord, v. 56; his puff of his own steam-packet, vii. 6.
 Blencoe, Mrs., "The Casket," vi. 67.
 Blessington, Lady, ii. 339. 357; iii. 344. 350; vii. 19. 46. 130.
 ———, Lord, ii. 336. 338; iii. 3. 295, 296. 298. 343. 345; iv. 299. 301. 317; v. 32. 37; vi. 281.
 Blessingtons, the, ii. 338; iii. 298.
 Blewitt, Jonas, vii. 309. 319.
 Blood, v. 55.
 Blucher, Field Marshal, Prince, ii. 19. 30; vi. 149; a profligate, ii. 30.
 Boccaccio, iii. 78.
 Bocerini, ii. 326.
 Bocha, N. C., iv. 307.
 Boddington, v. 71. 180.
 ———, Miss, v. 180.
 ———, Mrs., v. 68.
 Boddingtons, the, iii. 169. 193; v. 180.
 Boece, Hector, vii. 174.
 Boileau, Nicholas, i. 273. 338; iii. 301; vi. 46; his "Fourth Epistle," vii. 29. note; full of grammatical faults, iii. 301; "Ninth Satire," vii. 30. note; Lines, translation of, 29.
 Bois de Boulogne, iv. 11. 13. et passim.
 Boissnade, the French Parson, a contributor to Valpy's "Thesaurus," iii. 100, 101.
 Bolingbroke, Lord, vii. 25; viii. 288.
 Bologna, iii. 30. 33. 81, 82, 83; viii. 187.
 ——— cathedral, iii. 30.
 ———, John of, iii. 38. 43; Chapel of, 37; "Rape of the Sabinas," 36.
 Bolsena, v. 200; Lake of, iii. 46.
 Bombarda's, iii. 181. 229.
 Bond, Oliver, i. 48; meeting at his house of the United Irish chiefs, 65.
 Bonds, the, v. 94, 95. 203.
 Bonham, iv. 175.
 Bonifonius, iv. 144.
 Bon-mots, v. 216; of Lord Anckland, iv. 263; Madame de Coigny, iii. 6; Frere, vi. 345; Prince Talleyrand, 322.
 Bonner, ii. 181.
 Books, an article of furniture more than study, iii. 249.
 Booksellers in Paris, and the regulations affecting them, iii. 214.
 Boothby, Sir B., ii. 28.
 Bordeaux, Duc de, iii. 196.
 Bordogni, iii. 196.
 Borghese, the Princess, iii. 58. 71; her hands and feet, 49.
 ——— Gallery, the, vi. 57; Palace, the, iii. 60. 65. 68; Villa, wreck of, 64.
 Boringdon, Lady, ii. 61. 63.
 ———, Lord, ii. 61; v. 131.
 Borromeo, San Carlo, iii. 18. 22.
 Borromini, iii. 53. 73.
 Borrowes, Lady, her private theatricals, i. 10.
 "Boston, the," frigate, i. 164. 175; vi. 296.
 Boswell, James, ii. 314; iv. 338; v. 223; vi. x; "Johnson," extracts from, v. 227.
 Botham, vi. 124.
 Boulevards, the, iii. 10. 96. 221. 241. 332.
 ———, theatres of the, iii. 110.
 ——— des Invalides, iii. 184.
 Boulogne, iii. 118. 120. et passim.
 Bourbon, Constable, i. 299.
 ———, Duke of, i. 257.
 Bourbons, the, ii. 21. 37. 225; vi. 347.
 "Bourgeois Gentilhomme," iv. 326.
 Bourgoins, iii. 266.

- Bourgoin, Madlle, iii. 91.
 Bourke, M., iii. 58.
 ———, Madame, iii. 58.
 Bourne, Mr. Sturges, v. 74, 75. 199; vi. 126.
 ———, Mrs. Sturges, v. 74.
 Bouverie, Edward, iv. 326.
 ———, Frederick, iv. 240.
 ———, Mrs. Frederick, iv. 240.
 ———, Mrs., v. 47.
 Bouveries, the, iv. 86; v. 47; vii. 30.
 Bowden Hill, v. 244; vii. 216.
 Bowditch, Dr. N., "Natural History," iii. 254.
 Bower, "Luther's Life," iii. 12.
 Bowles, Charles, v. 92, 93.
 ———, Rev. William Lisle, his parsonage at Bremhill described, ii. 153; his purchase of a great coat in Monmouth Street, 243; his verses on the Westminster Abbey Festival, vii. 38; "Address from Prospero to Ariel," ii. 180; his dinner at Joy's, 302; his famous song, v. 233; Wharton's notes on Pope contrasted, ii. 271; anxious, before he died, to write a life of Bishop Ken, iv. 278; a thorough churchman, 94; attended mass, with Moore, at Wardour Castle, 235; lecture, to his curate, on the use of hard words in preaching, v. 221; his oddity, vii. 204; his organ made by Chevers, a carpenter, ii. 278; his sermon on the Draught of Fishes alluded to, vii. 140; his sermon on the Impotent Man at the Pool of Bethesda, iv. 130; his talent and simplicity, ii. 153; introduced Moore's words, "Fallen is thy throne, O Israel," into his sermon, iv. 96; Moore's opinion of, viii. 234; "More Last Words," iv. 322; never allowed a tailor to measure him, vii. 163; note respecting Moore, 218; translation of a Latin epitaph, 247; Verses on Bells in Nares's "Dictionary" made him a lover of poetry, iv. 95.
 Bowood, ii. 127. et passim; library at, 20. 33.
 Bowring, Dr., defence of his conduct relative to his Greek bonds, v. 294; Moore's attack on him in the "Ghost of Miltiades," 282.
 "Boxiana," ii. 240.
 Boyce, Dr. William, ii. 272; march by, 269.
 Boyd, "Translation of the Fathers," viii. 188; Moore's article on, warmly praised by Allen, Lord and Lady Holland, ii. 262.
 Boyle, Lord, ii. 227.
 ———, Farm, v. 180. 189. 196.
 Boyne Water, iv. 130.
 Boyse, vii. 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119. 252. 323. 471; viii. 9.
 ———, Miss, vii. 114. 117; viii. 10.
 ———, Mrs., vii. 114.
 ———, Thomas, vii. 318.
 Boz, vii. 244; Sydney Smith's opinion of, 174; Moore's opinion of, 174; his "Pickwick Papers," 174.
 Brabant, Dr., ii. 300. 345; iv. 279; v. 166. 169. 238. 240. 243. 255. 260. 310. 311. 312. 314; vi. 6. 8. 16. 219. 243. 274; vii. 31. 32. 50. 90. 127. 206. 217. 289. 317. 318. 325. 346. 347; and Moore, their article on "German Rationalism," for the "Edinburgh Review," vi. 219.
 ———, Herbert, vii. 338.
 Brackenbury, General, ii. 302. 314.
 Brackenbury, Rev. Mr., vi. 166.
 Bradford, v. 312.
 ———, Lord, iv. 23.
 Bradley, Captain, i. 165.
 Bradshaw, Mrs., vi. 208.
 Brady, Captain, his resolution alluded to, viii. 90.
 Braganza, vi. 60, 61.
 Braham, John, going to play in Moore's opera at Bath, i. 262; song for, written by Monre, 298; proposed Moore should write words to some melodies of his, ii. 324.
 Brahmins, the, as chess-players, vi. 310.
 Bramante, iii. 52.
 Bramsen, iii. 75. 88.
 Bramston, "Art of Politicks," ii. 293.
 Branchi, iii. 20.
 Branchia, Madame, iii. 91.
 Brand, Mrs., v. 78.
 Brandon, Lord, ii. 310.
 Branigan, his letter to Moore alluded to, iii. 103.
 ———, Eliza, v. 39.
 ———, Mrs., ii. 117. 123. 331; iv. 12, 13. 222. 279. 323. 324. 326; v. 40. 44. 48. 49. 52. 53. 55. 56.
 Branigans, the, ii. 121.
 Branksome Castle, viii. 162.
 Braybrookes, the, vi. 121.
 Breadalbane, Lady (Marchioness of), vii. 225.
 ———, Lord (Marquis of), vii. 225.
 "Breadfruit Tree, the," viii. 249.
 Brecknock, Lord, v. 313; vi. 148, 149.
 Breguet, iii. 113.
 Bremhill, ii. 153; iv. 32. 181. 213. 278; vii. 204; viii. 266.
 Brennan, Father, iv. 14.
 Brera, the, iii. 20. 83.
 Brescia, iii. 22. 33.
 Breteuil, iii. 6.
 Brewer's Patriots, and their duties, vi. 147.
 Brewster, Sir David, his good sense and simplicity of manner, vii. 165.
 Briche, Madame la, iii. 336.
 "Bride of Abydos," viii. 137.
 "—— of Messina," vii. 224.
 Bridgeman, Miss, iii. 213.
 Bridges, Mr., v. 6.
 Brie, iii. 16.
 Bright, the antiquary of Bristol, ii. 150.
 Brighton, ii. 137; iii. 229; iv. 23. 39. 294. 296; v. 269. 280. 317; vi. 90. 160. 200; viii. 69. 138. 181. 244.
 Brigstock, ii. 325.
 ———, Mrs., ii. 314.
 Brigstocks, the, ii. 314.
 "Bring the bright garlands hither," iv. 256.
 "—— thy lute hither, love," vi. 25.
 Brinvilliers, Marchioness de, iii. 316.
 Brisbane, Sir Thomas, vii. 97.
 Bristed, "Resources of the United States," full of information, ii. 276.
 Bristol, ii. 148. 150. 297; iv. 133. 244; v. 221; vi. 127. 151. 168. 217. 233. 234. 278. 279. 280. 297; vii. 49. 129. 131. 161. 165. 217. 223. 350; party warfare at, 132.
 ———, Bishop of, "Tertullian," v. 142.
 ———, Lord, iii. 165. 175. 196. 202. 209. 214. 219. 240. 304; iv. 319.
 Bristols, the, iii. 232.
 "Britain's Bulwark," ii. 165.
 British Forum, the, ii. 269. 354.

- British Gallery, ii. 307; iv. 92; v. 66. 104.
184. 291; vi. 314. 334.
— Institution, the, iv. 81.
— Isles, the, ii. 276.
— Magazine, the, iv. 44.
— Museum, the, ii. 263; iii. 346; vii.
38. 40. 43. 144. 145. 149. 150. 154. 168. 170.
261. 322. 363. 367. 370.
— Press, the, iv. 65.
Britton, John, iv. 146; v. 158.
Brizzi's, iii. 205.
Broadhurst, Thomas, v. 55. 62.
Broadwood, Messrs., ii. 21. 91.
Broderip, iv. 319.
Brodie, iii. 365; vii. 364. 367; viii. 10.
—, Sir Benjamin, vii. 145. 149; viii. 21.
Braemer, vii. 90.
Brogie, Duc de, iii. 92. note, 99. 235. 254.
306. 320. 321; iv. 24; viii. 276.
—, Duchesse de, iii. 91, 92. 99. 117.
204. 207. 217. 232. 235. 236. 304. 306. 310.
311. 313. 320. 321. 323. 324. 325. 328. 329.
331. 337; viii. 218. and note.
Bromham, iii. 296; iv. 151. 321; v. 56. 130.
147; vi. 73. 116; vii. 129. 205. 252;
Moore's burial place, i. 31.
— church, iv. 157.
— churchyard, vi. 180.
— House, v. 57.
Bronzino, Angiolo, iii. 43; "himself," 40;
"his daughter," 40; "his wife," 40; "The Limbo dei Santi Padri," 40. 78.
Brook, Miss, vi. 55.
—, Mrs., iii. 110.
Brookes's Club-House, ii. 194. et passim.
Brougham, a, called by Moore an odd little garden-chair, vi. 196.
—, Lord, at Liverpool, v. 173; and Sydney Smith, extract from the joint article on Ritson in the "Edinburgh Review," vii. 13; his "Colonial Policy," viii. 48. note; his story on the love of liberty in birds, v. 152; considered
Junius overrated, vi. 65; his opinion on Moore's transaction about the Byron "Memoirs," iv. 187; his opinion that Queen
Caroline was insane about children, 84;
"Letter on the Public Charities," ii. 183;
his observation on the financial prospects of the country, v. 44; his opinion of Curran, vi. 66; his review of "Cervillos," viii. 71; Speech on "Finance," iii. 348; his opinion of George IV.'s marriage with Mrs. Fitzherbert, and consequent forfeiture of the Crown, iv. 261.
Brougham, William, vi. 199.
Broughton, Lord, iv. 192. note.
Brown, i. 61; vi. 84; vii. 144.
—, Captain, i. 93.
—, Isaac Hawkins, vi. 14.
—, John, particulars of his death, vii.
342.
—, Rev., viii. 21. 24.
—, Sir Thomas, ii. 221; "Works," 181.
Browne, iv. 23.
—, Colonel, iii. 19.
—, Dominick, viii. 23.
—, Dr., ascertained the site of Tempe,
i. 35.
—, John, vii. 342.
—, Miss, iii. 290.
—, Sir J., iv. 130.
—, T., vi. 149.
Brownlow, ii. 322; iv. 161; v. 150. 160;
vi. 82.
Brownrigg, i. 96.]
Bruce, James, iv. 342; vi. 42. 125; vii. 43.
145; "Travels," i. 48.
—, Lavalette, v. 270.
—, the Misses, iv. 168.
Brudenell, the Misses, v. 181.
Brunomel, Beau, i. 272; ii. 236; iii. 301.
313. 327; iv. 21; v. 289; vi. 194; vii. 189;
his toilette, iv. 21; "Memoirs" much talked of, ii. 236; Moore and the Prince Regent, anecdote of, v. 289; change in his appearance, vii. 189.
—, Mrs., iii. 327.
—, the Misses, iii. 327.
Brunelleschi, iii. 42.
Bruno, Giordano, vii. 83.
Brunswick, Duke of, viii. 58.
—, "Echoes," v. 316.
Bryan, as a politician, ii. 74; bequeaths
Anastasia Moore 1000*l.*, iv. 200; v. 28; his opinion of Moore's proceeding in connection with the Byron "Memoirs," iv. 200; presented Moore with a gold repeater, 200; his sarcasm on Moore's unambitious happiness alluded to, i. 326.
Bryan, Mrs., iii. 357; iv. 3. 5. 6; v. 23; vi.
135. 137. 313. 315. 319. 324. 332.
—, Captain, vi. 136.
—, George, iii. 356. 357; vii. 6. 22.
—, Mrs. George, vii. 6. 22.
—, Major, viii. 269.
Bryans, the, iii. 358. 360. 361. 362. 364. 365.
366; iv. 3. 4. 5. 194. 207; vi. 291. 324; viii.
197.
Bryant, vii. 154.
Brydges, Sir Egerton, iv. 220; "Life of Sydney," iii. 143.
Brystock, Mrs., vii. 137.
Bubna, Comtesse di, iii. 20.
Buccleugh, Duke of, iv. 331; v. 3; vi. 74;
viii. 45.
Buchan, General, iii. 196.
—, Lord, his tombstone, iv. 330.
Buchon. S. A. C., iii. 325; note to Moore,
vii. 194.
Buckhill, iv. 86. et passim.
Buckingham, Duke of, iii. 349; vii. 15.
—, George Villiers, Duke of, remarkable extracts from a MS. book of his, iv. 313. note.
—, Palace, vi. 202.
Buckland, Professor, vii. 255. 271.
Buckton, Mr., ii. 277.
Budé, M., iii. 14.
Buenos Ayres, envoy of, iii. 141.
Buffon, iii. 12.
Buggles, Lady Cecilia, vi. 59. 106.
Bull, Dr. John, composer of "God save the King," iv. 148; story of, v. 97.
— on the rich Maguire, iv. 103.
Buller, Mr., iv. 103.
"Bullstrode Street," reason why the "Rue de la Paix" is so called, v. 190.
Bulow, Baron, vii. 10. 179. 180.
Bulteel, vii. 224.
—, Lady Elizabeth, vii. 224.
Bulwer, Henry, vi. 119; vii. 330.
Bunbury, Lady, v. 105.
—, Mrs., ii. 299.
—, Sir Henry, vi. 108. 114. 115.
Bunn, Alfred, vi. 342; vii. 241. 241; wished Moore to write a prologue to "Sardanapalus," 22.
Bunny, v. 211. 213. 214.
Bunting, Edward, iii. 139; vii. 278; viii.
149; his "Irish Melodies" at Belfast,
149; "Irish Airs," i. 58. 219; his re-

- marks on Moore's "Irish Melodies," vii. 277.
- Buonaintl, librarian at Holland House, ii. 205. note.
- Buonaparte, Jerome, i. 158. note, 160. 164.
- , Joseph, iii. 134.
- , Lucien, iii. 32. 46. 77; viii. 173; his poem offered to Moore to translate, i. 263.
- , Napoleon. See Napoleon Buonaparte.
- Buonapartes, the, iii. 134.
- Burdett, Clara, vi. 82.
- , Johanna, ii. 159.
- , Lady, ii. 157. 281. 294; iii. 358; iv. 68; v. 56, 57.
- , Miss, ii. 158; v. 176.
- , Sir Francis, ii. 158; and the beggar, vi. 78; anecdote of, 317; his character from Deville's phrenological examination, v. 65; prejudiced against Grattan, ii. 159; the best constitutional lawyer in England, vii. 139.
- , the Misses, ii. 158; vi. 185.
- Burdetts, the, ii. 281; vi. 200.
- Burgess, and Sheridan's letters, iv. 300, 301, 302; in possession of all the deeds relating to Drury Lane theatre, iv. 221.
- , Bishop, vii. 370.
- Burgh, viii. 148.
- , Hussey, delivered Whyte's Prologue to "Henry IV.," i. 8.
- Burghersh, Lady (Countess of Westmoreland), iii. 38. 43. 45. 78, 79, 80, and note, 347; v. 65.
- , Lord (Earl of Westmoreland), wished Moore to translate his Italian opera, iii. 206.
- Burghershes, the, iii. 38; iv. 6. 304. 307.
- Burgoyne, ii. 295; his place of defeat, i. 167.
- Burke, Edmund, his "Address to the British Colonists in North America," iv. 265; a jobber, 218; "Beauties of," ii. 156; his admiration of Sheridan's second speech on the Begums, 192; change of style after Sheridan's Westminster Hall speech, iv. 212; pedestrian tour and the consequences arising from it, 214; his speeches, ii. 289; "History of the English Colonies," iv. 218; jealous of Sheridan, 225; "Life of," 218; Alfred the Great, vi. 158; "Reflections," v. 140; the memoranda of his speeches, their reasoning, ii. 350.
- , Mrs. Edmund, vi. 314.
- , Richard, ii. 295.
- , Sir J., iii. 107.
- Burlington Arcade, the, ii. 309.
- Burmese bell, v. 291.
- Burne, Miss, vii. 232.
- Burnes, the, ii. 146. 148.
- Burnet, vi. 107.
- Burney, Charles, vii. 160.
- "Burning of Borgo," iii. 55.
- Burns, Robert, i. xxii.; ii. 213. 288, 321, 322, 323; iv. 158; vii. 11. and note; viii. 161; and the National Music of Scotland, i. xxxix. note A.; and Wycherley, similar idea of, ii. 256; his song-writing alluded to by Moore, i. xxxix. note A.; proposed monument to, ii. 288; Toasts, vii. 11. and note.
- Burnside, Mrs., v. 250.
- Buron, iii. 307.
- Burrel, iii. 312.
- , Mrs. Drummond, ii. 340.
- Burroughes, his curious system of franking, i. 255.
- Burrow, Major, his duel with Dowling alluded to, i. 19.
- Burrowes, Rev. Peter, vi. 134. 171, 172; imprisoned for a squib, i. 37; Moore's tutor on entering college, 31; "The night before Larry was stretched," 31.
- Burston, Beresford, i. 48. 96; a distinguished barrister, alluded to, 19; his opinion of the legality of the General Catholic Committee, 20; Moore's intimacy with his son, 19.
- , Beresford, jun., i. 24; and Moore entered at the Middle Temple, 70.
- Burton, iii. 289.
- , Colonel, iii. 269.
- Bury, Lady Charlotte, iv. 315.
- , Street, i. 178. 244. 263; No. 28, books written there, v. 266.
- Busbequius, ii. 324.
- "Bush-aboon Traquair," iv. 336.
- Bushe, iii. 329. 341; iv. 123. 262; v. 169; viii. 27. note.
- , Charles, Lord Chief Justice, an eloquent member of the Historical Society, i. 46; on the article of Moore's in the "Edinburgh" on "Private Theatricals," v. 239; opinion of Moore's address to the Limerick electors, vi. 308.
- , Gervais, v. 26. 27. 30. 46; viii. 166.
- , Harry, iii. 220, 222, 223, 224; vii. 256.
- , Henry, account of his place, to the Sinecure Committee, vi. 156.
- , Jerry, iv. 124.
- , John, iii. 365.
- , Mrs., iii. 220.
- Bushes, the, iii. 257. 329; iv. 292; vi. 316.
- Bute, Lady (Marchioness of), vi. 74.
- , Theodosia, vi. 217.
- , Lord, iv. 334.
- Butler, iii. 169; v. 296.
- , Bishop, vii. 245.
- , Charles, iv. 261; v. 19.
- , Dr., v. 185, 186, 191.
- , Humphrey, i. 210; v. 281.
- , Mrs. Humphrey, iv. 59.
- , Hon. Simon, his opinion of the legality of the General Catholic Committee, i. 20.
- , Mrs., i. 122; vii. 305.
- Buxton, i. 231; viii. 145.
- Byng, iv. 30. 157, 158, 164. 170. 319; v. 36, 150, 178, 279; vi. 84. 90. 96. 99, 100, 108, 159. 318; vii. 5. 10. 22. 151. 156. 180. 254, 262. 341. 361.
- , Edmund, vi. 111.
- , Frederick, ii. 313; iii. 295.
- , Poodle, vi. 33.
- , Sir John, vi. 150.
- Byngs, the, vi. 144.
- Byrne, iv. 14.
- , Miss Hannah, Moore's Zelia, i. 22.
- , Patrick, i. xviii. 163.
- , the Misses, iii. 119.
- Byron, Ada, her portrait, iii. 314.
- , Lady, her amiable qualities enumerated by Lord Byron, ii. 98; her letter to Lord Byron, iii. 114; her satisfaction at the "Life," vi. 105; never mentioned in Lord Byron's letters to Moore, ii. 94; report of her being about to marry Cunningham, iv. 332; her rupture with Lord Byron, viii. 222.
- , Lord, his duel with Moore, ii.

229; his characteristics as a man, 324; v. 186. 189. 268; anecdote of Lord Holland's expostulation with him, on his attack upon Lord Carlisle's paralysis, 285; anecdotes of, 191; vi. 7. 60; anecdotes of, in Greece, iv. 216; respecting Shelley, v. 303; his characteristics as a poet, i. xxvi; accused of plagiarism by Wordsworth, iii. 161; anticipated Moore's poem on an Eastern subject by his own, 349; attacked by Lady Hester Stanhope, v. 270; his avowal of the authorship of Lines to the Young Princess, viii. 170; his "Bride of Abydos," 137; and "Corsair," alluded to, 152; bust of, by Thorwaldsen, iii. 292; his "Cain," 295. 353; called out Southey, 331; his "Childe Harold," ii. 137. 170; iii. 161; v. 191; vi. 329; vii. 303; viii. 218. 291; his natural daughter Allegra, ii. 193; iii. 358; dedicated his "Corsair" to Moore, ii. 3; viii. 169; "Don Juan," ii. 187. 259. 260. 323. 329. 331. 342; iii. 25. 28. 280. 295; iv. 98. 332; vi. 13; vii. 349. note; employed Moore as his second in his affair with Harry Greville, ii. 229; endeavoured to make a lady believe he had murdered some one, v. 233; epigram by, iii. 197; epigram on the anniversary of his marriage, 170; his lameness, v. 186. 191; vi. 70; falsehoods and misrepresentations in Medwin's book about him, iv. 247; "Foscari," iii. 280; ghost story of, on the authority of Sir Robert Peel, vi. 14; godfather to Olivia Byron Moore, ii. 35; "Hebrew Melodies," Jeffrey's opinion of, 75; his affidavit about Lord Portsmouth, vi. 47; his chanting method of repeating poetry, v. 255; his conduct to Hunt, 182; iv. 2. 220; his conversation iii. 24; 227; his early letters "exceedingly interesting, v. 249; his letter to Murray, detailing an intrigue, alluded to, ii. 329; his letters to Lady Melbourne, too confidential for publication, v. 185; his mother a very coarse woman, 186. 192; his last meeting with his mother, 265; his reason for hating his mother, 265; his MS. of "Werner" sent to Moore, iii. 326; his opinion of Shakespeare, iii. 34. 352; vii. 138; his opinions of some of the "Irish Melodies," i. xxii; his presents to Kean, vi. 69; his profligate life at Venice, v. 268; vi. 27; his quarrel with Dr. Butler, 185; his sensitiveness to criticism, 12; v. 251. 252; his separation from Lady Byron, ii. 95; his threatening to appear to Fletcher, 303; his threat to write a satire against Moore, 238; his tragedies of "Sardanapalus" and "Foscari," iii. 280; his value of antiquities, v. 265; his "Don Juan," ii. 285; iii. 28; instance of his good nature, vi. 13; "Lara," v. 3; viii. 180. note, 184. 189; "Larry and Jacky," 180. note; letter from, to Moore, alluded to, i. 364; letter of his alluded to in praise of Mrs. Dalton's singing, ii. 87; letter to, from a young girl in a consumption, alluded to in his Memoirs, iv. 233; letter to Lady Byron, iii. 115; letter to Moore alluded to, proposing to set up a newspaper with Moore as a means of paying the latter's debts, 189; letter to Mrs. Shelley about Leigh

Hunt, v. 182; "Life of," 77. 97. 173. 259. 260. 274; vi. 146. 166. 167. 179. 180. 187. 194. 203. 310; vii. 260. 355; "Lines on Solitude," i. xxvii; living at Ravenna with the Countess Guiccioli and her husband, iii. 118; his "Marino Faliero," 26. 296; his "Mazeppa," ii. 323. 331; statements and negotiations respecting his "Memoirs," 30; iii. 29. 40. 80. and note, 116. 120. 137. 171. 182. 186. 212. 251. 260. 298. 299. 345. 347. 350; iv. 44. 176. 186. 187. 188. 189. 191. note, 212. 233; v. 110. 192. note, 345. 350; iv. 194. 195; "Memoranda," 237; respecting him, v. 178. 192; on Bowles and Popenry, iii. 222; his opinion of "Lalla Rookh," i. xvi; his preference for "The Fire-Worshippers," xxv; "Papers," v. 154. 155; "Personification of Greece," i. xxvii; pictures of, iv. 315; praise of Moore's lines on the Neapolitans, iii. 235; presentiment of his being attacked, 112; "Prophecy of Dante," 296; his reference to the "Post Bag," i. xvi; romance between him and Mrs. Musters alluded to, 258; his "Sardanapalus," 280; his strong attachment to Moore, vi. 29; "Sunset at Athens," i. xxvii; testimony to Moore's talents and good qualities, i. xvi; "The Battle of Waterloo," xxvii; the bearer of a challenge to Lord Chief Justice Best, vi. 7; the copyright of his works, v. 227; the "Corsair," ii. 3; iii. 99; iv. 219. 342; v. 46. 221. 285; viii. 152. 167. 169. 171; the "Deluge," iii. 354; the "Devil's Drive," vi. 47; the "Glaour," iii. 188; iv. 59. 221; v. 265; viii. 153; i. 364; the "Gladiator," xxvii; the "Ocean," xxvii; the "Prisoner of Chillon," alluded to by Rogers, vii. 218; third canto of "Childe Harold" alluded to by Rogers, 219; "Tragedies," iii. 138. 225. 227. 228. 310; very superstitious, 26; his "Werner," 326; takes the field with the Greeks, iv. 162; his illness at Missolonghi, vi. 217; his death, 186; and burial at Newstead Abbey, 211. 213; his monument refused admittance to Westminster Abbey, vii. 78; proposed monument to him, v. 298; song on his death, iv. 261; his bequest to Fletcher, v. 268; weight of his brains, iv. 223; his statue by Thorwaldsen, vii. 344.

Byron, Lord and Lady, inquired about by Jeffrey, ii. 54; strange rumours in the country respecting, vii. 206.

—, Mrs., v. 214; her death hastened by a fit of passion, 247; her notes in the margin of all the Reviews that had appeared upon Byron's early poems, 295.

—, Rev. Mr., vi. 74.

"By the Feat's Wave," v. 78.

"— the Waters of Babylon," ii. 171.

C.

"Cabinet Cyclopaedia," the, vii. 174. note.

— secrets, ii. 185.

Cacciapiatta, Cardinal, iii. 70.

Cachullin, iv. 268.

Cadeau, the painter, iii. 128.

Cadell, iv. 152; vii. 11.

- Cadenabbia, iii. 18.
 "Cadet Roussel," iii. 194.
 Cadran Bleu, the, iii. 10. 92. 111. 119. 147. 179. 185. 207. 208. 210. 212. 221. 263. 339.
 Cadogan, Earl of, iii. 207. 312. 314. 330.
 ———, Mrs., iii. 205. 329. 331.
 Cadogans, the, iii. 120.
 Cæcilia Metella, tomb of, iii. 49. 62.
 Caen, vii. 187. 188. 189. 192; viii. 276; Museum, the, vii. 192; Wood, v. 179.
 Cæsar, vi. 82; acted by the French, and his statue used in the theatre, iii. 51.
 Cæsars, Palace of the, iii. 59.
 Café Anglais, the, iii. 314; de la Paix, 110. 112. 149; de Mille Colonnes, 149; des Aveugles, 110. 149; Français, 227. 278. 311. 326. 335. 339. 340; Hardy, 9. 269.
 Cagliostro, v. 37.
 "Cain," iii. 300.
 Calus Sestus, Pyramid of, iii. 49. 56.
 Calais, iii. 94. 95. et passim.
 "Calas," iii. 102.
 "Calascro," v. 164.
 Calcott, Dr. John Wall, vi. 77; vii. 40. 86; "Glees," iv. 248.
 ———, Mrs., vi. 77.
 Calcraft, vii. 103.
 ———, Miss, ii. 241. 243.
 Calcutta, vi. 196; vii. 252. 253. 285. 289. 357; viii. 219.
 ——— (Reginald Heber), Bishop of, v. 216.
 Calderai, the, and the Carbonari, iii. 201.
 Caledon, Lady, vii. 16.
 Call, Lady, i. 122.
 ———, Miss, about to be married to Mr. Bathurst, i. 183.
 Callin's Castle, vi. 132.
 Calne, ii. 129. et passim.
 ———, Vicar of, iv. 148.
 Calthorpe, Lord, v. 106.
 Calton Hill, v. 6.
 Calvaire, Mount, iii. 311.
 Calvert, v. 152; vii. 222.
 Calvin, ii. 168. 169. 278. 301; iii. 15; iv. 94; vii. 51; and Servetus, in Bowles's copy of Calvin's "Institutes," ii. 168.
 Calvinism, Bowles's opinion that all the atrocious crimes of the day were owing to it, ii. 278.
 Carnac, iii. 36. 41. 44. 46. 56. 62. 104.
 ———, Colonel, iii. 45. 46. 47.
 Cambiaso, Marquis, iii. 84.
 Cambridge, ii. 246; v. 105. 212. 224. 271; vi. 213. 276. 332; vii. 371.
 ———, Grammar School at, vii. 160.
 ———, King's College, vi. 328.
 ———, Trinity College, v. 130.
 ———, H.R.H. the Duchess of, vi. 214.
 ———, H.R.H. the Duke of, i. 212.
 Cambridges, the, vi. 205.
 Camden Hill, vi. 36. 210.
 ———, Lord (Marquis), ii. 292; iv. 287. 324; v. 313. 314; vi. 153; anecdote of, v. 43.
 Camelford, Lord, anecdotes of, vi. 345.
 Cameriere, the, iii. 46.
 "Camilla," iii. 352.
 Cammuclni, "Cornelia showing her Children," iii. 63; his collection of pictures, 72; "Jupiter presenting the Cup of Immortality to Psyche," 63.
 "Camoens," iv. 312; v. 266; vii. 263; by Lord Strangford, i. 125.
 Campan, Madame, "Memoirs of Marie Antoinette," iv. 64.
 Campanile, the, iii. 49.
 Carpanol of the Capitol, the, iii. 104.
 Campbell, Dr., "Hermippus Redivivus," iii. 226.
 ———, John, vi. 231.
 ———, Lady, iv. 322; v. 42. 44; vi. 137. 164. 216; vii. 105. 123.
 ———, Lady Charlotte, iii. 74; viii. 45. 49. 119.
 ———, Lady Elizabeth, ii. 193.
 ———, Lady Pamela, iv. 279.
 ———, Lord John, viii. 47. and note.
 ———, Major, vi. 136.
 ———, Mr., v. 266; one of the first subscribers to Moore's "Anacreon," i. 98.
 ———, Mrs., i. 97.
 ———, Thomas, i. xxii. 280. 309. 350; ii. 46. 59. 214. 278. 280. 284. 296. 319. 320. 348. 352; iii. 283. 294. 335. 339. 340; iv. 167. 168. 213. 214. 290. 335; v. 61. 269. 305; vi. 41. 113. 117. 193. and note; 213. 231. 232. 274. 275. 295. 296; vii. 15. 16. 76. 197. 244. 245. 322. 367. 375; viii. 89. 145. 177; his "General Review of English Poetry," viii. 177; "British Poets," ii. 286; his poetry depreciated, and instances adduced of his defects, vii. 197; his vanity mortified, vi. 231; "Hohenlinden," iv. 335; letter to Moore alluded to, 167; his "Life of Mrs. Siddons," vii. 46; withdraws from the "Metropolitan," vi. 295; much pleased with Moore's singing, ii. 320; "O'Connor's Child," 216; "Pleasures of Hope," iv. 335.
 Campbell, Sir Guy, v. 42.
 ———, Sir J., iv. 322.
 Campbells, the, iv. 322; vi. 137; viii. 45.
 Camperdown, Lord, vii. 225.
 Camplon, Miss, i. 9.
 Campo Formio, iii. 19.
 Canada, viii. 30.
 ———, Upper, vi. 126.
 "Canadian Boat Song," music of, suggested to Moore by that given in the text, vii. 102.
 Canaletti, "Sta. Maria della Salute," iii. 82.
 Canal travelling, i. 94.
 "Canciones Patrioticas," iv. 97.
 Canning, Lady, vi. 106. 107; vii. 16. 301.
 ———, Miss, iii. 158. 160. 193. 207. 211. 219; iv. 73. 80. 90.
 ———, Mrs., ii. 148; iv. 73. 90. 280; viii. 247; her letters showing Sheridan's private character in an amiable view, ii. 152.
 ———, Right Hon. George, and his colleagues at the time of the French invasion of Spain, v. 230; and the Literary Club, 283; article by him on the Elgin Marbles in the "Quarterly," iii. 158; by Sir Thomas Lawrence, v. 65; his "Epitaph on Pitt," 139; his account of Grattan's failing oratory, iii. 160; his allowance of the alteration and mangling of his papers in Council, vi. 32; his sensitiveness, iii. 164; inflexible on the Catholic question, i. 279; introduction to Moore, ii. 158; persuaded by the Prince to join the relics of the Perceval ministry, i. 279; pun on Charles Wynne, v. 273; quotation from, vii. 175. note; scraps about Sheridan, iv. 90; his "Speeches," vi. 79. note; his translation of Lord Bexley's motto, iv. 55; "War Speech," v. 135; would never have been prime minister, had he started

- into political life under the Whigs, vii. 80; his death alluded to, v. 195; Life of, proposed to Moore, and declined by him, vi. 106.
- Canning, Sir Stratford (Lord Stratford de Redcliffe), iv. 167. 220. 310; vi. 158; viii. 20; ludicrous account of Lord Byron's taking precedence of the corps diplomatique at Constantinople, ii. 313; tried to persuade Moore to take a trip with him to Constantinople, vii. 301.
- , Lady Stratford (Lady Stratford de Redcliffe), vi. 77; viii. 20.
- Cannings, the, iv. 78; v. 187.
- Cannizzaro, Duchesse, vi. 117. 260.
- Cannon, ii. 314.
- Canova, Antonio, iii. 38. 56. 59. 63. 64. 68. 69. 71. 73. 74. 146. 265; v. 225; vi. 74; a most interesting person, iii. 64; "A Nymph," 56; bust of Napoleon, 32; by Sir Thomas Lawrence, 71; cast of "Magdalen," 56; "Creugas," 54; "Cupid and Psyche," 250; "Endymion," 56; "Hebe," 28; his conversations with Napoleon, 68; his exciting task, 44; his group of "Theseus and the Centaur," 56; his studies, 65; his views of Europe, 65; his "Magdalen," 64. 68. 110; his monument of "Pope Rezonico," 48; his monument to the "Stuart family," 48; "Perseus," 48; "Petrarch," 23; "Princess Borghese," 68; "Pugilists," 48; statue of "Telemachus," 87; statue of the "King of Naples," 53; "The Graces," 63. 283; "Theseus and the Centaur," 56; "Venere Vincitrice," 68; "Venus," 42. 282.
- Cantata in honour of Moore, iv. 205.
- Canterbury, iii. 286.
- , A. B., iii. 169.
- , Archbishop of (Howley), vi. 220. 340.
- Caprara, Cardinal, iii. 21.
- Capel, Lord, iv. 39.
- , Miss, iii. 238. 273.
- , v. 268.
- , Miss, iv. 205.
- Capello Rosso, the, iii. 23.
- Capitol, the, iii. 49. 59. 63. 66. 75. 226.
- Capponi, iii. 36.
- Cappoquin, iv. 104.
- Caprea, viii. 177.
- "Captain Rock, Memoirs of," i. xxix; iv. 160. 163. 168. 176. 182. 183. 184. 185. 186. 194. 195. 206. 207. 235. 256. 307. 310. 327; v. 29. 34. 36. 44. 114. 149. 292; vii. 179. 239; flatteringly noticed in the "Times" and "Morning Chronicle," iv. 178; great sensation produced by, in Ireland, 181; various comments and reviews on, 210, 211.
- "—— detected," by O'Sullivan, iv. 210. 224.
- Capuchin Church, the, iii. 58.
- Capuchins, their skulls ranged and labelled, iii. 33.
- Caracalla, circus of, iii. 62.
- Caracci, Agostino, iii. 51.
- , Annibal, iii. 33. 51.
- , Ludovico, vii. 40.
- Caradori, Madame, iv. 71. 168. 290; v. 105. 181.
- Carafa, iii. 223; iv. 251. 267; "O Cara Memoria," 250; "O Memory," 270.
- Caravaggio, iii. 62; "The Gamblers," 68.
- "Caravane de Caire," iii. 307.
- Carbonari, the, and the Calderai, iii. 201.
- Cardinal, the, iii. 79.
- Cardan, Jerome, i. 307.
- Carelli, v. 235.
- Caréta, Laura, vii. 17.
- Carew, Lord, vii. 20.
- Carey, Rev. Henry Francis, iii. 356; iv. 47, 48; vi. 136, 137; his "Dante," vi. 15.
- Paulet, projector of the "Sentimental Masonic Magazine," i. 16.
- Carhampton, Lord, vi. 287.
- Carignan, Prince, afterwards Charles Albert, not contemptible, iv. 41. note.
- Carlisle, Lady, v. 76. 170. 187. 273. 288; vi. 44; vii. 194.
- , Lord, iii. 295; iv. 219; v. 177. 192. 273. 285. 288; vi. 35. 54. 109. 111. 113. 126. 187; vii. 147. 179. 194. 227. 258. 314; Byron's horror at the personality of one of his lines on, iv. 219. and note.
- , Sir Anthony, vi. 130. 131.
- Carlises, the, v. 187. 265; vi. 37. 45. 61. 63. 118. 125; vii. 181.
- Carli, Tomaso, iii. 22.
- Carlow Catinari, St., church of, iii. 73.
- Carlton House, i. 245. 263. 264. 295; ii. 221. 224. 291. 311. 354; iv. 289. 293; viii. 97. 111. 170.
- Palace, iii. 166.
- Carlyle, Thomas, vii. 224.
- Carmine, the, iii. 41.
- Carnarvon, Lord, ii. 238; iv. 78. 205. 252. 254; v. 141. 142. 151. 174. 307. 308. 311; vi. 56. 113. 124. 187; his conversation with Moore on politics, v. 235.
- Carnatic, the, ii. 194. note.
- Carnival, the, iii. 328. 334; vi. 259.
- "—— de Venise," ii. 223; iii. 10. 83. 203. 271.
- Carol, Sir William, iv. 288.
- Caroline, Queen, revolution prognosticated, on her arrival in England, iii. 125; decision of the House of Lords against her, and Moore's remarks on it, 168; the bill against her defeated, and the proposed dinner to celebrate it, 168.
- Carpenter, i. 117. 150. 152. 158. 159. 161. 184. 227. 244. 264. 325. 331. 332. 334; ii. 34. 161. 162. 252. 301. 356; iv. 184. 326; vi. 246; vii. 202; viii. 47. 56. 77. 82. 107.
- Carr, iii. 65. 67; v. 170.
- , Dr., i. 20.
- , Rev. William Howell, iv. 79; vi. 56. 57.
- , Mrs., v. 170.
- Carriagaline, the, iv. 107. 109.
- Carrington, Lord, iii. 340; iv. 316; vii. 135. 144.
- Carte, "Ormonde," iv. 165.
- Carthusian Church, the, at Rome, iii. 57.
- Carton, i. 8; vi. 131. 148; viii. 150.
- Cartwright, Major, and the "Brevia Parliamentaria," ii. 157; proposed to be called "The Mother of Reform," 157.
- Caryfort, rhyme for, iv. 225.
- Casa Corsini, the, iii. 41. 44.
- Mozzi, the, iii. 44.
- Rossi, the, iii. 31.
- Casaubon, vii. 173.
- Cascine, the, iii. 36.
- Caserta, the, vi. 122.
- Cassey, iv. 98. 99. 100; v. 152; vii. 107. 108; account of the fracas between Grattan and Isaac Corry, iii. 287; parody of two of Moore's lines in the "Velled Prophet," iv. 101.
- "Cash, Corn, &c," v. 311.
- Cashel, vi. 277; archbishop of, iv. 160.
- Cashiobury, iii. 282; iv. 85. 304. 308; v. 208; vi. 115. 117. 196.

- "Casket, the," vi. 67.
 Cassan, vi. 29. 73.
 Cassidys, the, vi. 141. 146.
 Castalion, vii. 52; one of the first teacher of toleration, ii. 168.
 Castalcicala, Princess, iii.
 Castelli, iv. 76. 205. 290. 184.
 Casti, iii. 22; "Novelle," 10. 78.
 Castl-bar, the priest of, iv. 122.
 Castle Chapel, the new, ii. 52.
 —, Combe, v. 312.
 —, Comer, vi. 137.
 —, Donington, i. 275. 364; v. 210. 257.
 —, Forbes, i. 118. 121; viii. 41.
 —, Howard, ii. 214.
 Castlemagner, iv. 111.
 Castletown, vii. 363.
 Castlereagh, viii. 218.
 —, Lady (Viscountess), vi. 235.
 —, Lord (Viscount), ii. 68. 159. 251. 330; iii. 40. 121. 288; iv. 291; v. 181. 192. 314. 318. 319; vi. 3. 68. 86. 153; vii. 44. 228; viii. 78. 229; and the "Radiant-boy" iv. 338; curious incident connected with, v. 193; his opinion of Moore's writings about himself, iii. 149.
 Castlereaghs, the, v. 314.
 Castries, Duchesse de, iii. 9.
 Cataboras, ii. 80.
 Catalan, Madame, i. 234. 371; ii. 206; iii. 349; iv. 6. 124. 125. 126. 207; her opinion of Pasta, 7; her veneration for Grattan, 124.
 Catch Club, the, vi. 43; its tribute to Sir J. Stevenson, i. 123.
 Cater, Captain, iv. 171.
 —, Mrs., iv. 171.
 Cathcart, Lady, iv. 205.
 —, Lord, iv. 205; v. 156.
 Catherine, Empress of all the Russias, iii. 31; vi. 293; viii. 191; anecdote of, told by Lord St. Helen's, vi. 292.
 Catholic Association, the, Moore's repugnance to, i. xix.
 —, Board, the, ii. 13.
 —, cause, the, conversation on, v. 32; going to ruin, 34.
 —, claims, the, to be overborne or baffled, i. 313.
 —, Committee, The General, its legality, i. 20.
 —, Emancipation, i. 284; vi. 4; certainty of its being recommended in the king's speech, 8; dreaded by Italian liberals, iii. 40; mountain and mouse results of, vi. 42.
 —, enfranchisement, opened the University of Dublin to Moore, i. 20.
 —, Question, the, i. 308; and the year 1829, vi. 3.
 Catholics, the Roman, ii. 181; abuse of the Prince of Wales, viii. 166; address of, the policy of a party, 149. 231; proud of a parallelism between their religion and that of the heathen, vii. 257.
 Caton, Miss, v. 29.
 Catullus, iii. 259. 328. 329; iv. 129; vii. 219; viii. 88; "Acme and Septimius," 121; "Return home to Sirmio," 121; Sermione of, iii. 23.
 Caulaincourt, vii. 191.
 Caulfield, iv. 125. 195.
 —, Lord, iii. 80.
 Caulfields, the, vi. 113.
 "Cavalier, the, and his Mistress," by Titian, iii. 89.
 Cave, Mrs. Otway, vii. 348.
 Cavenagh, iv. 103.
 Cavendish, Lord J., iv. 225.
 —, Mrs. Henry, viii. 183.
 Cavendishes, the young, iv. 113.
 Cawdor Castle, viii. 162.
 —, Lady (Countess of), iv. 75. 133. 136; v. 62. 63. 69. 89. 151. 170. 289. 292; vii. 322.
 —, Lord (Earl of), iv. 75. 133. 173. 294; v. 70. 75. 88. 97. 100. 159. 292. 307; vi. 44. 45. 113. 188. 225. 338; vii. 321.
 Cawdors, the, iv. 166; v. 69. 72. 295; vi. 121.
 "Cecilia, St." by Domenichino, iii. 82; by Raphael, 81; statue of, by Maderno, 61; in Trastevere, church of, 61.
 Ceillier, "History of Ecclesiastical Authors," vii. 32.
 Celepino, "Dictionary," iii. 68.
 Cellini, Benvenuto, vi. 95; "Life," iv. 40; "The Perseus," iii. 36.
 Celtic language, its affinity to Latin and Greek, viii. 136.
 "Cenci, the," by Titian, iii. 52; by Guido, 75; family, the, 73.
 Cenis, Mount, ascent of, iii. 85.
 "Centenaire," the, v. 78.
 Cephalonia, ii. 189; iv. 216; v. 238. 301. 317.
 Cerceau, Abbé de, "History of Rienzi," iii. 104; "Rienzi's Conspiracy," 107.
 Cervantes, i. vii.
 Cesarotti, iv. 268.
 Ceyx and Halcione, ii. 254.
 Chabanaïs, Madame de, iii. 325.
 Chabot, Vicomte, iii. 191. 192. 193. 195. 196. 203. 204. 229. 232; vi. 239. note; vii. 183; his letter to Moore, 343.
 —, Lady Isabella, iii. 365.
 Chabots, the, iii. 303. 318. 328.
 Chalk Farm, i. 203. 207; chosen for the duel between Moore and Jeffrey, 202.
 Chalmers, Dr., ii. 240; "Devotional Exercises," v. 258; letter to Lord Byron on the publicity of his private sorrows, ii. 192.
 Chalons, vi. 315.
 Chamber of Deputies, iii. 8. 93. 185.
 —, of Peers, the, iii. 255.
 Chamberlain's, Lord, office, copies of all plays preserved there, ii. 174.
 Chambers, Miss, vii. 150.
 —, Mr., vii. 150.
 —, Mrs., vii. 150.
 Chambery, iii. 85.
 Chamouni, viii. 185. 218.
 Champagne, Philippe de, "Cardinal Mazarin," iii. 234; "Cardinal Richelieu," 234.
 Champagnole, iii. 12.
 Champ de Mars, iii. 157; viii. 277.
 Champfort, vii. 23.
 "Champion, the," viii. 172.
 Champneys, Sir Thomas, anecdotes told by, vi. 194.
 Champs Elysées, the, iii. 100. 102. 109. 119. 122. 155. 171. 182. 217. 224. 270. 309. 314. 317. 320. 354. 366; iv. 337.
 Chancellor, Miss, iv. 307.
 Changes of climate on the American coast, i. 139.
 Channing, vi. 267.
 "Chansons de Voyageurs," i. 176.
 Chantilly, iii. 6. 134.
 Chantrey, Mrs., iii. 349; vii. 149.
 —, Sir Francis, iii. 3. 47. 49. 50. 53. 54. 56. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 63. 64. 65. 66. 67. 68. 69. 71. 73. 74. 75. 77. 78. 80. 81. 82. 83.

84. 86, 87, 88, 89, 90. 265. 292. 296. 298. 346 ;
iv. 28. 49. 78 ; v. 67. 156. 189. 215. 281. 282 ;
vi. 39. 77. 78. 96. 105. 108. 119. 201. 233 ;
vii. 149 ; and Wilkie, their interview with the king, v. 321 ; bust of " Sir Walter Scott," vi. 201 ; his conversation with Moore on the Bermuda business, v. 321 ;
" Dansatrice," iii. 65 ; description of a morning in the king's bedchamber in the cottage, vi. 96 ; " Dirce," iii. 65 ; group of Mrs. Jordan and her children, executed by him for William IV., vii. 149 ; " Hebe," iii. 65 ; his contempt for the old masters, instance of, v. 215 ; his explanation to Moore of the progress of working a statue,
iii. 63 ; his remarks on groups of sculpture,
53 ; " Love and Psyche," iii. 65 ;
" The Female leading the Old Man," 65 ;
" The Graces," 65 ; " Washington," 65.
" Chants of Bob Gregson," announced,
but not begun, ii. 268.
" ——— Populaires de la Grèce," iv. 246.
" Chapeau de Paille," iv. 48.
Chapel Royal, the, iii. 202.
" Chaperon Rouge," iii. 105.
" Characters," ii. 147.
Charade by Fox, ii. 283.
Charges against Moore's early poems, alluded to, ii. 11.
Charlemagne, vii. 3. 366 ; viii. 173. note.
Charlemont, Lady, ii. 305 ; iii. 78. 169. 173.
176. 180. 196. 214. 225. 227. 246. 310. 312.
316. 325. 341 ; v. 300 ; vi. 197. 233 ; viii.
80 ; effects of her beauty upon the Italians, iii. 78 ; her enthusiasm for Moore's songs, viii. 80.
———, Lord, iii. 78. 79. 167. 169. 173.
177. 180. 196. 199. 201. 204. 205. 206. 207.
208. 209. 210. 224. 329. 339. 341 ; iv. 125.
195. 265 ; v. 26 ; vi. 17. 113. 312 ; viii. 148 ;
played " Peachum," i. 8.
Charlemonts, the, iii. 80. 175. 304. 330 ; iv.
205 ; v. 186. 188.
Charles I., ii. 180. 206 ; iii. 15 ; iv. 179 ; v.
118. 129. 231.
———, ii. 275 ; iv. 262 ; v. 231 ; vi.
230 ; " and Two Children," by Vandyck, iii. 84 ; attending the House of Lords' debates, vi. 230.
———, V., iii. 36.
———, IX., iii. 333.
———, X., iv. 305 ; vi. 270 ; his excursions in Lincolnshire, 347.
———, the Archduke, viii. 77.
———, Prince, iv. 333.
Charleston, vi. 11.
Charleville, Lady, iii. 197.
" Charlie," vi. 284.
Charlotte, H. R. H. the Princess, i. 332 ; ii.
100 ; iii. 112 ; iv. 303 ; and Lady de Clifford, viii. 140.
" Charming Clorinda," vii. 75.
Charron, " Dictionary of Musicians," ii. 235.
Charter Glee, to be written by Moore for Dalton, i. 304.
———, House, the, ii. 121 ; v. 103. 104.
et passim.
Charteris, vi. 114.
Chartres, Duke of, vi. 38.
Chateaubriand, iii. 203. 235. 254. 363 ; v.
117. 147 ; vii. 202 ; anticipated part of Moore's story of the " Epicurean," iii. 133 ;
" Les Martyrs," 133. 150 ; his account of the representation of Moore's " Lalla Rookh" at Berlin, 203.
———, Madame, iii. 209.
Chateau de Vincennes, iii. 140. 310.
———, of the Tuileries, iii. 156.
Chatelet, Marquise de, iii. 14.
Chatenay, iii. 127.
Chatham, Earl of, ii. 226. 315. 346 ; iv. 139.
159. 215. 228. 230. 263 ; v. 141 ; vi. 35. 64 ;
his curious speech respecting the livery of the city of London, 82 ; better remembered than Mr. Pitt, ii. 226 ; his fame, iv. 139 ; his humbug, vi. 35 ; quotation from, iv. 228 ; a speech of his,
230.
Chartreux church, the, iii. 33.
Chatsworth, ii. 32. 60. 61. 63. 64. 66. 316. 335 ;
v. 217 ; viii. 183. 193.
Chatterton, vii. 174.
Chaucer, Geoffrey, ii. 101 ; unreadable to Moore, 290.
Chaudet, " Sensibility," iii. 152 ; statue of " Cupid," 152.
Chauvelin, iv. 251.
Chaworth, Miss, v. 218. 219.
———, Mrs., v. 213.
Chaworths, the, v. 213.
Cheap living, story of, by Jekyll, iv. 30.
Cheltenham, i. 297 ; ii. 189 ; iv. 278. 285. 298.
311. 313 ; v. 129. 217. 218. 221 ; vi. 26. 31.
48. 281 ; vii. 92. 293. 294. 301 ; viii. 27. and note, 110.
Chenevix, iii. 212. 215. 328. 336 ; his intention to have introduced Lamartine to the English as the " first" French poet, 202.
Chenier, iii. 130. 363.
" Cherries, The," v. 278.
" Cherry and Fair Star," iii. 34.
Cheron, General, iii. 312.
Cherubini, iii. 227.
Cheshire, vii. 334 ; viii. 135. 144.
Cheslyn, ii. 6 ; viii. 105.
Chessell House, v. 315.
Chester, i. 80. 83. 84. 93.
Chesterfield, Lord, v. 181 ; his saying, on seeing a minuet danced, vi. 71.
Cheyt Sing, ii. 191.
Chichester, i. 194. 195. 211 ; v. 103.
———, Bishop of, vii. 26.
———, Miss, iii. 255.
Chiesa di Santa Maria degli Angeli, iii. 57 ;
della Vittoria, 57.
Chigi, Princess, iii. 46. 47. 65.
" Child, a, or Cupid crowning a Skull with a Wreath," by a pupil of Correggio, iii.
72.
———, Mr., ii. 295 ; iv. 228.
" Child Harold," ii. 137. 170 ; iii. 161. note ;
v. 191. 247 ; vi. 329 ; vii. 303 ; viii. 218.
291.
" Childish Recollections," vi. 14.
" Chili, Account of," iv. 240.
Chillingworth, William, iii. 221 ; his conversion, iv. 159.
Chillon, iii. 16.
Chilperic, iv. 86.
China, the Emperor of, ii. 354 ; lines on, iv.
34.
Chinese birds'-nest soup, ii. 271.
Chinnery, iii. 160 ; iv. 90.
———, Mrs., ii. 326.
Chippendale ball, the, v. 40.
———, Book Club elected Moore a member by acclamation, ii. 172.
Chippewa, i. 170. 173.
Chiswick, ii. 19 ; vi. 283 ; viii. 89.
Chittoway, ii. 243.
———, Wood, ii. 348.
Chitway, iv. 137. 146 ; v. 147.
" Choice of Hercules, the," iv. 243.
Choiseul, Comte de, iii. 138.
Cholmondeley, Lord, i. 279.
" Christ," by Titian, iii. 232.

- "Christ," figure of, iii. 284; in ivory, by Michael Angelo, 32; crowned with Thorns, by Teniers, 70; embracing the Cross, copy of Michael Angelo's statue of, by Taddeo Landini, 41; statue of, by Michael Angelo, 41; Head of, by Rembrandt, 69; on the Cross, by Guido, 72; surrounded by Saints, by Carlo Dolci, 203; taken down from the Cross, by Andrea del Sarto, 42; with the Man at the Pool, 232.
- Christchurch, Dublin, vii. 239.
- "Christabel," ii. 101; iv. 48.
- "Christening of Little Joey," ii. 208.
- Christie, ii. 302; iv. 305; vi. 96.
- "Chronicle, the Bath," vi. 282; the Cheltenham," ii. 250; the Literary," iv. 31; the Morning," ii. 81. 106, 107. 255. 275. 278; iii. 224. 265. 293. 295. 302; iv. 43. 64. 178. 186. 202. 205. 256. 282; v. 81. 134; vi. 30. note, 92. 178; vii. 93. 151. 152. 161. 170. 219. 221. 274. 310. 331; viii. 3. 121. 182; St. James's," ii. 221; v. 115, 116.
- Chronological Catalogue, iv. 95.
- Churchill, ii. 253; iv. 170. 263; original letter of his to his bookseller, asking for a guinea, alluded to, 258.
- , Lord C., iii. 196; v. 176.
- Ciacconius, v. 57.
- Ciarrhottini, iv. 205.
- Cleero, iii. 20; iv. 310; vi. 346; vii. 43.
- "Ci-devant Jeune Homme," iii. 200. 208.
- Cignani, Carlo, iii. 32.
- Cimabue, iii. 77.
- Cimarosa, iii. 334; "Se non credi," iv. 179.
- "Cinna," iii. 13.
- Cinti, Madame, iii. 196.
- Cintra, v. 156.
- Cipolino, the, iii. 54.
- "Circular, the," ii. 131.
- Circus, the, ii. 267.
- Maximus, the, vii. 256. note.
- Civil process, the great grievance of the law in Ireland, iv. 123.
- Clairon, Madlle, iii. 304, 305.
- Clairvoyant, a remarkable one alluded to, vii. 225.
- Clanricarde, Dowager Lady Marchioness, v. 36.
- , Lady (Marchioness), iii. 90. 365; v. 170. 187; vi. 208.
- , Lord (Marquis), v. 159; vii. 180. 280. 372.
- Clanricardes, the, vi. 57. 122. 334; viii. 17.
- Clanship, the source of most of the evils in Ireland, vii. 3.
- Clanwilliam, Lord, iii. 344; vi. 22.
- Clapham Common, called Campo Santo, vi. 91.
- Clapperton, v. 200.
- Clare, Lady, ii. 213. 299; v. 189.
- , Lord, iii. 266; iv. 121, 122; v. 182. 186. 299. 309; vi. 29. 36. 153; vii. 176; his description of the country, and society in India, 177; his marked kindness to Moore i. 71.
- Clarence, H. R. H. the Duchess of (Queen Adelaide), v. 304.
- , Duke of (King William IV.), vi. 246; inquired respecting Moore's birth, parentage, &c., i. 106; his inspection of the model ships used at Drury Lane, ii. 303; voting against his own opinion, v. 307.
- Clarendon, Lady (Countess of), iv. 232.
- , Lord (Earl of), ii. 221; v. 92; vi. 230; vii. 280.
- Clarendons, the, vii. 336.
- "Clari," iii. 125. 142; iv. 259.
- Clark, iv. 279; v. 268.
- Clarke, Dr., i. 282; ii. 6. 278, 279; iv. 124. 147; vii. 5. 23; "Travels," iii. 169; iv. 64.
- , Daniel, ii. 54.
- , Lady, iii. 290; iv. 126; vi. 95; vii. 300.
- , Mrs., iv. 68. 148.
- , the Misses, vi. 131.
- Clarkes, the, vi. 130. 173.
- Claude, iii. 44. 61. 75. 78; vi. 56, 57. !
- "Claudes, the Two," iii. 62.
- Clausel, iii. 321; vii. 190, 191.
- Clay, Mr., iii. 209.
- Clayton, Miss, v. 211.
- Clement, Lady, v. 186.
- Clementi, Muzio, want of genius in his works, ii. 173; "Sonatas," 173. 176.
- Clements, Lord, vii. 157.
- Clement's, St., iii. 351.
- , Lane, iii. 294.
- Clemont Tonnerre, Duchesse de, iii. 209.
- "Cleon," iv. 10.
- Cleopatra, iii. 150; by Guido, 42.
- Clerk, Sir George, vi. 30.
- Cleveland, Duchess of, vi. 56; vii. 109. 225.
- , Duke of, vi. 59. 106. 109; vii. 225.
- Cliffden, Lord, i. 213; iii. 257. 266; iv. 293; v. 60. 187. 265. 297; vi. 61. 83. 84. 90. 95, 96. 119. 120. 267. 317; vii. 207. 222.
- Clifford, Captain, ii. 310, 311.
- , Lord, ii. 301; iv. 269; vi. 27.
- Cliffords, the, ii. 310.
- Clifton, its beauty, vi. 278.
- , Lady, v. 65. 80.
- , Lord, iii. 349; v. 80.
- , Mrs., iii. 356.
- , Rev., v. 133, 134.
- Cline, vi. 243. note.
- Clinton, Lady, vi. 122.
- , Lord, ii. 317.
- Clock described which Mademoiselle D'Orleans presented to Moore, iii. 232.
- Cloncurry, Lady, iv. 135.
- , Lord, i. 98; v. 172. 300; anecdote of, 176; his wish to get up a public dinner to Moore, v. 32; interceded with Lord Wellesley for a man found guilty of murder, but believed to be innocent, iv. 125.
- Clonmell, Lord, ii. 302; v. 46.
- Close, Barry, ii. 245; his studies and acquirements, all made through Persian translations, 244.
- Cloud, St., iii. 125. 129. 138. 140. 145, 146. 149. 151. 153. 224. 243. 246. 263. 277; park of, 130; the lantern at, 243.
- Clutterbuck, iv. 95. 103. 247; v. 55. 313.
- , Mrs., iv. 95. 247; v. 41.
- , the, iv. 247; v. 130.
- Clydagh, the, iv. 109.
- Coalitions, ii. 225. 314; just and necessary, 291.
- Cobbett, William, ii. 354; iv. 98; v. 42. 158; viii. 86; disputed grammar of a passage of his, iv. 254; his "English Grammar," ii. 346; his "History of the Reformation," v. 29.
- , Miss, ii. 356.
- , Mrs., ii. 356.
- Coccia, v. 178.
- Cochrane, vii. 288.
- and White, ii. 39.

- Cochrane, Lady, iv. 290.
 ———, Lord, iv. 296.
 Cockburn, v. 7; gave Moore a seal in remembrance, i. 137.
 ———, Sir George, iv. 28.
 Cockerell, iii. 45; iv. 141. 249; vii. 6.
 Cockpit, the, ii. 338.
 Coccomero, the, iii. 43.
 Codd, Richard Joyce, letter to, from Moore, congratulating him on his marriage, i. 239; Moore's letter, to his mother, on the death of, 240.
 ———, Thomas, vii. 111, 112; Moore's maternal grandfather, i. 1.
 "Codex Armachanus," vii. 369.
 "—— Britannicus," vii. 369.
 "—— Montfort," vii. 369.
 Codrington, vi. 115. 117. 321.
 ———, Sir E., vi. 108.
 ———, P., iv. 80. 205; vi. 68.
 ———, the Misses, vi. 108.
 Codringtons, the, vi. 112; vii. 201.
 Coffee biggins, named from Mr. Biggin, the inventor, i. 97.
 Coghill, Sir John, i. 106.
 Coghlan, Miss, iii. 9.
 Cohn Falls, vii. 260; very beautiful, i. 166.
 "Coin de Rue," iii. 221.
 ———, curious, found in Ireland, ii. 287.
 Coke, Sir Edward, vi. 93. 121; his conduct on the trial of Sir Walter Raleigh, ii. 330; story told by him, of a dinner given by Lord Petre to Fox and Burke after their great quarrel, v. 281. and note.
 Colburn, Henry, iv. 186; v. 265; vi. 70.
 Colby, Colonel, iv. 103.
 Colchester, Lady, iv. 167.
 ———, Lord, iv. 167.
 Colclough, Cæsar, iii. 5.
 Cole, Lord, vii. 98.
 Coleraine, Lord, v. 274; anecdote of, 273; story of, iv. 167.
 Coleridge, Samuel Taylor, iv. 26. 49. 319; v. 100. 121; vii. 8, 50. 72, 73; viiii. 89. 157. 290; anecdote of, vi. 331; employed in writing on Daniel, and the Revelations, vii. 7; pleased at Moore's singing, 8; his story of an author, iv. 50.
 ———, Mrs., vii. 72.
 Collign, Admiral, iii. 334.
 Coliseum, the, iii. 49, 50. 74. 143. 256; sensations it excites, 48.
 Collan, iv. 103.
 "Collectanea," ii. 148.
 "Collection of Sacred Music," ii. 152.
 College dinner, ii. 121.
 ——— life, Moore's commencement of, i. 24; reputations, vi. 46.
 "Collegians, The," vi. 301; vii. 127.
 Collinet, iii. 315; iv. 17.
 Collings, v. 277. 305.
 ———, Mrs., vi. 156.
 Collingses, the, v. 205.
 Collingwood, Mrs., iv. 321.
 Collins, ii. 250; v. 99. 110.
 ———, Mrs., v. 110. 114.
 Collinses, the, v. 97. 98. 111.
 Colman, George, i. 96. 112, 181; ii. 175. 355; iii. 3; iv. 161; at the Beef Steak Club, ii. 175; comedy of "Ways and Means," 187.
 ———, the Misses, vi. 148.
 Cologan, Mrs., i. 75. 89.
 Colombari, the, iii. 62.
 Colonge, iv. 39.
 "Colonial Policy," Brougham's, viii. 48. and note.
 Colonna garden, the, iii. 75.
 Colquhoun, vi. 241.
 "Columbus," ii. 23; v. 289; vi. 64. 91.
 "——, Voyage of," viii. 101. note, 112, 113. 115. note, 126.
 Colwich, v. 250. 255. 258.
 Combe, vii. 241; author of "Dr. Syntax," ii. 201; kicked Lord Lyttleton down stairs for his ridicule of Lady Archer, 201; said to be the writer of Macleod's "Loo Choo," 201; the author of Lord Lyttleton's "Letters," 201.
 ———, Dr., vii. 105.
 ——— Florey, vii. 349. 351.
 "Come, Cloe, and give me sweet kisses," parody on, vii. 59.
 Comerford, iii. 8.
 "Come, Stella, arouse thee," ii. 273.
 "—— tell me, says Rosa," iv. 260.
 "—— to me when daylight sets," iv. 236.
 Comical things in Colmans "Ways and Means," ii. 188.
 "Commentaire Philosophique," ii. 168.
 Commercial travellers, some curious particulars concerning them, vi. 177.
 "Common-Place Book," iv. 215.
 "Common Sense and Genius," vi. 37.
 Como, iii. 19; lake of, thickly inhabited all round, 18.
 Comparison between the Emperor Alexander, the King of Prussia, and the Prince Regent, ii. 20; between Lords Brougham and Dudley, iv. 87; between Milton's Satan and Tasso's Pluto, i. xli. note B.
 Compiègne, iii. 123. 134. 135.
 Comte, M., theatre of, iii. 113.
 Compton, Captain, i. 147, 148.
 Comte, M., iv. 310.
 "Comus," ii. 351; iii. 197, 198; epilogue to, written by Grattan, i. 8; prologue to, written by Whyte, 8.
 Conaxa, a Jesuit, author of the "Deux Gendres," iii. 322.
 Concannon, iii. 258.
 Concord, Temple of, iii. 49.
 Condé, the Prince of, i. 257.
 Condillac, Abbé, "Lettres Philosophiques et la Perfectibilité des Animaux," vii. 48.
 Confession, in the Greek Church, iii. 325; Moore's reasons for declining, i. 30, 31.
 Confidential correspondence, specimen of, ii. 68.
 Confrérie de Saint Roch, iii. 27.
 Coningsby, Lord, vi. 114. 119. 318.
 Connelan, Mrs., vii. 293.
 Conner, Mrs., iv. 107.
 Connoisseurs, their cant, iii. 34.
 Connor, i. 244. 253; ii. 324.
 ———, Edward, viii. 60.
 Conolly, ii. 205; v. 28.
 Conolly's Lodge, vi. 142.
 Conroy, Sir John, vi. 154.
 Consadine, Heff, vi. 125, 126.
 "Conspiracy of Cataline," by Salvator Rosa, iii. 42. 80.
 Constable, ii. 267; iv. 71. 72. 77. 88; v. 8. 12. 15. 47. 103; his conversation with Moore, 88; his failure, 42. 45; paid Scott in one year 14,000*l.*, ii. 267.
 ——— de Bourbon, iii. 333.
 Constant, Benjamin, iii. 12. 40. 118. 258. 262. 310. 325. 327; v. 199; vi. 270; "Adolphe," viii. 218; anecdote of a translator by, iii. 12.
 ———, Madame Benjamin, iii. 308; v. 270.
 Constants, the, iii. 327.

- Constantine, iii. 56; arch of, 49; statue of, by Bernini, 53.
- Constantinople, ii. 313; iii. 25. 138. 220. 224. 260. 315. 356; vii. 301; ambassador of, iii. 92.
- "Constitutional History," v. 222; vii. 175.
- Society, the, ii. 146.
- "Constitutionnel," the, vii. 185.
- Constitutions, rage for them, iii. 215.
- Consulta, the, iii. 71.
- "Contest between Apollo and Pan," by Guido, iii. 29.
- between the Houses of Lords and Commons on a point of etiquette, v. 108. and note.
- Continental characteristic singing, iii. 85.
- Contrast between Luttrell and Smith, iv. 53; between the sums paid for Milton's "Paradise Lost," and "Mrs. Rundell's Cookery," v. 119.
- Conundrums, ii. 215. 328; v. 281; on Falstaff, iii. 354.
- Conversation about the meaning of French words, iv. 75; between Byron and Moore, relative to Lady Byron, alluded to, iii. 24; between Moore and Chantrey, on the Bermuda business, v. 321; Lord John Russell on the "Life of Sheridan," iv. 73; of the society in Wordsworth's neighbourhood, vii. 71; on grammar, iv. 58; on the use of particular words and style, v. 305, upon teeth, iv. 304.
- Conversations, scraps of, on politics, v. 48.
- Convivial and Political Songs, by Thomas Brown, author of "The Twopenny Postbag," proposed, i. 348.
- Conway, iv. 105; v. 34; vi. 133. 148.
- Conyngham, Lord Francis, iii. 79; iv. 112.
- , Mrs., vi. 315. 318.
- Cook, iii. 193; vi. 130.
- , A. B., vii. 255.
- Cooke (Kangaroo), anecdote of, iii. 179.
- , Lady, vi. 126.
- , Thomas, vii. 146.
- Cookes, the, v. 314.
- Cooper, i. 359. 361; ii. 59; v. 215; vi. 347, 348; vii. 118. 123.
- , Colonel, iii. 270. 275.
- , John, v. 214. 215. 255. 256.
- , Mrs. John, v. 216. 250, 251, 252. 255, 256.
- , James Fennimore, v. 288; his indignation against Lord Nugent, v. 280; repartee of, 289.
- , Lieutenant, viii. 219. 220.
- , Rev., vii. 106.
- , Sir Astley, iv. 45. 46. 47. 52; made, in one year, 24,000*l.*, vii. 33.
- Coopers, the, i. 363; ii. 4. 13. 28. 35. 61; 116. 125.
- Coote, Sir C., vi. 321.
- , Lady, vi. 321.
- Cootes, Mr., ii. 334.
- , the Misses, ii. 334.
- Cope, Colonel, iii. 201. 204, 205. 206. 209. 224, 225.
- , Mr., i. 102.
- Copenhagen, iv. 337; viii. 157. note; public anxiety about the expedition to, i. 235.
- Copley, Miss, iv. 90. 232.
- , Sir Joseph, iv. 90.
- Côpet, v. 137. 225.
- Coppet, viii. 218.
- "Coquette Corrigée," the, iv. 9.
- Coral reefs, iii. 217.
- Corbet, General, i. 61; ii. 219; iii. 208; vii. 188. note, 189. and note; accurate account of his escape from Kilmainham, in Lady Morgan's "O'Brians and O'Flahertys," vii. 189. 192; his meeting with Moore, alluded to, viii. 276; his opinion of Scott's "Napoleon," 190; story of his life, 189; view of Irish politics in 1837, 191.
- Corbould, il. 310.
- Corday, Charlotte, iii. 342.
- "Corinne," i. 234; iii. 90.
- "Coriolanus," iii. 88; v. 13; vi. 70.
- "Corisande," iii. 163.
- Cork, Bishop of, ii. 194.
- , Lady (Countess of), i. 111; ii. 120. 320. 327. 334, 335; iii. 197; iv. 88; v. 178; vi. 130. 131. 181, 182; viii. 49. 80; anecdotes of, ii. 351.
- , Lord (Earl of), v. 313.
- , the Mayor of, and his butter, viii. 6; waggeries played on, ii. 209.
- "Corn and Catholics," v. 132.
- , Cotton, a Dialogue, v. 111.
- Corneille, iii. 148.
- "Cornelia showing her Children," by Camuccini, iii. 63.
- Cornelius Agrippa, viii. 174.
- Cornwall, Barry, iv. 54; vi. 249; his "Poems" full of original talent, ii. 337.
- , Lady, v. 180.
- , iii. 171. 233. 317.
- Cornwallis, Lord, iv. 99.
- "Coronation, The," iii. 294.
- , Anthem, the, ii. 327.
- "Corradino," vi. 314.
- Correggio, Antonio Allegri Da, iii. 32. 82. 92. 278; v. 175; vi. 57. and note, 88; vii. 40; "Cupola of St. Giovanni," iii. 82; "Leda and Nymphs," 127; "Madonna della Sedilla," 82; "Marriage of St. Catherine," 32; "Nymph and Satyr," 265; "St. Jerome," 82; the great picture, purchased by the Government, pronounced not to be his, vii. 40; "Two Laughing Children," iii. 51.
- Corrie, Miss, iii. 333.
- "Corruption," vi. 29.
- Corry, Isaac, iii. 287. 288; vi. 28. 281.
- , James, i. 292. 293. 307. 338. 355; ii. 20. 103. 285. 301. 302. 303. 313. 314. 321. 322. 326; iii. 104. 286. 290. 307; iv. 28. 47. 101. 102. 126. 195. 244. 245. 283. 284. 285. 290. 292. 293. 294; v. 16. 20. 21. 22. 24. 25. 26. 27. 30. 31. 32. 33. 143. 160. 166. 168. 169. 170. 171. 172. 197. 207. 239. 296. 300. 302. 303. 304; vi. 26. 31. 89. 115. 156. 200. 205. 207. 211. 218. 237. 250. 252. 281. 282. 308; vii. 22. 23. 60. 91. 92. 93. 143. 183. 184. 185. 228. 239. 256. 276. 279. 293. 301; viii. 26. note, 27. note, 108, 109, 131, 132. 149. 161. 242. 269; Letters from, to Moore, 105. 147. 160. 163. 260; Letters to, from Moore, 90. 96. 98. 100. 108. 110. 129. 143. 144. 158. 170. 216. 227. 231. 239. 242. 246; Memoir of, 26. note.
- , Mrs., iii. 290; viii. 27. note, 90, 91. 100. 110. 144. 145. 159. 160. 171. 217. 228. 232. 240. 243. 246. 262.
- Corrys, the, v. 29.
- "Corsair, the," iv. 219. 342; v. 46. 221. 285; viii. 152. 167. 169. 171; dedicated to Moore, ii. 3. 4.
- Corsham, ii. 279; v. 232.
- Corsini, the Palazzo, iii. 61.
- Corso, the, iii. 21, 22. 46. 60. 66; vi. 259.
- Corunna, v. 179.
- Corwen, v. 19. 20.
- Cosby, Mr., iv. 122.

- Costello, vii. 28.
 ———, Dudley, vii. 287.
 ———, Miss, ii. 314; vii. 47; MS. opera by, ii. 243; "They are gone to the skies," viii. 3.
 "Cottage Economy," iv. 254.
 Cottenham, Lady, vii. 306.
 ———, Lord, vii. 306.
 Cotter, Rev., iv. 111.
 Cottin, Madame, iii. 162.
 Cotton, Admiral, iii. 179.
 Cotto, Judge, iv. 249; "English Jurisprudence," iii. 318.
 "Could'st thou look!" ii. 87.
 "—— thou look as dear!" iv. 180.
 Coulon's, iii. 263. 267; ball, iii. 91.
 "Count Julian," iv. 53.
 "Country Wife, The," ii. 270.
 "Courier, The," iii. 265. 302; iv. 41. 186. 200. 201. 219. 251. 322; v. 285. 305; vi. 104; vii. 20. 43. 161; viii. 170.
 "——, the Français," viii. 18.
 Courier, "Pamphlets," iii. 333.
 "Court Circular," announcement in, vii. 178.
 Courtenay, iv. 269.
 Court Fête, the, iv. 4.
 Courtin, Madame, iii. 305.
 "Court Journal, The," vi. 104.
 Courtney, iv. 230.
 Coutts, Miss Burdett, iii. 96; viii. 9; note to Moore, vii. 268; her dress at the Queen's Ball, viii. 10.
 ———, Mrs., v. 15. 69. 72. 125.
 Cove, iv. 107. 108. 109.
 Covent Garden Fund Dinner, the, ii. 260, 261; iv. 61.
 ——— Theatre, ii. 99. et passim; in Chancery, v. 83; ruinous state of, viii. 223.
 Covigliaro, iii. 33. 35. 81.
 "Cowden Knowes," iv. 336.
 Cowell, Mr., v. 302. 303.
 Cows, a beautiful place, v. 310.
 Cowley, Abraham, iii. 259; "Brother of Fear," v. 184; "Davideis," iv. 278.
 ———, Mrs. Hannah, "The Fate of Sparta," vi. 114.
 Cowper, Lady, ii. 61. 63. 308. 310; iii. 229. 344; iv. 76. 81. 88. 291. 306; v. 63. 66. 67. 151. 159. 267. 318. 319; vi. 58. 210; vii. 262. 263.
 ———, Lady Emily, v. 318.
 ———, Lord, i. 211; ii. 61. 310; iii. 106. 107. 229. 344; iv. 80. 88. 183. 206. 306; v. 76. 152. 173. 267. 319; vi. 112. 187; vii. 151; about to be married to Miss Lamb, i. 183; epigram by, iii. 108.
 ———, William, i. 194; ii. 250; vi. 204; vii. 73. 151; lines on Dr. Jortin, iii. 272; poems, ii. 281; translation from Homer, vii. 285.
 Cowpers, the, iv. 78. 198. 291. 316; v. 168. 317. 318. 320; vi. 27; viii. 225.
 Cox, iv. 295; viii. 10.
 ——— and Greenwood, Messrs., vii. 193; viii. 3. 280.
 Cox, Archdeacon, iv. 145.
 ———, Peter, v. 179.
 Crabbe, Rev. George, ii. 235. 236. 237. 259. 282. 284. 295. 306. 308. 311. 322. 332. 335; iii. 295; iv. 180. 183. 231. 232. 233. 272. 335; v. 52. 98. 222. 223. 224. 227; vi. 201. 270. 278. 284; vii. 4. 21. 77. 366; viii. 234. 245; first noticed by Burke, v. 223; his preference for "The Veiled Prophet," i. xxv.; his "Works" offered to Longmans, ii. 237; journal of one of his visits to London, found among his papers, vi. 270; lines suggested by Moore's poem on his receiving an inkstand, vii. 282; Lord Melbourne's remark on the new edition of his works, 4; opinion of, by a lady, ii. 335.
 Crackenthorne, Mr., v. 180.
 Cradock, i. 59.
 Craig, Miss Gibson, v. 9.
 Craighook, v. 6. 7. 8. 11.
 Cramer, John Baptiste, vii. 81. 86. 161. 242. 277; viii. 207.
 ———, M., his calculation of the space and food taken up by animals in the Ark, iii. 15.
 ———, Miss, i. 106.
 Crampton, John, v. 302; vi. 281; and Doherty, anecdote of, v. 300; sarcasm on, by Redmond Barry, vii. 93.
 ———, Joseph, v. 30. 31.
 ———, Mrs. Joseph, v. 30.
 ———, Philip, i. 219. 326; ii. 81; iii. 289; iv. 123; v. 24. 25. 26. 27. 29. 30. 32. 33. 36. 37. 38. 297. 299. 300. 301. 302; vi. 6. 89. 129. 129. 132. 137. 138. 141. 142. 147. 149. 150. 167. 169. 170. 171. 272; vii. 98. 107. 122. 143. 232. 268. 296; a spirited skeleton, ii. 81; Barnes's letter of introduction to, from Moore, viii. 268; letters to, from Moore, 268. 270. 278.
 ———, Mrs., iii. 288.
 Cramptons, the, vi. 148; vii. 301.
 Cranley, Lord, ii. 38; iv. 33.
 Cranmer, Archbishop, his elegant habits, iv. 138; supposed recovery of his bones, alluded to, vii. 255.
 Cranstoun, v. 12.
 Crashaw, "St. Theresa," v. 184.
 Crassus, ii. 148.
 Craven, Keppel, iii. 137.
 ———, Lady, "The Miniature Picture," iv. 34.
 Crawford, iii. 163. 164. 165. 185; iv. 277; v. 235; vi. 278; vii. 91. 136. 137.
 ———, Dr., iv. 177. 207; v. 164. 219. 245; vi. 282; vii. 32.
 ———, Mrs., iii. 237; v. 220; vi. 328; vii. 31. 32. 49. 91. 92.
 ———, the Misses, vii. 32.
 Crawfords, the, v. 245; vii. 32. 49. 311.
 Crawley, ii. 233; his "Angel of the World," iii. 141; made war upon Moore in ambuscade, 142.
 Creagh, Miss, ii. 140.
 Creevey, ii. 349; iv. 77. 84. 85. 285. 294. 295; vii. 26. 27; and Brougham at Liverpool, v. 173.
 Crescembini, Giovanni Maria, iii. 64; iv. 322.
 Crescentinis, iv. 36.
 "Creugas," by Canova, iii. 54.
 Crewe Hall, iv. 281.
 ———, Lady, ii. 311.
 ———, Lord, ii. 306. 318.
 ———, Mrs., i. 110; ii. 197. 295.
 "Cribb, Epistle from," ii. 81. 262. 267. 269. 270. 272. 273. 274. 276. 277. 285. 301; advertised, 254; extract from, in "The Chronicle," 275; sent to London, 268.
 ———, Mr. Thomas, ii. 281. 282.
 "Cribb's Memorial," ii. 253.
 Cricklade, iv. 183.
 Criminals, contrast in the behaviour of two, v. 120.
 "Critic, the," vii. 221.
 "Critical Review, the," ii. 161.
 Criticism, its pleasures, ii. 12. 40; on Kem-

- ble's acting of "Don Felix," vi. 85; upon some of the ancients, ii. 290, 291.
- Crockford, v. 153.
- Croft, Dr. William, "Burial Service," ii. 179; anecdote of, 179.
- Crofton, Captain, ii. 280.
- , Miss, v. 68.
- Croker, Right Hon. John Wilson, i. 86; ii. 121, 208, 263, 306, 309, 334; iii. 113, 151, 265, 297, 302, 303, 358; iv. 24, 28, 42, 44, 70, 140, 151, 152, 153, 154, 166, 254, 262, 281, 311, 312; v. 127, 128, 136, 156, 157, 162, 163, 273; vi. 13, 80, 89, 104, 105, 119, 228, 233, 268, 317; vii. 182; note on, by Lord John Russell, vi. 268. note; "Talavéra," 221.
- , Thomas Crofton, iv. 279; vii. 144.
- , Mrs., iv. 28.
- , mountains, anecdote of the, vi. 100. note.
- Croly, v. 64; vii. 367.
- , Archbishop, viii. 31.
- , Rev. Dr., vi. xviii, xix; vii. 160; eulogy of Moore, 372.
- Cromwell, Oliver, iii. 284; iv. 111, 341; v. 29; vi. 46, 211; vii. 179; viii. 30; in Ireland, iv. 165.
- Crookshank, Miss, i. 213.
- , Mrs., viii. 85.
- Crookshanks, i. 233.
- "Croppies lie down," v. 314.
- Crosbie, iii. 165; iv. 240.
- Cross, Serjeant, vii. 242.
- Crotch, Dr. William, i. 324, 339; "Irish Melodies," ii. 9.
- Crouch, Mrs., "Memoirs," ii. 152, 156, 223.
- Crowe, ii. 177, 192, 196, 200, 201, 202, 300; v. 60, 112, 194, 277; viii. 234, 245; described in his walks to Oxford, v. 277; his parents, ii. 80; "Structure of English Verse," 177; "To-day in Ireland," v. 111; "To thy cliffs, rocky Seaton, adieu," 278; verses for the installation of the Duke of Portland, ii. 192.
- , Mrs., ii. 200.
- , Rev., "Lewesdon Hill," ii. 180
- , the Misses, ii. 190.
- "Crowning of the Virgin," by Raphael, iii. 55.
- Croydon, J. P., ii. 208.
- Cruche Cassée, the, iii. 152.
- Crump, Miss, v. 34, 36, 218; vi. 40.
- Cruttwell, ii. 183, 189, 190; iv. 273, 274.
- "Crystal Hunters, the," vii. 266.
- Cuba, threatened by a descent of the French army of St. Domingo, i. 155.
- Cuckoo Ministers, the, ii. 97, 98.
- Cuff, v. 46.
- "Cuisinier and Secrétaire," iii. 198.
- Cul de Sac de Sourdis, iii. 334.
- Cumberland, Duke of, ii. 121; iv. 290, 342; vi. 70; viii. 203. note; represented Aurungebe, in Moore's "Lalla Rookh," at Berlin, iii. 203.
- , Richard, i. 186; vii. 207; viii. 67, 80; "Memoirs," i. 220, 221; viii. 80.
- Cumberlands, the, vi. 205.
- Cuming, Mrs., vii. 107.
- Cummings, the, vii. 207.
- Cumming, J. 97, 101, 102; iv. 12.
- , General, iii. 15.
- , Mrs., iii. 15.
- Cunningham, iii. 343; iv. 332; v. 281.
- , Mrs., iii. 353.
- Cunliffe, ii. 319; vi. 203.
- , Lady, vii. 283.
- Cunliffe, Mrs., ii. 319, 327; v. 70, 300; vi. 126; vii. 314.
- Cunliffes, the, ii. 318; iv. 87; v. 221; vi. 27.
- "Cupid," by Franceschini, iii. 43; by Guido, 27; by Nicolas Poussin, 51; statue of, by Chaudet, 152.
- "Cupid and Psyche," by Canova, iii. 250; by Raphael, 52; story of, 27.
- , bending his Bow," by Guido, iii. 61.
- Curioni, Signor, iv. 71, 165.
- "Curiosities of Literature," iii. 187, 221, 225; extracts from the, 226.
- Curradi, Chevalier, "Mary Magdalen," iii. 43.
- Curran, John Philpot, and his metaphors, ii. 170; anecdotes of, iv. 7, 99; couplet on, i. 40; curious judgment about free admissions into the theatre, vi. 11; his adventure at Oxford with Reinagle, ii. 159; his remarks on Lord Moira, viii. 196; repartee of, ii. 244; speech alluded to, i. 282; story of the piper, iv. 14.
- , Miss, iii. 65; vi. 133.
- , William, vi. 144, 170; opinion of Moore's address to the Limerick electors, 308.
- Currie, vii. 108.
- , Colonel, iv. 103, 104.
- , Dr., iv. 38; vii. 96.
- Curry, iv. 124; "Reviews," 131.
- "Curse of Kehema, The," viii. 291.
- Curtis, vi. 6, 28.
- , Sir William, ii. 87, 227; his conundrum, 228.
- Curwen, iv. 266.
- Custine, General, iii. 100.
- Cuyp, iii. 134, 236, 278.
- Cybèle, the, vi. 296.
- "Cyclopædia," vi. 247.
- Cymbeline, iii. 83.
- "Cymon," i. 303; ii. 254.
- , and Iphigenia," ii. 245.
- "Cyprion," ii. 243.
- Czartorisky, Prince, iii. 224.
- , Princess, iii. 70.
- D.
- Dacre, Lady, iii. 349; iv. 86; v. 74, 264.
- , Lord, iv. 87, 291; v. 78.
- , Molly, vi. 94; stanzas on, 94.
- Daffin, vii. 213.
- Daguerre, iv. 4.
- D'Aguilar, Colonel, vii. 103.
- "Dainty Davie," iv. 337.
- D'Alberg, Duc, iii. 235; iv. 62.
- , Duchesse, iii. 235.
- Dalby, John, i. 119, 121, 227, 273, 274, 276, 280, 329; v. 138, 210, 211, 246, 257; letter from, to Moore, 275.
- , Mary, i. 282, 342, 346, 360; ii. 30, 35, 106, 152, 165, 166; iv. 276, 277, 279, 284; v. 197, 209, 211, 246; viii. 65, 109; letters to, from Moore, i. 337, 360; ii. 30, 34; viii. 104, 141, 152, 192.
- , the Misses, v. 257.
- Dalbys, the, v. 257.
- D'Alembert, ii. 219.
- Dalkeith House, viii. 43.
- Dalkey Island, i. 43; king of, 43.
- Dallas, iv. 253, 257.

- Dallas, Miss, viii. 69.
 Dalmeny, Lord, vii. 313.
 Dalrymple, the, iii. 61.
 Dalrymple - Hamiltons, the, iii. 94; v. 10.
 Dalton, Colonel, iv. 193.
 —, Edward T., i. 369; ii. 123; iii. 101. 103. 105. 107. 163. 243. 250. 255. 256. 263. 268. 275. 288. 303. 306. 307. 311. 312. 313. 314. 320. 329. 333; iv. 78. 83; vii. 20; viii. 97. 99. 131. 132. 166; letter from, to Moore, 19; letters to, from Moore, i. 292. 302. 304. 305. 325; ii. 7. 36. 55. 76. 79. 80. 87.
 —, Mary, ii. 170. 173. 176. 188, 189; her amiability, 190.
 —, Master G., iv. 128.
 —, Mrs. Olivia, Countess of Bective, i. 292. 303. 304. 307. 327; ii. 7. 18. 21. 22. 36. 37. 56. 57. 77. 80. 87. 88. 89; her singing alluded to by Lord Byron, 87.
 Daltons, the, ii. 123; viii. 166.
 Daly, iii. 269. 330. 335; viii. 148.
 —, Bowes, iv. 99.
 Dalys, Miss, iv. 11.
 Dalzel, "Analecta Græca Minora," vii. 160.
 Damoulin, iii. 167.
 "Danaïdes," iii. 179. 303. 341.
 Danby, v. 73; vi. 15.
 "Dance of Infant Satyrs," by Rubens, iii. 84.
 Dancing at Bermuda, i. 155; on a broken floor, iii. 213; on a Sunday night, not objectionable to Catholics, ii. 235.
 Dandy, v. 185.
 —, Lord, viii. 232.
 D'Anglas, Boissy, iii. 309.
 D'Angoulême, Duchess, viii. 191.
 Daniel, ii. 321; v. 181.
 Daniels, Miss, ii. 215.
 Danish Ambassador, the, and the proceedings of the police at his death, iii. 165.
 "Dausatrice," by Chantrey, iii. 65.
 D'Anville, iii. 131. 138; map of "Ancient Egypt," 148.
 D'Arblay, iv. 312.
 —, junr., knew "Lalla Rookh" by heart, ii. 280.
 —, Madame, v. 302; vi. 110.
 Darby, iii. 318. 319. 320. 366.
 Darlington, Lady, iv. 285.
 —, Lord, iii. 270. 271; iv. 285.
 Darnley, Lady (Countess of), ii. 324. 325. 327; iv. 161. 206.
 —, Lord (Earl of), ii. 302. 327; iv. 153. 168. 178. 206; v. 68; vi. 27. 35. 36; viii. 153.
 D'Artois, Comte, vi. 270. 347.
 Daru, "History of Venice," iii. 107; v. 124. note.
 Darwin, ii. 200. 201; iv. 102.
 —, Dr., "Phytologia," v. 102.
 Dashwood, ii. 253.
 D'Aubigny, ii. 328.
 "Daughter of Prince Metternich, as Hebe," by Sir Thomas Lawrence, iii. 57.
 "David flinging the Stone," by Bernini, iii. 64.
 —, "Sabines and Leonidas," iii. 127.
 Davidson, ii. 221; v. 321; vi. 11. 31. 55.
 Davies, ii. 159. 234; "Life of Garrick," 216. 218.
 —, Scrope, ii. 157. 158. 229. 230. 232. 233. 236. 238; iv. 27; v. 252.
 Da Vinci, Leonardo, vi. 95.
 Davis, iv., 152.
 —, Captain, ii. 164.
 Davis, Dr., iv. 247; "Celtic Researches," v. 104.
 —, Mr. and Mrs. Hart, vii. 243.
 —, Joseph, viii. 231.
 Davison, iii. 327. 330. 334. 367; iv. 54; v. 153; vi. 64. 104.
 Davoust, Marshal, iii. 328.
 Davy, Colonel, iv. 179.
 —, Lady, iii. 47. 48. 49. 50. 60. 61. 63. 66. 67. 68. 69. 70. 74. 118. 119. 120. 124. 125. 163. 236. 245. 246. 256; iv. 62. 69. 79. 82. 86. 162. 169. 171. 308. 312. 315; v. 67. 176. 177. 186. 188. 279. 297. 299. 313. 314; v. 110. 113. 187. 197; vii. 152.
 —, Sir Humphrey, ii. 113; iii. 47. 58. 64. 69. 118. 163. 346; iv. 52. 83. 106. 167. 171. 172. 206; v. 144; his discovery of the decomposition of alkalies, 263; fanciful opinion about the chamber where the Laocoon was found, iii. 50; his opinion of the negroes, iv. 172; his early life, v. 263.
 Davys, the, iii. 75. 118. 119; iv. 172. 175.
 Dawson, iii. 321. 336. 338. 340; iv. 6. 16. 19; v. 35. 182. 189.
 —, George, iii. 107. 222; v. 146; vi. 33.
 —, Rev., v. 146.
 —, William, iii. 313.
 —, Damer, Hon. George, vi. 208.
 —, Damer, Hon. Mrs., i. 119; vi. 208; viii. 70.
 —, Street Club, the, vi. 150.
 Daxon, Giles, vi. 125.
 "Day and Night," by Michael Angelo, iii. 42.
 "—— Traveller" newspapers, iii. 126.
 —, Judge, iv. 120; his conversation with O'Connell on Ireland, 118.
 —, Mr., ii. 181.
 —, Mrs., vii. 29;
 "Dead Christ," the, by Bandinelli, iii. 38; by Guido, 81; supported by Nicodemus," by Bandinelli, 37.
 Dean, iv. 103.
 "Dear Chloe, how blubbered," ii. 218. 249.
 "—— harp of my country," iv. 242.
 "—— Jessie," i. 335.
 "—— Moore, neither poet nor scholar can fail," vii. 199.
 De Barante, Madame, iii. 217. 304.
 —, Bathe, Colonel, i. 86.
 —, Begnis, Signor, v. 181.
 —, Blacas, Duc, vi. 270.
 —, Bocher, iii. 124.
 —, Bonnechose, M., vii. 42.
 —, Bouilly, Mr., vi. 328.
 —, Bouilly, Mrs., vi. 328.
 —, Bourke, M., iii. 69.
 —, Bourke, Madame, iii. 69. 70.
 Debratt, Miss, ii. 347. 348.
 Debrechts, the, ii. 342.
 De Broglie, Duchesse. See Broglie.
 —, Campos, v. 132.
 —, Cazes, Madame, iii. 306.
 —, Cazes, Mons., iii. 104. 116.
 —, Chabot, Count, viii. 69. note.
 —, Choiseul, Duc, vii. 5. note.
 Decius Mus, iii. 226.
 De Clifford, Lady, iii. 71; v. 265; viii. 140.
 —, Coigny, Madame, ii. 169. 170; iii. 6.
 Dedel, Baron, vi. 323; vii. 5. 194.
 —, Madame, vii. 194.
 Dedels, the, vii. 5.
 "Dedicator Songs," ii. 110.
 Deering, Sir E., vi. 201.

- De Flahault, Count and Countess. See Flahault.
- De Foe, Daniel, "Colonel Jack," iv. 51;
"Moll Flanders," ii. 240; "Robinson Crusoe" alluded to, i. vii.
— Genlis, Madame, iii. 214. 219.
— —, "Madlle de Clermont," iii. 160.
— Grammont, Duchesse, vii. 5. note.
— Gros, Madlle, iii. 91.
— "Iside," v. 94.
- Deism, spreading amongst the common people in Ireland, iv. 109. 111.
- Déjeuners de Rovigo, iii. 323.
- De Lancy, Lady, account of the death of her husband at Waterloo, iv. 240.
- Delany, Ennis, and Moore's Literary and Debating Society, i. 27.
— John, Mr. Moore's clerk, i. 27.
- De la Rosa, Martinez, vii. 27.
— Rue, Abbé, vii. 188.
— Vallière, Madame, iii. 231.
— Vigne, iv. 270; Casimir, vii. 42.
- Delawarr, Lord, v. 296.
- De Lessert, iii. 173. 335; Gabriel, 218.
- Delf, the, v. 252.
- Delhi, King of, story of him and his dentist, vii. 230.
"Delia," iv. 223.
- De Lieven, Madame, v. 318. 319.
— Ligne, Prince, v. 227.
- Delille embalmed and varnished, by his friend Gail, iii. 243.]
- Della Salute, iii. 25.
- De l'Orge, Duc, vii. 30.
— Lozano, Madame, viii. 29.
- Delpini, ii. 223. 251.
- Del Redentore, iii. 25.
- "Deluge, the," by Girardet, iii. 127; by Poussin, 127.
- "Delusive Dream," a song in Moore's masque, i. 39.
- De Maistre, M. Xavier, iii. 12. note.
— Mauley, Lord, viii. 20.
- Demidoff, Prince, v. 5. note; with his tutor, on a visit to Scott, 5.
- "Demonology," vi. 230.
- Demosthenes, iii. 289; iv. 215; vii. 51. 234;
"Orations," i. 34.
- Denham, John F., "Cooper's Hill," ii. 344.
—, Captain, v. 126.
- Denina, "Poeti Viventi," iii. 66; "Revolutions of Italy," 66.
- Denis, Madame, iii. 14.
—, St., iii. 134. 200.
- Denison, v. 214; vii. 69.
- Denman, Dr., anecdote of, v. 247.
—, Lord, iii. 166; iv. 62. 84. 261. 279. 282. 327; v. 101. 209; vi. 46. 47. 52. 65. 196. 212; vii. 373.
- Denmark, Princess of, iii. 104. 105. 309.
- Denny, ii. 157.
- Denon, Dominique Vivant, iii. 58. 92. 118. 142. 143. 144. 149. 150. 153. 156. 158. 165. 171. 181. 207. 214. 230. 233. 234. 238. 241. 242. 250. 258. 259. 265. 276. 288. 321. 325. 335. 351. 352. 360; his conversation with Moore on Claude Lorraine, iv. 11; his drawing of the "Sauterelle," iii. 143; his "Voyage en Egypte," 140.
- Denons, the, iv. 5.
- Dent, ii. 179.
—, Dr., epigram on, ii. 156.
- De Pauw, iii. 147; "Egypt," 131; "Researches," 138.
- "De Principio Juris Naturalis," vii. 206.
- Derby ball, the, ii. 32; races, the, 32; the public dinner at, v. 255. 256.
—, Lord (Earl of), iv. 33.
- Derbyshire, Moore's tour through, i. 301.
- De Recke, Madame, "Travels in Italy," iii. 97.
- "Der Freischütz," iv. 85. 257. 259. 262. 320.
- Dermott-Geraldine, Castle, iv. 102.
- De Rolle, Baron, vi. 347.
— Ros, Henry, iii. 106. 167. 202. 344; iv. 164; v. 150. 176. 181. 318; vi. 114. 119. 127.
—, Lady, iii. 119. 200. 224; v. 180.
—, Lord, vi. 260. 318; vii. 151.
—, the Misses, iii. 200; v. 181. 189.
- Derry, v. 35. 280.
— Hill, v. 107; vi. 244.
- Derryname Abber, vii. 56.
- Descartes, iii. 136.
- "Descent of the Normans," vii. 45; of the Princess of Wurtemberg, i. 235.
- Descriptions and authors, iii. 248.
- Desert, the claret in, iv. 129.
- "Deserter, the," vi. 137.
- De Souza, iii. 93. 107. 148; "Camoens," 105.
—, Madame, iii. 10. 98. 100. 102. 105. 110. 115. 130. 131. 138. 141. 144. 146. 147. 154. 158. 164. 170. 172. 173. 175. 192. 197. 199. 200. 214. 217. 218; "Adèle de Séanges," 98. 199.
—, Madlle., vii. 30.
— Souzas, the, iii. 111. 138. 147. 192. 305.
— Stael, Auguste, vi. 63. 232.
—, Madame, ii. 23. 167. 170. 251. 317; v. 111. 225; vi. 232; vii. 77; viii. 154.
- D'Este, Madlle., ii. 318. 333; iii. 193. 199. 205. 207. 321; iv. 185.
- Destouches, iii. 267; "The Irresolu," 267.
- De Tournon, Madlle., iii. 160.
- "Deux Gendres," iii. 322. 323.
— Jaloux," iii. 163.
- De Valois, M., ii. 270.
— Vauguyon, M., vii. 186.
- Devenagh, the, iv. 116.
- Devereux, v. 206.
—, Mrs., i. 30.
- Devices, ii. 337.
- Deville, v. 64. 63. 69. 70; vii. 106. 255; examined Moore and Sir Francis Burdett's heads, v. 64. 65; his good guesses about Bowles, 69.
- "Devil's Drive, The," vi. 47. 54.
- Devizes, ii. 153. et passim; its Penitentiary, 286.
- Devonshire, Duchess of, i. 98. 117; ii. 335; iii. 47. 48. 52. 64. 69. 71. 279; viii. 86; her passion for Cardinal Gonsalvi, iii. 137.
—, Duke of, ii. 19. 32. 60. 61. 316; iii. 114; iv. 76; v. 159. 164. 165. 168. 170. 217. 253. 273. 280. 288. 318; vi. 42. 158. 260. 283; vii. 6. 213; viii. 71. 183; instance of his taciturnity, vi. 283.
— House, ii. 312. 326; iii. 349; iv. 76; v. 288; vi. 29; viii. 156. 157.
- "Devotional Exercises," v. 258.
- De Warens, Madame, iii. 85.
- Dewes, Mrs., vii. 124.
- D'Herbelot, iv. 41.
- "Diable d'Argent," iii. 195.
- "Dialogue between a sovereign and a one-pound note," v. 50. 54.
- Diamond mines, usages in, iii. 218.
- Diary, ii. 143; iii. 3; iv. 3; v. 3; vi. 3; vii. 3; viii. 3.
- Diaz, Bernal, viii. 115. note.
- Didin, Thomas, iv. 86.

- Dibdin, Charles, his songs sung by Moore, i. 26.
 Dick, L., viii. 81.
 —, Quintin, vii. 43.
 Dickens, Charles. See Boz.
 —, Mrs., iii. 195.
 Dickinson, ii. 244; v. 158. 170; vi. 71. 197.
 "Dictionnaire de l'Académie Française," vii. 129. note.
 "Dictionary of Music," the first work to be published by Moore and Power, i. 336.
 Dido, iv. 276.
 Didon, the, vi. 296.
 "Didone," the, vi. 42.
 Didot, iii. 98. 110. 330.
 —, "Annibal," ii. 155.
 Dieppe, viii. 181.
 "Dieux à la Courtille," iii. 202.
 Diffuseness of writers who dictate to amanuensis, vi. 197.
 Di Garda, iii. 23.
 Digby, Sir Kenelm, "Mores Catholici," v. 91.
 Digden, v. 215.
 Dijon, iii. 12.
 Dillon, Abbé, iii. 100.
 —, Lady, iii. 79.
 —, Lord, iii. 39. 40. 43. 77. 78. 79; iv. 176. 180; vii. 229. 246. 247; his uncle, the original of Commodore Truncheon, vi. 41.
 —, Miss, vii. 157.
 —, Mrs., vi. 149.
 Dillons, the, iii. 42.
 Dingle, iv. 105.
 Dims, iv. 114.
 "Di Chrysostom," ii. 243.
 Diocletian, iii. 133; his baths, 49. 57.
 Dioclati, iii. 16; vi. 283; viii. 218.
 Dingenes, vii. 175. and note; lantern of, iii. 131. 145.
 Diomed, ii. 352.
 Dionysius, ii. 57.
 Diorama, the, iv. 4. 288.
 "Dirce," by Chantrey, iii. 65.
 Disraeli, Rt. Hon. Benjamin, iv. 23; v. 29; vi. 257; vii. 368.
 —, Isaac, his "Curiosities of Literature" good invalid reading, iii. 188; his view of the political character of Whigs and Tories, vii. 138.
 —, Miss, iv. 23.
 —, Mrs. iv. 23.
 Disraeli, the, iv. 26.
 Disturbances in Paris on the election law, iii. 122; symptoms of the renewal of, 140.
 "Di tanti palpiti," iii. 31.
 Dobbs, "Trade of Ireland," vi. 107.
 Doctors' Commons, ii. 133. 135.
 "Doctor Syntax," 201.
 Dodd, "Ecclesiastical History," vii. 309.
 —, James, v. 204.
 —, Miss, i. 88; Moore's earliest friend, 3. 5.
 Doddington, v. 95. 96; his MSS., 96.
 —, Bubb, his "Memoirs," v. 48.
 Dodsley, ii. 293.
 "Dodsworth, Mr.," v. 89.
 Dodwell, Mr., a great favourite with the Pope, iii. 64.
 —, Mrs., iii. 52. 64.
 Dogana, the, iii. 47.
 Dogberry, ii. 97. 98; vi. 166.
 "Dog-day Reflections," v. 194.
 Dog Latin, conversation in, between an Irish priest and a foreigner, vii. 16.
 Doherty, ii. 167. 168; v. 32. 302; vi. 109. 159; and Crampton, anecdote of, v. 300.
 —, Chief Justice, vi. 173.
 —, John, v. 29.
 Dolci, Carlo, ii. 283; iii. 29; "Adoration of the Magi," 44; "A Female Head surrounded by Flowers," 203; "An Old Man," 203; "Christ surrounded by Saints," 203; head of "Poetry," 44; "Head of St. Lucia," 44; "Madonna," 80; "Madonna and Child," 42.
 Doller, iii. 129.
 Dolomieu, Madame, iii. 203. 207. 304.
 —, Marquise de, iii. 206. 217.
 Domenichino, iii. 73. 84; "A Landscape," 127; "A Sybil," 61; "Flagellation and Martyrdom of St. Andrea," 59; "La Caccia di Diana," 60; "Martyrdom of St. Agnes," 30; "St. Cecilia," 82; "St. Sebastian," 57. 71; "The Four Cardinal Virtues," 73; "The Persecution," 81; "The Sibyl," 75.
 Domingo, St., iii. 94. 327.
 Dominicans, the, iii. 31.
 Dominick Street Chapel, vi. 146.
 Domo d'Ossola, iii. 17; viii. 185.
 Domville, Sir C., v. 209.
 "Dona nobis pacem," vii. 128.
 Donatus, a Florentine bishop, "Far westward lies an Isle of ancient fame," i. 29.
 Don Carlos, vii. 191.
 Donegal, Lady (Marchioness of), i. 81. 113. 122. 178. 180. and note, 181. 199. 200. 207. 208. 209. 210. 218. 230. 244. 252. 271. 287. 335; ii. 23. 24. 44. 69. 85. 93. 94. 100. 105. 118. 120. 125. 126. 140. 141. 181. 221. 222. 236. 259. 264. 317; iii. 148. 190. 282. 283. 344. 349; iv. 26. 27. 29. 30. 31. 42. 48. 49. 69. 70. 78. 80. 85. 96. 119. 163. 193. 256. 257. 285. 298. 299. 326. 327. 328; v. 44. 60. 65. 169. 172. 176. 263. 267. 274. 279. 292. 304. 318; vi. 11. 49. 54. 67. 68. 69. 71. 72. 74. 77. 79. 84. 89. 91. 92. 155. 209; vii. 143. 241. 279; viii. 11. 40. 60. 61. 62. 70. note, 72. 74. 75. 77. 89. 93. 134. 138. 140. 141. 154. 182. 187. 188. 190. 202. 203. 222. 226. 238. 244. 250; letters from, to Moore, i. 277; ii. 38. 71; viii. 52. 57. 77. 117. 125. 206. 256. 262; letters to, from Moore, i. 181. 209. 210. 212. 224. 235. 241. 246. 257. 262. 265. 268. 269. 286. 320. 362; ii. 3. 21. 44. 47. 70. 73. 96. 108. 112. 114. 129. 132. 137; viii. 62. 83. 113. 135.
 Donegal, Lord (Marquis of), iv. 326.
 —, Mary, ii. 113.
 Donegals, the, i. 200. 245. 313; ii. 99. 187. 261. 262. 282; iv. 23. 28. 57. 161. 164. 259. 283. 286. 299. 327; v. 65. 73. 259. 263. 271. 295. 304; vi. 11. 45; viii. 174. 175. 204. 216. 234.
 Donellan, Mr., iv. 52.
 Donelly, iv. 104.
 Donhead, v. 92.
 Donington Park, i. 75. 108. 109. 113. 114. 115. 116. 117. 118. 119. 129. 187. 218. 219. 220. 223. 224. 230. 231. 257. 273. 294. 301. 304; ii. 32. 35; v. 209. 211. 246; viii. 52. 64. 112. 113. 125. 182; Lord Moira's library at, of great use to Moore, i. xlii.
 "Don Juan," ii. 260. 266. 285; iii. 156. 251. 266. 305. 343; iv. 332; v. 212; vi. 313; vii. 349. note; conversation about the 3rd Canto, iii. 25; falling off in two of the Cantos, iv. 93; Moore's opinion of

- the 2nd Canto, ii. 329; pronounced by Hobhouse and others unfit for publication, 259.
- "Donna del Lago," iv. 72. 215.
- Donoughmore, Lord, ii. 156. 310; v. 184.
- Donovan described, i. 21; teaching Moore classics and politics, 21; Whyte's Latin usher, 20.
- Don Pedro, vi. 61; and Gordon, anecdote
of, 60.
- Doria, iii. 59; the Palazzo, 62.
- Dorfen, M., iii. 100. 330.
- D'Orsay, Comte, iv. 301; vii. 19. 46.
General, iv. 299.
- Dorset, Duke of, ii. 317; a great friend of Byron's at school, v. 186.
- "Dost thou remember," iv. 234. 236; v. 36;
a passage in, corrected, ii. 129.
- Douglas, Admiral John Erskine, i. 158.
165; ii. 29. 232. 264. 321. 331. 332. 335.
336. 337. 340; iv. 77. 83. 161. 174. 200.
205; vi. 256. 262. 296. 321; viii. 272; a le-gatee of the Duke of Queensberry, i.
249; challenged two French frigates to come out from New York and fight him,
vi. 296; his handsome offer to Moore, i.
250; his offer to Moore of the Secretaryship on the Jamaica station, ii. 29; attacked suddenly, vii. 292.
- , Archibald (Lord), v. 306; vi. 300, 301.
- , Lady, iv. 84.
- , Lady Susan, iii. 199. 249. 330. 358.
—— (Lord Glenbervie's son), i. 181,
182; iii. 105. 107. 108. 112. 117. 119. 126.
127. 142. 144. 168. 183. 189. 190. 191. 196.
210. 212. 219. 220. 223. 261. 309. 310. 312.
313. 315. 317. 321. 322. 324. 365; iv. 5. 12.
15. 16. 17. 19. 49. 206; vii. 26; and his physicians, iii. 108.
- , Sir C., iv. 80.
- , Sir John, iv. 330.
- , Marchioness of, viii. 89.
- , Miss, v. 292. 293.
- , Mrs., ii. 236; v. 255; vii. 28. 292.
- Douglases, the, iii. 193. 200. 202. 208. 209.
212. 213. 214. 260. 303. 304. 305. 313. 317.
327. 332. 336. 360. 363. 365. 366; iv. 3. 5. 7.
8. 11. 14; viii. 225.
- Dovedale, i. 361; v. 214. note; viii. 145. 152.
153. 185; the abode of geni, i. 301.
- Dover, Lady, vi. 319.
- , Lord, vi. 202. 251. 260. 319.
- Dowling, James, one of Moore's sponsors,
i. 76.
- , Matthew, i. 19.
- , Mr., i. 82.
- Downes, Lord, vi. 191.
- Downshire, Marquis of, iv. 185; vi. 27.
- Downton, iii. 233.
- Doyle, iv. 80. 252; vi. 150; vii. 43. 331;
and Provost Hutchinson, anecdote of, vi.
160.
- , Carlo, iii. 367; present from, of four volumes of French music, i. 339.
- , Colonel, iv. 192. note.
- , Dr., i. 26. 38; iv. 207; vi. 239; viii.
31; his judgment on Moore's "Travels of an Irish Gentleman in Search of a Religion," i. xxx.
- , Frank, iv. 190. 211; opinion of Moore's proceeding in connection with the Byron "Memoirs," 201.
- , Miss, ii. 95; iv. 80.
- , Sir P., iv. 61.
- , Sir Robert, vi. 160.
- , Wesley, i. 25, 26; vii. 99.
- D'Oyley, v. 91.
- Dramatic ball, the, iv. 274.
- "Dream of Home, The," vii. 243.
- Dresden, iv. 211.
- , Madonna, The," by Raphael, .
107.
- Drew, Lucy, iii. 200. 213. 255. 260. 314. 335.
354; iv. 46. 166. 285. 286. 288. 290. 293;
v. 99. 126. 317; vi. 67.
- , the Misses, iii. 326.
- Drews, the, iii. 249. 357.
- Drogheda, Catholics of, letter from their secretary to Moore, thanking him for the exposition of their wrongs in "Captain Rock," iv. 182.
- Droppmore, v. 166.
- Droce, vii. 188.
- Drummond, vii. 12. 229.
- , Lieutenant, vii. 40.
- , Miss, iv. 58. 59.
- , Mrs., iii. 325.
- , Sir William, iii. 33. 38.
- Drummonds, the, iii. 332. 333.
- Drury, Dr., v. 185. 186. 186. 190. 191. 226.
269. 296.
- , Harry, iv. 26.
- , Mrs., v. 270.
- , Rev., vii. 3:8. 339.
- , Lane Theatre, ii. 88. 117. 160. 174.
175. 229. 302. 326. 355. 357; iii. 294. 343;
iv. 22. 27. 54. 73. 77. 221. 257. 303. 308.
320; v. 119. 157; vi. 39. 40. 43. 313; vii.
22. 154. 243. 318; viii. 146; ruinous state of, 223; the fire at, and an Irishman's remark to Sheridan, iii. 216.
- Dryburgh Abbey, Sir Walter Scott's family burying place, iv. 330.
- Dryden, John, ii. 246. 254. 344; iii. 169. 272;
iv. 310; v. 49; vi. 222. 266; his "Absalom and Achitophel," vii. 18; "Aurangzebe," iv. 306; criticisms upon some of his passages, ii. 246; "Cymon," 254;
"Epistle on Painting," 317; "Juvenal," 246; "Virgil," 254; v. 50. 285.
- Dublin, i. 164. 212. et passim; night of the intended attack upon, 66.
- , Archbishop of, iv. 117; vii. 27.
- , Castle, viii. 60.
- , Club, a, referred to, i. 43.
- , College, iii. 275; viii. 91.
- , dull dinners at, viii. 63.
- "—— Evening Post, The," vii. 93;
viii. 19. 170; wish of the Prince of Wales that his letter concerning the Irish Catholics should be inserted in, i. 296.
- "—— Magazine, The," vii. 75.
- "—— Morning Register, The," vi. 168.
- "—— Packet, The," i. 118.
- "—— Penny Journal, The," viii. 94.
- "—— Register, The," vii. 49.
- "—— Review, The," vii. 309; viii. 278;
note from the author of the "Article on Thomas Moore," vii. 295.
- , Society, the, offer their librarianship to Moore, ii. 8.
- , Theatre Royal, iv. 7.
- , Trinity College, vi. 300; vii. 160.
369; viii. 26. note.
- , Union, the, vi. 305.
- Ducane, iii. 118.
- Duchessnois, iii. 263.
- , Madame, iii. 225.
- Ducie, Lady, v. 105.
- , Lord, v. 105, 106; vi. 191. 205; vii.
48. 69.
- , iii. 202.
- Dudley, Lord (Lord Dudley and Ward),

- i. 106; iv. 86, 87, 88; v. 180, 186, 187, 203. 236, 237, 302, 320; vi. 37, 59, 113, 117, 124, 187, 233, 253, 256, 259; anecdotes of, v. 203, 236, 237; his oddities, 187; Luttrell's joke on his speaking by heart, v. 320; repartee of, vi. 59.
- Duel between Lords Clonmell and Tyrwally, alluded to, v. 46; between Moore and Jeffrey, i. 197; misrepresented in the newspapers, 208; between Phipps and Starkey, alluded to, iv. 276.
- Duelling, conversation on, vi. 346.
- "Duenna," the music of, alluded to, ii. 160; iv. 251.
- Duff, Mrs., i. 118.
- Duffy, Peter, i. 96.
- Duggan, ii. 81, 126.
- Duigenan, Dr., i. 64, 227.
- Dulwich, v. 180, 191.
- Dumfries, viii. 161.
- Theatre, the, ii. 323.
- Dumont, ii. 155, 166, 168, 169; iii. 13, 14, 254, 255; iv. 224, 228; vi. 309; vii. 52.
- Dumoulin, iii. 130, 137, 147, 154, 164, 165, 170, 175, 181, 186; death of, 178.
- Dumpling, Major, ii. 161.
- Dunamase, iv. 122.
- Duncan, Lady, v. 48, 246.
- Lord, iii. 65; iv. 130, 157, 199, 273, 274, 275; v. 48, 139, 146, 234, 243, 245, 246, 299; vi. 109, 255; and the abuses of the Scotch representation, 163.
- Duncannon, Lady, ii. 310; v. 174; vi. 339.
- Lord, ii. 194, 310; iv. 290; v. 174; vi. 42, 196, 250, 338, 339; vii. 80, 181, 306.
- Dundas, Admiral, ii. 204, 224; vi. 77; vii. 55, 68, 219, 303.
- Dungannon, Lord, v. 217.
- Dunmore, Lady, i. 311; ii. 327; v. 10, 180; vi. 231, 233; vii. 241; viii. 112, 213.
- Lord, i. 311; ii. 305, 320, 324, 327, 332; v. 10, 180; vi. 231; vii. 241; viii. 112, 213.
- Dunn, i. 5; iv. 73.
- Dunning, v. 227.
- Dunsany, Lord, iii. 290, 303, 304, 305, 307, 308, 309; iv. 125.
- Dunsinane, viii. 150, 162.
- Dunville, vi. 132.
- Duomo, the, of Milan, iii. 66, 84.
- Dupin, iii. 116; vii. 32; savagely clever, iii. 320.
- Dupont, Madlle, iii. 91, 189.
- Dupuis, iii. 311; "Origine de tous les Cultes," iii. 307.
- Dupuytren, Baron, iii. 185, 186, 187.
- Durant, vi. 92.
- Duras, Duc de, iii. 336.
- Madame de, "Edouard," v. 42.
- Durazzo, Madame, iii. 174, 235, 236, 257, 266, 270, 309; iv. 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237; vii. 127.
- Mons., iv. 230, 232, 234, 235, 236, 237.
- Durer, Albert, iii. 46; vi. 78.
- Durham, Lady, vi. 40, 89, 61.
- Lord, vi. 61, 106, 192, 202, 250; vii. 24, 229.
- Durnet, J. B., iii. 234; iv. 8.
- Dutch commercial house, conclusion of a letter from a, iv. 35.
- Dutens, iv. 271; his appropriation of a tooth of Scipio's, 271; "Mémoires d'un Voyageur qui se Repose," 271.
- Duval, M., iii. 13.
- Duval, Aumary, "La Fille d'Honneur," iii. 172; "Naples," v. 201.
- Duvernay, Madlle, vi. 313.
- Dwyer, Major, v. 138.
- Dyer, George, iv. 185; reading his poetry to Dr. Graham's patients, ii. 347.
- Dyke, Miss, married to Moore, i. 252, note.
- Thomas, Moore's assumed name, iii. 279, 282, 286.
- Walk, the, iv. 106.
- Dysart, Dowager Lady (Countess of), iii. 306.
- Lord (Earl), ii. 157.

E.

- Eagle, the brass, found at Newstead Abbey, v. 249.
- Eamer, Sir John, Lord Mayor of London, i. 122.
- "Early one morning," v. 96.
- "— opinions," v. 103.
- Easthope, Sir John, vii. 151, 219, 331; Moore's arrangement with, for occasional squibs to the "Chronicle," 151.
- Eastlake, Mr. (Sir Charles), iii. 66, 74, 176.
- "Easy way with Deists," vi. 69.
- Ebel, iii. 128.
- Ebers, v. 63, 174, 266.
- Ebrington, Viscount (Earl of Fortescue), iv. 206, 256; v. 81; vi. 122, 334; vii. 65, 131, 168, 180, 298; viii. 270.
- "Ecce Homo," by Guercino, iii. 61.
- Eccles, Cuthbert, vi. 131, 170.
- "Ecclesiastical Authors, History of," vii. 32.
- Echelles, the, iii. 85.
- Eden, Hon. Miss, vi. 124; vii. 285, 286, 289, 309, 335; letter from, 309; letter to Moore about Russell, 286.
- Hon. Misses, ii. 193; iv. 263.
- Hon. Sir F., iv. 143.
- Edgcombe, Mr., vi. 325.
- Captain, R.N., ii. 269.
- Edgeworth, Major, vii. 106, 107.
- Miss, ii. 166, 169, 212, 214; iii. 127, 128, 167, 347; v. 27; vi. 187, 232; viii. 135, 159; preparing her father's "Memoirs" for the press, ii. 166, 181.
- Edinburgh, Moore's visit to, v. 6—15.
- "— Annual Register," ii. 169; iv. 49.
- "— Magazine, The," ii. 207; iii. 157.
- "— Review, The," i. 195, 199, 310; ii. 13, 14, 15, 25, 35, 39, 71, 120, 219, 261, 262; iii. 110, 130, 164, 198, 202, 235, 236, 347; iv. 48, 68, 71, 89, 94, 156, 252, 255, 261; v. 11, 34, 50, 53, 57, 70, 87, 125, 132, 142, 205, 226, 239; vi. xv., 41, 219, 226, 247, 264, 335; vii. 13, 16, 19, 31, 258; viii. 70, 71, note; 80, 89, 231; conversation on, between Moore and Constable, iv. 89; its circulation, ii. 40; viii. 80; its treatment of Earl Moira, i. 300; the sole property of Messrs. Longman, v. 125.
- Edmonston, iv. 149, 240, 242; v. 49, 206.
- Edmonton, vii. 252.
- "Edmund and Caroline," iii. 307.
- "Edouard," v. 42.
- Edwards, iv. 105; vi. 281.

- Egan, the Dublin harp maker, iii. 137.
 —, Billy, anecdote of, i. 204.
 Egeria, Grotto of, iii. 63.
 Egerton, Lady Francis, vii. 313.
 —, Mrs., vi. 50.
 Egotism of foreign writers, ii. 247.
 Egypt, books on, iii. 129; conversation on, 250.
 Egyptians, the, acquainted with the Trinity, vii. 256.
 Eichhorn, his opinion of the Gospels, iv. 270.
 Elsteddröd, the, v. 310.
 Ela, foundress of Lacock Abbey, vi. 280.
 Eldon, Lord (Earl of), i. 279; iii. 12. 220; v. 48. 203. 206. 275. 301. 302; vi. 4. 41; viii. 128; anecdote of, iii. 12; joke of, v. 203.
 "Elegant Enthusiast," ii. 197, 198.
 Elgin, Lord, iii. 77.
 —, Marbles, the, iii. 38. 44. 158.
 "Ella, Letters of," iv. 51.
 Elis, v. 265.
 Elizabeth, the Princess, ii. 100; vi. 206; viii. 203.
 —, Queen, vi. xli; vii. 298. 301. 302; her proclamation forbidding people to talk of, or describe, her person or features, vi. 33.
 Ellenborough, Lady (Countess of), viii. 191.
 —, Lord (Earl of), i. 252; ii. 154. 185. 312; iv. 35. 172. 175. 193. 195. 302; v. 42. 297; viii. 167; anecdotes of, ii. 312; iv. 302; v. 312. 297; brought into the cabinet by Sheridan, ii. 185; remark to a witness, iv. 172; saying of his, i. 288.
 Ellesmere, Lord (Earl of), 310. note.
 Ellice, Colonel, iii. 321. 326. 327; vii. 181.
 —, Mrs., iii. 317.
 Elliot, v. 224; vi. 61; vii. 240.
 —, Captain, vii. 55.
 —, Ebenezer, vii. 373.
 —, Sir Gilbert, ii. 297; iv. 91.
 Elliotson, Dr., vii. 225.
 Ellis, Agar (Viscount Clifden), ii. 265; iii. 257. 266. 326. 329; iv. 36. 80. 88. 217. 269. 293. 319. 321; v. 16. 66. 69. 70. 159. 175. 187. 208. 245. 288. 294; vi. 26. 38. 90. 95. 96. 105. 108. 114. 119. 120. 121. 125. 202. 204.
 —, Agar, Mrs. (Viscountess Clifden), iii. 106. 316. 326. 329; iv. 88. 218. 321; v. 69. 159; vi. 90. 119.
 —, Agar Coventry, iv. 172. 275.
 —, Agar George, ii. 227; iv. 144. 259; viii. 176.
 —, Henry (Sir), vii. 20. 149.
 —, Welbore, vi. 75.
 Ellison, Mr., iii. 45. 73.
 Elliston, Robert William, ii. 357; iii. 136. 138. 332. 343; iv. 253; vi. 77; proposed to Moore to write a drama on "Lalla Rookh," iii. 294.
 Elly, Mr., vii. 116.
 Elmsley, iii. 75.
 Elphinstone, vi. 46.
 Elwyn, iv. 179. 207. 271. 273. 274. 275. 277. 324. 325; v. 48. 116. 139. 140. 144. 145. 163. 164. 184. 188. 219. 220. 243. 245. 299; vi. 7. 25. 54; vii. 43.
 —, Mrs., iv. 177.
 Emerson, Mr., iii. 203; vi. 129.
 —, Captain, vii. 237.
 Emmett, Miss, v. 293.
 —, Robert, i. 48. 52. 58. 62; v. 314; vi. 120. 172. 183. 315; vii. 240. 253. 363; his letter to Miss Curran, vi. 133; his conversation with Moore, on the "Letter to the Students," 57; specimens of his eloquence, i. 47; his delicacy with respect to Moore and the United Irish Societies, 58; his intimacy with Moore, 61; his talents, 45; passage in his speech corrected, vi. 172; strength and resolution on his trial alluded to, 172.
 Emmett, Temple, vi. 132. 133. 134.
 —, Thomas Addis, his letters, in "The Press," signed "Montanus," i. 55; one of the originators of "The Press," 55.
 Empson, vi. 57; vii. 315.
 —, Mrs., vii. 315.
 "Encyclopædia Britannica, The," ii. 272; iii. 150; iv. 255. 277; v. 5; vii. 83.
 —, of Biblical Literature," vii. 369.
 " — Poetique," iii. 255.
 "Endymion," by Canova, iii. 56.
 England, Church of, conversation on the religion of the, iv. 150.
 —, history of, vi. 16. 108. 253; vii. 3. 11. 82. 304.
 —, people of, their "king-led" feelings, vi. 189.
 —, reputation of, sunk on the Continent, iv. 152.
 Englefield, Sir Henry, ii. 332; vii. 241.
 "English Bards and Scotch Reviewers," i. 276; iv. 219. note.
 —, church, the, ii. 181.
 —, direction, an, written by a foreigner, v. 131.
 —, language, the, in English schools, i. 21.
 —, literary impostors, i. 41. 42.
 —, opera, the, ii. 163; iv. 318.
 —, people conversing in bad French, ridiculous, iii. 174.
 " — Poetry, a general review of," viii. 177.
 " — Rogue," the, ii. 240. 258.
 —, verse, conversations on, between Moore and Crowe, ii. 177.
 "Englishman, The," ii. 295. 312; in Paris, the, ii. 239. 240.
 Ennis, Father, Moore's Italian master, i. 29; his solution of a riddle, i. 29.
 Enniskilleners, welcome of, by an old woman, iii. 291.
 Ennismore, Lady, ii. 333. 354; v. 63.
 —, Lord, v. 311.
 Entellus, ii. 254.
 Enthusiasm excited by seclusion from the world, vii. 117.
 Epaminondas, iii. 25.
 Ephori, the, vi. 220.
 "Epicurean, The," ii. 224; iii. 131; v. 161. 162. 166. 179. 183. 184. 187. 188. 197. 200. 202. 208. 215. 259. 272. 318; vii. 182. 183. 261; opinions of, v. 187. 188. 200. 215; story of, iii. 132.
 Epigrams by —, iv. 102. 241; v. 94; vii. 5. 7; Lord Byron, iii. 170. 197; Jekyll, ii. 149; Lord Holland, iii. 5. 295; vii. 282; Marquis of Lansdowne, iv. 147; on Dr. Dent, ii. 156; le Duc de Fitzjames, v. 117; Philemon Holland, iv. 304; Francis (Lord) Jeffrey, vii. 367; Daniel O'Connell and another, iv. 116; Lord Rockingham, vi. 80; Judge Payne, viii. 6.

- "Epistle from Captain Rock to Lord Lyndhurst," remarks on, vii. 161.
 "Epistle from Tom Cribb," ii. 81.
 Epitaph by Scrope Davies, v. 252; containing poetry, piety, and politeness, vi. 101; on Addington, v. 140; on Louth's daughter, 90; on John Shaw, i. 222; on a man who was run over by an omnibus, by Luttrell, vii. 85; on a man who was very fond of oysters, v. 90.
 Epitaphs, conversation on, v. 139.
 Erasmus, ii. 156; iii. 15. 272; v. 239; vi. 78. 293; vii. 7. 264, 265, 369; "Adagia," ii. 148; "Codex Britannicus," vii. 369; "From Erasmus on Earth to Cicero in the Shades," 152, 153.
 Erche, Jasper, i. 136.
 Ercolano, Principe, iii. 32.
 Erie, Lake, i. 171.
 "Erin, the Tear," v. 36.
 Erlstoke Park, v. 195.
 Ermenonville, iii. 134. 136.
 Errington, the supposed witness of the marriage of the Prince of Wales and Miss Fitzherbert, iv. 309.
 Errol, Lord (Earl of), vii. 30. 313.
 Erskine, Henry (Lord), i. 250; ii. 85. note, 204. 287. 316; iii. 345. 356; iv. 25. 136; v. 102. 138. 150. 151; vi. 105. 182. 293. 349. 250; vii. 12. 25. 150. 271; viii. 132; account of his strange history, by Jekyll, vi. 74—78; and his leeches, anecdote of, vi. 243; and his 20,000*w.* worth of stock, 78; anecdote of, 349; consulted Fox as to what kind of coat he should wear on his first speech in the House, iv. 136; epigram on Sir Walter Scott, ii. 85. note; his ignorance of French, vii. 12; pun on the devil, v. 150; speech in defence of Peter Pindar, 150; "Speeches," 43. 54; "The Muses and Graces will just make a Jury," 102; trick on, by Jekyll, and his revenge, vi. 76; verses on Terry, v. 138.
 ———, Miss, vii. 150.
 Esmond, Sir T., vi. 11.
 Esposizione di Inventiones, the, iii. 28.
 "Espriella Letters," ii. 150.
 "Essay on Music," iv. 70.
 ——— on the Picturesque," v. 96.
 Essex, Earl of, curious letter of, to Queen Elizabeth, vii. 302.
 ———, Lady (Countess of), viii. 28.
 ———, Lord (Earl of), iii. 118. 229. 232. 233. 238. 343; iv. 58. 62. 69. 70. 72. 78. 79. 85. 163. 164. 166. 173. 183. 205. 304. 305. 308. 309. 310; v. 179. 180. 181. 182. 273. 274. 283. 288; vi. 42. 44. 53. 61. 79. 83. 86. 88. 89. 91. 97. 108. 111. 112. 115. 116. 124. 126. 159. 161. 197. 252. 254. 263. 323. 326. 349; vii. 22. 23. 40. 73. 144. 156. 216.
 Estcourt, Mr., ii. 210. 216.
 ———, Mrs., ii. 353.
 Este, Parson, ii. 310.
 Esterhazy, Prince, iv. 85. 250; v. 279; his income, iii. 19.
 ——— jewels, the way they are accumulated, iii. 19.
 "Esther," by Guercino, iii. 73.
 Esto Perpetua, ii. 298.
 "Eternal Father," the, by Bandinelli, iii. 38; image of the, by Raphael, 55.
 Etienne, iii. 320; and his plagiary of the "Deux Gendres," 322; censor of the press in Napoleon's time, 323.
 Ettrick, iv. 336; v. 4.
 "Etudes Historiques," vii. 246.
 Etymologies, strange, iii. 237.
 "Euclid," iii. 241.
 Eugene, iii. 21.
 Eumelian Club, the, v. 126.
 Europe, Sovereigns of, ii. 275.
 ———, views of, iii. 65.
 "European Magazine," the, ii. 258; iv. 164.
 Euripides, "Alcestes," ii. 291.
 "Euryanthe," iv. 262.
 Euston, Lord, vi. 113.
 "Evadne," dedicated by Shiel to Moore, ii. 336.
 Evans, v. 142. 193; vi. 255; vii. 44.
 Eve, statue of, in the church of the Virgin-presso-san Celso, iii. 22.
 "Eveleen's Bower," v. 106; vi. 333; vii. 352.
 Evelyn, John, vii. 167; "Diary," ii. 284; very interesting, 274.
 "Evening Bells," iii. 11. 195.
 "—— Hymn," iv. 148.
 "—— Mail, The," v. 37.
 "—— Post, The," iv. 125; v. 34; vi. 133. 148.
 Evenings in Greece, vi. 179.
 "Evêque de Lombaz," vii. 220.
 Everett, vii. 312. 348.
 "Every Man in his Humour," iv. 331.
 Evesham, vii. 301.
 Evil Genii destroyed by Crowe, ii. 202.
 Evremond, St., iii. 177.
 Ewart, v. 160.
 Ewing, Dr., v. 221.
 Exaggeration of travellers, iii. 34.
 "Examiner, The," i. 337. 362; ii. 108. 183. 253. 255. 281. 321. 339; iii. 169. 224; v. 153. 183; vii. 46. 59. 180; viii. 121. 212. 235.
 "——, The Literary," iv. 98.
 Excellmans, iii. 325.
 Execrable psalm-singing, ii. 156.
 Exeter, ii. 195.
 ———, Dean of, i. 343.
 ———, Lord (Marquis of), iii. 249.
 Exhibition of the Royal Academy, ii. 309, 310. 311. 349. 351; v. 63. 65; vi. 45.
 "Exile and Poor Soldier," iii. 292.
 Exmouth, Lord, iv. 174.
 Exposition des Produits de l'Industrie, iii. 8. 11.
 "Expostulation to Lord King," v. 52.
 Extempore oratory, vii. 43.
 Extract, from Moore's Journal respecting the Niagara Falls, i. 171; from the "Curiosities of Literature," iii. 221. 226; the Diary of Sir Edward Bayntun, vii. 212.
 Extraordinary exhibition, iii. 113.
 Eynard, Mons., iii. 16; vi. 179.
 ———, Madame, v. 179.

F.

- Fabbroni, iii. 274.
 Faber, vii. 21.
 ———, Peter, ii. 236.
 ———, Tanaquil, viii. 61.
 "Fabliaux," vi. 287.
 Fagging, iv. 317.
 Fairfax, iii. 187.
 Falck, iv. 164; v. 262. 319; vi. 46; vii. 194.
 ———, Mrs., v. 319.
 Falcks, the, v. 318. 320.

- Falkland, Lord, iii. 221.
 Falkner, vii. 253, 254.
 ———, Rev., ii. 275; iv. 140. 247. 250.
 ———, Mrs., ii. 275; iv. 140. 247. 250.
 Falmouth, Lord, v. 312.
 Falstaff, conuodrum on, iii. 354.
 Fancourt, Mrs., i. 116. 122.
 Faraday, Robert, vii. 323.
 Farleigh, vi. 329, 330.
 Farley, iv. 132; v. 98. 144. 205; vi. 163. 219;
 vii. 28. 59. 91, 92.
 ———, Castle, vii. 77.
 Farnborough, Lord, vi. 54. 119.
 Farnese Palace, the, iii. 51.
 Farnesian Hercules, the, iii. 51.
 Farnesina, the, iii. 52.
 Farnham, Lord, ii. 301; iv. 123.
 Farney Abbey, iv. 178.
 Farquhar, Lady, iv. 62. 69, 70. 72; v. 63.
 65.
 ———, Sir J., iv. 73.
 ———, Sir Thomas, iv. 165.
 ———, Sir Walter, iii. 284; iv. 235. 316;
 anecdote of, 247.
 Farrance, ii. 137; viii. 227.
 Farrel, Miss, vii. 106.
 Farren, William, his first appearance, excellence, and success, ii. 161.
 Fathers, the, translation from, ii. 26. 71;
 viii. 188. 211.
 Faulkner, Lady, iv. 299.
 ———, Sir A., iv. 299.
 "Faust," vi. 314; vii. 173.
 Faux Guyon, Comte de, iv. 303.
 Fawcett, iii. 268.
 Fawkenner, Misses, i. 238; viii. 183.
 Fawkes, Mr., ii. 308.
 Fay, Leontini, iii. 276.
 Fazakerley, ii. 183; iii. 219. 256; iv. 310.
 321, 322; v. 150. 221, 222. 227. 301; vi.
 38. 114. 196. 319.
 ———, Mrs., iv. 321, 322; v. 221; vi.
 38. 114.
 Feale, the, iv. 120.
 Fearon, his conversation with Moore, on the aristocratic feeling in America, vii.
 134; his "Sketches of American Life,"
 ii. 242.
 Feinagle, Professor, ii. 3.
 Felix, Minucius, v. 144.
 Fellowes, Alfred, v. 246, 247.
 ———, John, iv. 132; v. 211, 212. 214.
 246. 250. 255. 258; vi. 127.
 ———, Mrs. John, v. 213, 214. 246. 248.
 250. 255. 258; vi. 127.
 Felton, vii. 15.
 Feltre, Duke of, iii. 234.
 Fenelon and Richelieu, anecdote of, vi. 80.
 Fenwick, Mrs., iv. 321.
 ———, Rev., iv. 243. 321.
 Ferdinand of Spain, popular with the lower orders of peasants, iii. 39.
 "Ferdinando Cortez," iii. 307. 311. 361.
 Ferguson, Colonel (General Sir Ronald Craufurd), iv. 337. 342; vi. 42. 55; vii.
 143.
 ———, Lady, iv. 337.
 ———, Mrs., iv. 339, 340. 342; vii. 7.
 ———, Sir Adam, iv. 337. 339, 340. 312;
 vii. 7, 8.
 ———, the Misses, iv. 339.
 "Fernando Cortez," iii. 7.
 Ferney, iii. 13, 14; vii. 185.
 Ferrai, and Moore, competitors for the classical premium, i. 35.
 Ferrara's, ii. 314.
 Ferrara, iii. 34; viii. 187.
 ———, University library, very fine, iii. 29.
 Fesch, Cardinal, iii. 59. 66; his pictures,
 69, 70.
 Fête at Boyle Farm, described, v. 181.
 "Feudal Dignities," vii. 330.
 Fevre de la Bodèrie, vii. 368.
 Feydeau, the, iii. 8. 105. 119, 120. 163. 197.
 255. 307. 327. 336; iv. 7.
 Fiancavelli, "John the Baptist," iii. 43.
 Fiddlefred, King, vi. 252.
 Fidelis, Cassandra, vii. 17.
 Fielding, Captain, ii. 241.
 ———, Caroline (Countess of Mount-Edgumbe), v. 243; vi. 18. 27. 42; her marriage to Lord Valletort, at Bowood, alluded to, 237; furnishes designs for a volume of Legends for Moore, v. 274.
 ———, Horatio, vi. 281; vii. 216. 248; ii.
 208. 281. et passim; death of, vii. 199;
 his "Journey into the next World," iv.
 250.
 ———, Lady Elizabeth, iii. 96, 97. et passim; her kindness to Mrs. Moore, v.
 238; letter from to Mrs. Moore, vii. 216.
 Fiere-maçon, Duchesse de, iii. 310.
 Fiesole, iii. 36.
 Fife, Lord, iii. 273. 307. 311, 312. 314; v. 188.
 "Figaro," ii. 337; iv. 85.
 "—— del' Aria," iv. 87.
 "—— quâ," iv. 169.
 "Fighting Gladiator," the, iii. 59.
 Filicaja ordered to be arrested, after he had been dead above 200 years, iii. 183.
 Fincastles, the, viii. 67. 191.
 Fingall, Lord, v. 62; iii. 290; vi. 202.
 Fingal's Cave, viii. 161.
 Finland, i. 249.
 "—— Air," i. 136; ii. 212.
 Finlay, vii. 145. 232. 299.
 Finlays, the, vii. 232.
 Floridespina, v. 176.
 Fire of London, the, ii. 274.
 "—— Worshippers, The," v. 29; vii. 365,
 366; preferred by Byron, l. xxv; translated in Poland, in a "Polish Sense," vii.
 196.
 Firminger, Dr., vii. 252.
 Fiseole, iii. 79.
 Fishamble Street Theatre, row at the, vi.
 128.
 Fisher, iv. 149. 239; vi. 125. 165.
 ———, Miss, iv. 239; v. 219. 239; vi. 165;
 vii. 218.
 ———, Mrs., iii. 271; iv. 239. 251; vi. 165.
 Fitzclarence, Colonel, iii. 84.
 ———, Lord Frederick, vi. 208.
 ———, Miss, v. 189. 269.
 Fitzgerald, Dr., author of "The Academic Sportsman," i. 35.
 ———, General, iii. 90. 107.
 ———, George R., his execution, v.
 141.
 ———, Lady Charlotte, ii. 32. 152. 157.
note, 279, 280; iii. 7, 9, 10. 87. 97. 103.
 107.
 ———, Lady Edward, vi. 138. 240.
 ———, Lady Isabella, viii. 69.
 ———, Lady Robert, iii. 199.
 ———, Lord, vii. 331.
 ———, Lord Edward, character of, read to Moore, from Lord Holland's
 "Account of his Own Times," vi. 120;
 description of his seizure by Major Sirr, 134; his manner of training the people with the bow and arrow, 144; in-

- justice of the attainder against him, ii. 333; interesting letters connected with his last moments, in the papers of Henry de Ros, vi. 119; "Life of," i. xxix; vi. 154. 156. 159. 164. 178. 179. 184. 194. 195. 208. 211. 215. 218. 221. 226. 234. 250; vii. 58. 105; manner of his escape, vi. 137; Mrs. Dillon's enthusiasm when talking of him, 149; notes addressed to his family by Dowling, referred to, i. 19.
- Fitzgerald, Henry, iii. 106. 119. 316; returned for Dublin, i. 13. note.
- , Robert, iii. 106. 309; vi. 54.
- , Maurice, i. 122; v. 295; vii. 92.
- , Mrs., v. 327; vii. 41.
- , Vesey, vi. 84. 100.
- Fitzgeralds, the, ii. 157. 281. 298. 299. 300.
- Fitzgibbon, i. 64.
- Fitzharris, Lady, vii. 176.
- , Lord, iv. 158; vi. 187; vii. 176.
- Fitzherbert, Lady, i. 98. 101. 111. 359; ii. 65; iii. 94. 106. 149. 201. 271. 273; iv. 261. 293. 294. 309. 310.
- , Sir Henry, i. 359; ii. 50; iii. 201. 270. 271. 273. 335; vii. 123.
- Fitzjames, le Duc de, epigram on, v. 117.
- Fitzmaurice, Henry, vi. 6. 238; vii. 206. 215. 226.
- Fitzpatrick, General, ii. 304. 312; v. 39; epigram by, ii. 155; his speech about Lafayette, vi. 92.
- , the Ladies, vi. 41.
- Fitzsimon, vi. 135; vii. 38. 56.
- , Mrs., vi. 141; vii. 235.
- Fitzwilliam, Lord (Earl), iii. 69; iv. 78. 209. 217. 268; v. 264; vi. 3. 314.
- , Museum, the, vii. 345.
- "Flagellation and Martyrdom of St. Andrea," by Domenichino, iii. 59; by Guido, 59.
- Flahault, Count de, sent by Napoleon during the Hundred Days to persuade Maria Louisa to join him, iii. 98. et passim.
- , Countess de, and the Princess Charlotte, iii. 112. et passim; her hotel in Paris, vii. 186.
- Flaherty, Tim, and Moore, vii. 321.
- Fleming, v. 315.
- , Mrs., iv. 290.
- Fletcher, Judge, anecdote of, iv. 6.
- , (Lord Byron's valet), ii. 298; v. 11. 248. 268. 303.
- Fleury, "Des Mœurs des Israélites," iii. 148.
- Flood, Lady, viii. 38.
- , Miss, viii. 38.
- , Sir Frederick, ii. 68; viii. 31. 148.
- "Flora," iii. 51. 59.
- , "Flora et Zephyr," iii. 8. 154.
- Florence, iii. 33. 35. 36. 40. 46. 53. 64. 75. 77. 82. 171. 206; v. 217; vi. 52. 84. note; viii. 187.
- , the Duomo of, Chantrey's opinion of, iii. 77.
- "——," ii. 257.
- , Macarthy, ii. 255. 267.
- Florentine republic, iii. 39. and note, 40.
- Fodor, iii. 156. 312.
- , Madame, iii. 278. 330. 332.
- Foley, Lady Lucy, iii. 365.
- , Lord, vi. 161.
- Folkestone, Lord, vii. 168.
- Follet, Mr. (Sir William Webb), vi. 89.
- Fonblanque, vii. 46. 59. 151. 180. 280. 315.
- Fontana, iii. 274.
- , di Trevi, the, iii. 52.
- Fontainebleau, iii. 12. 86. 87. 238.
- Fontenay, Mons., iii. 39.
- Fontenelle, vi. 310.
- Fontenoy, iii. 86.
- Fonthill, ii. 193; iv. 131. 143. 145. 234. 235; v. 195. 196.
- , Abbey, iii. 296; v. 93; sale at, iv. 143.
- Foot, Samuel, ii. 313; iii. 254; v. 44; "Sir Matthew Mite," iv. 36; his witticisms, 80; v. 118.
- , Miss, iii. 293. 294; iv. 22. 53. 261.
- Forbes, Hon. Hastings, viii. 197. note.
- , Lady Adelaide, iii. 8. 11. 145. 159. 171. 207. 251.
- , Lord, i. 111. 119. 125; ii. 231. 301. 302; iii. 171. 241. 251. 367; vi. 173. 174. 175; vii. 43.
- Ford, Mr. Mitchell, ii. 288. 289.
- Forbin, Count, iii. 88. 235. 258. 306.
- Foreign physicians, strange practice of, iv. 270.
- "—— Review, The," v. 205. 206.
- , translators, ii. 247.
- , writers, their egotism, ii. 247.
- Foresters', the, iv. 7.
- Forêt d'Hermstadt, iii. 339.
- "Forget-me-not," v. 133. 174.
- "Forlorn," ii. 51.
- "Fornarina, the," iii. 41. 64; by Raffaele, 82.
- Forres, viii. 162.
- Forster, iii. 186. 194. 221. 279. 304. 306. 308. 359. 360. 362. 365; "Anacreon," 176.
- , Emma, iii. 213. 223. 363.
- , Miss, iii. 184. 189. 219. 221. 222.
- , Mrs., iii. 176. 186. 211. 213. 254. 264. 355.
- Forsters, the, iii. 169. 170. 175. 189. 193. 195. 199. 200. 208. 209. 250. 345. 346. 356.
- Forsyth, iii. 18. 31. 35. 41. 46. 50. 52. 57. 60; v. 225; his "Italy," iii. 219.
- Fortescue, iii. 75; vii. 280.
- , George, iv. 142. 291; v. 75. 158. 179. 292.
- , Lady Mary, iii. 70. 71. 73. 74; vi. 44.
- , Lord (Earl), iii. 44. 70. 71; iv. 206. 291; v. 76; vii. 299. 301; his rapture with the cascade of Terni, iii. 66.
- Forth, the, iv. 291; v. 6. 7.
- "Fortune may frown," alluded to, i. 318.
- Forty shilling freeholds the curse of Ireland, iv. 104.
- "—— Thieves, The," iii. 342; skeleton of it, by Sheridan, ii. 355.
- Forum, the, iii. 49.
- Foscolo, Ugo, ii. 284; iii. 293. 329; vi. 83; lines on "Machiavel and Petrarch," 83.
- Foster, Mr., i. 81; v. 227. note.
- , Emma, iv. 12.
- , Lady Elizabeth, vii. 374.
- , John, vi. 28.
- Fouché, iv. 340.
- Fouquet, Baron, "Ondine," iv. 4.
- "Four Ages," the, iii. 20.
- "—— Cardinal Virtues, The," by Domenichino, iii. 73.
- "—— Masters, The," annals of, vii. 238.
- Fouriel, "Chants Populaires de la Grèce," iv. 246.
- Fourrier, iii. 144. 146. 147. 148. 150. 170. 173.
- Fowler, Dr., iv. 268; v. 9. 287; vii. 304.
- , Mrs., iv. 268; vi. 287; vii. 304.

- Fox, Right Hon. Charles James, and Pitt, their generous feelings towards each other, vi. 35; authorised by the Prince of Wales to contradict his marriage, iv. 227; caricatures of, alluded to by himself, vi. 100; charade by, ii. 283; had learned more from Burke's conversation than from all the books he ever read, vi. x; his coalitions defended by Lord Lansdowne, ii. 292; his opinion that it was lucky Burke and Wyndham sided against the French Revolution, iv. 265; his "History," ii. 149; iv. 74; v. 306; "James II.," iv. 255; memoranda respecting him, v. 177; his policy questioned by Moore, i. xxi; his speeches, ii. 316.
- , Mrs. Charles, ii. 304. 311; v. 113. 179. 240. 243.
- , Lady Charlotte, ii. 283.
- , Lady Georgiana, iii. 284.
- , General, ii. 183; iii. 241. 269; iv. 172; vi. 85, 103; vii. 10.
- , Lady Mary, iv. 52. 226; v. 135, 136. 181; vi. 103. 315; vii. 3. 168.
- , Miss, ii. 311; iv. 30. 33. 53. 151. 153. 256. 303; v. 135, 136. 240. 243; vi. 5. 163. 221. 293. 315; vii. 166. 215. 267. 361.
- , Sir Stephen, v. 231.
- , Club, the, ii. 227.
- Foxes, the, iii. 261; v. 240.
- Foy, General, iii. 118.
- Fracastorius nearly equal to Virgil, ii. 147.
- Frampton, Lady Harriet, iv. 137. 140.
- France, Moore's visit to, ii. 4. et seq.
- , College de, iii. 338.
- , "History of," iii. 219.
- , "Littéraire," vii. 32.
- Franceschini, "Cupid," iii. 43.
- Francis I., iii. 336.
- , Lady, supposed to have concealed Sir P. Francis's "Historical Memoir," ii. 261.
- , Sir Philip, ii. 191; vi. 65, 66; viii. 119; appropriation of a joke of, by Sheridan, ii. 225; evidence that he and Junius were one and the same person, vi. 65; ii. 188; "Historical Memoir," 126.
- Franconi's, iii. 198. 212. 303. 312. 335.
- Franklin, Dr., v. 312.
- Franks, iv. 100. 102.
- Frankes, the, vi. 149.
- Frascati, iii. 52. 335.
- Frazer, v. 134.
- Frederica, Duchess of York, ii. 184.
- Frederick of Prussia, vi. 61; anecdotes of, v. 224; his death, and Ingerhouz, iii. 181.
- "Free Enquiry," v. 105.
- Freeling, Sir F., v. 269.
- "Freeman's Journal, The," ii. 154; vi. 176. 249; vii. 93; Moore's opinions expressed to the editor, on Repeal, vi. 174.
- Freemason's Tavern, the, vi. 81; vii. 226. 319.
- Freke, Nanny, v. 93.
- French, Colonel, v. 168. 217.
- , Frederick, viii. 49.
- , Miss, vii. 29.
- , Mrs., vii. 29.
- , Consul, the, iv. 109.
- , emigrant Bishop, i. 73.
- , Language, the, conversation on, vii. 128.
- , living, perfect idea of, iii. 322.
- French officer, a, his remark on British troops, vi. 136.
- , Opera, the, iii. 142. 169. 182. 218. 227. 276. 303. 307. 327. 333.
- , punning, specimens of, iii. 174.
- , recitative, iii. 225.
- , Revolution, the, iv. 265; believed by Frenchmen to have been brought about by English gold and the Duke of Orleans, iii. 215.
- , translators and translations, ii. 162.
- , words, conversation on their meaning, iv. 75.
- Frere, Hookham, iii. 261; iv. 92. 302; v. 102; vi. 345; viii. 153; bon-mot of, vi. 345; "Beppo and Whistcraft," iv. 51; decided against the publication of "Don Juan," ii. 263, 264.
- , Mrs., ii. 145. 318.
- , "Frères Féroces," iii. 335.
- Freshford, vi. 242. 274. 335; vii. 125. 254.
- Fresnoy, "Art of Painting," iii. 97.
- "Fridolin," iv. 226.
- "Friend of my soul," viii. 80. 112.
- , The, viii. 157. note.
- Friere, Mrs., ii. 145. 327.
- Frost, John, letter from Lord Holland to Miss Fox, relating to him, vii. 267.
- "Fudge Family, The," iii. 149. 160.
- , Family, The, in Italy," iii. 96. 103. 106.
- "Fudges, The," ii. 131. 134. 136. 221. 230., 236; iii. 190; vi. 96. 98; viii. 229. 232. 233.
- , The, in England," vii. 273.
- Fullarton, Mr., v. 11.
- , Mrs., v. 11.
- Fuller, General, iii. 253.
- , Miss, ii. 282.
- , Mrs., iii. 142; iv. 40.
- Funchal, Count, iii. 218. 219. 274.
- Funding speculation, curious circumstance connected with the, v. 131.
- Furness, Miss, iv. 45. 68. 98. 280. 303. 312, 313.
- Fuseli, v. 151.
- Fusina, iii. 24.
- Fyler, Mrs., iii. 195.

G.

- "Gabrielle Charmante," iii. 332.
- , de Verzy," iii. 34.
- Gaby, Farmer, iv. 63. 280; v. 101.
- Gage, Lady, v. 297.
- , Lord, v. 297.
- Gail, iii. 248.
- , "Anacreon," iii. 100.
- Gainsborough, Thomas, ii. 174; v. 195.
- "Galatea," by Raphael, iii. 52.
- "Galatée," by Count Sommariva, iii. 146.
- Gala Water, iv. 336.
- Galignani, iii. 8. 10. 11. et passim.
- , "Byron," v. 304; edition of Moore's works, iii. 8; on the curiosities of Florence, 35.
- , jun., iii. 209.
- Galileo, v. 226; viii. 278; bust of, by Leopold, iii. 23; portrait of, v. 210.
- Galitzin, Prince, and Moore's poems, iii. 93; his account of the present and future prospects of Spain, alluded to, 145.
- Gall, iii. 245.
- Gallatin, iv. 11.
- Galli, iii. 330; iv. 11.

- Gallienus, iii. 23, 24.
 Gallois, M., iii. 8, 11, 91, 98, 104, 131, 138, 147, 148, 155, 170, 172, 173, 186, 197, 199, 249, 255, 256, 261, 274, 305, 352; v. 98, 124, 126, 132, 156.
 Galt, John, iii. 343, 345; brought a piece of Moore's tree from Lake Ontario, vi. 126; his "Life of Byron," 146.
 Galway, Mrs., iv. 114; vi. 281.
 Gamba, v. 238.
 Gambia, Count, iv. 216; v. 76.
 "Gamblers, The," by Caravaggio, iii. 68.
 "Ganymede," the, iii. 41.
 "— and the Eagle," by Thorwaldsen, iii. 63.
 Garcia, iii. 195, 204; iv. 217, 290.
 Garge, Count de la, translated Moore's "Melodies" into French, iv. 205.
 Garde, M. la, wrote a "Sonata," iv. 205.
 Gardiner, William, i. 98, 283; ii. 6, note; letter to, from Moore, i. 296, 302; ii. 5, 102; viii. 109.
 —, Hon. Mrs., i. 96.
 Garnerin, Mdle., iii. 124, 155, 159.
 —, Madame, her ascent in a balloon, iii. 155, 159.
 Garrick, David, ii. 269, 310, 311; iii. 254; iv. 222; v. 66, 99; vi. 111; "between Tragedy and Comedy," picture of, by Sir J. Reynolds, iv. 319; "Life of," ii. 216; iv. 319; "The Prophecy," v. 146.
 Garrow, ii. 105.
 Garry, vi. 142.
 Garthland, ii. 225.
 Gas-lights, inconvenient for gentlemen incog, iii. 282.
 "Gastronome sans Argent," iii. 208.
 Gattie, Mr., iv. 173, 175.
 —, Mrs., iv. 173.
 Gavin, Miss, ii. 176.
 Gay, vi. 323.
 —, Madame Sophia, introduced to Moore, iii. 325.
 Gayton, Miss, ii. 181.
 "Gazette, The Literary," iv. 31, 65, 167, 186; v. 182, 291, 292.
 Gazettes, the German, iv. 268.
 "Gazza Ladra," iii. 317, 323; v. 152.
 Gell, Sir William, iii. 137; joke by, on the "Æolic dialect," 171.
 Genesee country, i. 171.
 Geneva, Lake of, iii. 13; viii. 185; library of, iii. 15; panorama of, v. 178; standing army of, the largest in proportion, iii. 14.
 "Genevieve," vii. 73.
 "Genius of the Vatican, The," iii. 55, 70.
 Genlis, Madame de, iii. 214, 240, 341; iv. 57, 234; her conversation with Moore, iii. 304; her voluminous extracts during a course of English reading, 305; interest in her life arising from profuse details, i. vi.
 Gennaro, "Sibilla," iii. 29.
 Genoa, iii. 6, 36, 47, 58; iv. 220; v. 196, 233, 238; vi. 312; viii. 67.
 Gent, Miss, v. 179, 180; vi. 214, 221.
 —, Mrs., iii. 317, 333, 337; vi. 214.
 —, Mrs. Gold, iii. 326; vi. 214.
 "Gentleman's Magazine, The," iv. 43.
 Gentlemen of the press, the, their position alluded to by Lord Holland, vi. 199.
 Gentz, iv. 152.
 Geoffrey of Monmouth, vii. 174.
 George, M., iii. 100.
 —, Mrs., vi. 332.
 —, i. ii. 179; and Sir R. Walpole governed England by bad Latin, 251.
 —, II., iv. 250; viii. 75.
 George III., iv. 67, 218; "History of," ii. 277; illness of, i. 244; insincerity of, iii. 269; story of, iv. 250; caricature of, "with Napoleon on his hand," vi. 335.
 —, IV., iii. 270; iv. 193; vii. 39, 57, 58, 209; viii. 289; his characteristics, vi. 55, 96; by Lawrence, iii. 349; his hostility to the Catholic Question, v. 88; his visit to Ireland, iii. 276, 298; his manner of receiving different people, vi. 55; his opposition dinner at Brighton, iii. 229; quoted lines of Moore's to Scott, vi. 96, note; uncertainty about the proofs of his marriage with Miss Fitzherbert, iv. 293; wicked joke on, iii. 296; his death, vi. 123.
 Georges, Madame, iii. 337.
 Geraghty, deputed to answer Emmett's speeches, i. 51.
 Gerard, iii. 258, 309; "Corinne," 225, 226; "Henry IV.," 265.
 —, Madame, iii. 226.
 Germain, St., iii. 231, 273; Church of, 334.
 Germaine, Lord George, ii. 312.
 German Gazettes, the, iv. 268.
 "Germanic Empire, The," vii. 67.
 "Germanicus," iii. 63.
 Gesenius, vii. 31; "History of the Jews," vi. 226.
 Gesner, "Isagoge," ii. 149.
 "Ghentz, head of," by Sir Thomas Lawrence, iii. 57.
 "Ghost of Miltiades, The," v. 282.
 —, stories, iv. 134, 306, 337; v. 283, 286; on the authority of Sir Robert Peel, vi. 14.
 Giambellini, iii. 72, 265.
 Giant's Causeway, the, viii. 161.
 "Giaour, The," ii. 23; viii. 153; foundation of the story of, v. 265; story of the girl in, iv. 221; how suggested, iii. 188.
 Gibbon, Edward, his "History," v. 130; lost his English by living among foreigners, ii. 274; "Mémoire Justificatif," vi. 283; viii. 46, 48; anecdote of, vii. 374.
 Gibbons, Miss, iii. 79.
 Gibbs, Sir Vicary, iv. 271.
 Gibraltar, Gut of, v. 113.
 Gibson, Mr., i. 89.
 Giffard, Mrs., iii. 94.
 Gifford, William, viii. 70, 71, 215; a "canker'd carle," ii. 248; and Dryden's translations from Juvenal, 246; communicated to Rogers his design to publish a Review, viii. 70, and note; his opinion of Holland House, ii. 230; his "Memoirs," among the most interesting specimens of biography, 167; his "Memoirs of Ben Jonson," 248.
 —, Lady, vii. 7.
 —, Mr., iii. 90; iv. 191, note; v. 154.
 —, Sir John, iii. 261.
 Gilbert, Davies, vi. 119.
 "Gil Blas," v. 158.
 Gillebert, vii. 30.
 Gillespie, i. 142.
 Gillwell, viii. 80.
 Gilpin, "Life of Cranmer," iv. 138.
 Gilray, vi. 335.
 "Ginguenè," v. 201; vii. 321.
 Giordano, Luca, "The Cupola," iii. 41.
 Giorgio Maggiorè, S., iii. 25.
 Giorgione, v. 66; "The Three Heads," iii. 29; "Woman playing a Guitar," 29.

- Giotto, iii. 38.
 "Giovanni, St., Cupola of," by Correggio, iii. 82.
 ——— Laterano, S., iii. 50.
 ——— Palace, the, iii. 27.
 "Giraldus Cambrensis," iv. 134.
 Girardet, "The Deluge," iii. 127.
 Girardin, M., his style of living, &c., iii. 135.
 Girardins, the, iii. 135.
 Girard, M. Augustin, vii. 185, 186.
 Gisborne, ii. 28.
 Gisdin, Mr., iii. 267.
 "Giulia Pia," colossal head of, iii. 55.
 Giustina, Sta, iii. 23.
 "Gladiator, the," iii. 59.
 Gladstone, Mrs., vii. 322.
 Glamis Castle, viii. 162.
 Glandine, Lord, vi. 79.
 Glamire, iv. 105.
 Glasgow, v. 276; viii. 112.
 "Glenarvon," viii. 218; reviewed by Moore, but not published, ii. 105.
 "Glenbervie," ii. 312.
 ———, Lady, viii. 154, 155.
 ———, Lord, i. 279, 281. note, 282, 283, 285, 286, 290, 311, 335, 339, 351; ii. 4, 327, 446; viii. 155; letter from, to Moore, i. 291.
 Glenelg, Lord, vii. 203.
 Glengall, Lady, vi. 109, 121.
 Glenlyon, Lady, iii. 321.
 Glennie, Dr., v. 180, 191, 192.
 ———, Mrs., v. 191, 192.
 "Globe, The," i. 259; vii. 161, 163, 243.
 "Glorious Memory," toast, ii. 193.
 Glory on a pill box i. iii. 168.
 Gloucester, Duchess of, iv. 193; vi. 67.
 ———, Duke of, iv. 296; vi. 343; viii. 167; his opinion of Moore's destruction of the Byron "Memoirs," iv. 195.
 ———, Sophia of, iv. 193.
 ———, Cathedral, v. 108.
 ———, House, viii. 134.
 Glover, v. 96.
 Glynd, described by Rogers, viii. 69.
 "Go and forget what now," iv. 209.
 Goblin Cave, the, viii. 162.
 Goddard, iv. 15; vi. 24, 73.
 ———, Mrs., vi. 24.
 Goderich, Lord, v. 235, 236, 244.
 Godfrey, Barbara, ii. 121; iv. 58; vi. 67, 68, 77, 92, 105, 158, 314; vii. 143; viii. 207, 213, 222, 224, 250.
 ———, Mary, i. 207, 211, 225, 236, 242, 244, 248, 259, 268, 321; ii. 23, 109; iv. 48, 257, 299, 328; v. 180; vi. 60, 105, 169, 173, 185; vii. 84, 279, 294; viii. 11, 64, 84, 87, 114, 119, 137, 198, 207, 256; extract from a letter of hers to Mrs. Moore, vii. 143; letters from, to Moore, i. 182, 212, 232, 259, 277, 287, 293, 309; ii. 94; viii. 41, 56, 66, 72, 75, 138, 155, 166, 190, 202, 208, 221, 226, 243, 249; to, from Moore, i. 179, 194, 207, 217, 220, 228, 232, 270, 280, 290, 298, 311; ii. 23, 67, 84, 92, 104, 140, 141; viii. 59, 61, 91, 132, 134, 188, 200; opinion of Lord Molra's conduct to Moore, 138; political on dits, i. 287, 288, 289; remarks to Moore, on the Duke of York's case, viii. 74.
 ———, Philippa, i. 211, 213, 214, 218; ii. 24, 105; iii. 282; iv. 50, 67; viii. 62, 73, 119, 133, 190, 192, 224.
 Godfreys, the, vi. 114, 209, 210; vii. 293.
 Godolphin, Sydney, iii. 221; iv. 312.
 Godwin, William, i. 105; iii. 365; iv. 269; vi. 257.
 Goethe, vi. 258, 265; viii. 201; his "Faust," iii. 157; Macanlay's view of, vii. 280; manner in which his description of the Carnival at Rome was composed, vi. 259.
 Gold, Thomas, iv. 6.
 Goldau, vill. 187.
 Goldoni, iii. 46, 47.
 "Goldoni Memoirs," iii. 33.
 Goldsmith, Oliver, ii. 23; vii. 201; his "Deserted Village," ii. 247; "Good people all, of every sort," v. 188; story of his jealousy and misrepresentation, vi. 114.
 Goldsworthy, iv. 250.
 "Gomez Arias," v. 301.
 Gonsalvi, Cardinal, iii. 40, 59, 137; full length portrait of, by Sir Thomas Lawrence, 57.
 "Good bye, my youth, good bye," v. 52.
 ——— Hope, Cape of, iii. 224; iv. 108.
 Goodman's Fields, iv. 319.
 Goodlad, Mr., iii. 220, 221, 222.
 "Good people all, of every sort," v. 188.
 Gould, Mrs., iii. 359.
 Gordon, G. H., iv. 183, 184; v. 5.
 ———, Duchess of, iii. 205. note.
 Gore, vii. 313, 361.
 ———, Lady Maria, iv. 316.
 ———, Miss, iv. 315.
 Gorey, vii. 110.
 Gort, Lord, vi. 131.
 Gosford, Lord, v. 156; vi. 57, 317.
 Gosling, Mr., vi. 155.
 Gosset, ii. 294.
 Goulburn, Right Hon. H. v. 27, 36; vi. 12.
 ———, Mrs., v. 27, 36.
 Gould, iv. 100; viii. 11; story of, v. 33.
 ———, Serjeant, v. 32, 33.
 ———, Sir F., vi. 286.
 ———, Robert Howe, viii. 24; letter to Moore, including a copy of verses, 22; "The foremost patriot of all time," 23.
 Goulding, Mr., i. 89, 90, 95, 97.
 Gourgaud, General, iii. 340.
 Gower, Lady, iv. 311.
 ———, Lady Francis, ii. 61; vi. 113.
 ———, Lord Francis Leveson, ii. 61; iii. 247, 254, 344; iv. 306, 307, 314; v. 173, 291, 310; vi. 61, 105, 121, 261, 262.
 Gowers, the, vi. 121, 225.
 "Go where Glory waits thee," iii. 11, 306; vi. 155, 333; viii. 112.
 Grabe, "Irenæus," vi. 255.
 "Graces, The," by Canova, iii. 63, 283; by Chantrey, 65; by Thorwaldsen, 63; by Titian, 60.
 Grady, Thomas, iii. 342.
 Grævius, v. 57.
 Grafton, Duke of, ii. 146, 148, 149; vi. 36, 124, 125; vii. 213; anecdote of, v. 204.
 Graham, "Rebecca," iv. 161.
 ———, Dr., ii. 347; iv. 185.
 ———, Lady, v. 81, 135; vi. 42, 121.
 ———, Lord, iv. 166.
 ———, Sir James, v. 81, 135; vi. 105; termination of a speech of his, v. 136.
 ———, Mrs., i. 6; iii. 66, 181; iv. 162; "Letters on India," iii. 63.
 Graigue House, the, vii. 113—116.
 "Grammont, Memoirs of," iii. 99.
 "Granada, Chronicles of," vi. 64, 91.

- Granard, Lady, doubted Sir Walter Scott being the author of the "Waverley Novels," iii. 151. et passim.
 —, Lord, i. 119. et passim.
 "Grandison, Sir Charles," iii. 162; v. 231.
 Grant, Charles, iv. 25; vi. 46. 215. 258, 259. 316.
 —, Dr., i. 104.
 —, Lady, v. 245.
 —, Robert, vi. 196.
 —, Sir W. K., v. 245.
 Grantham, Lady, iv. 185. 291; v. 84.
 —, Lord, iv. 185; v. 84.
 Gran Torre, iii. 31.
 Granville, Lady, iv. 312.
 —, Lord, iv. 51; vi. 126; vii. 73. 212, 213; viii. 16.
 —, Mrs., vii. 124.
 Granvilles, the, iv. 85; vi. 109. 119.
 Gratian, vii. 90.
 Grattan, Rt. Hon. Henry, returned for Dublin, i. 13. note; an ardent admirer of Madame Catalani, iv. 124; and Isaac Corry, account of the fracas between them, iii. 287; anecdotes of, v. 26. 66; author of an epilogue to "Comus," i. 8; couplet against him, 3; consulted Moore on the subject of an Irish novel, v. 101; sixty medals of, struck at the French mint, iv. 11; wounded by the mob, when being chaired, iii. 287; his income at his death, 220.
 —, Mrs., vi. 59; viii. 69. 96. 191. 199.
 —, James, viii. 191.
 —, Miss, viii. 69. 165. 166. 191. 199.
 Graves, Lady, v. 292.
 —, Lord, v. 292.
 Gray, his "Epitaph on his Mother," v. 139; his "Poems," iii. 82; "Poems," the MS. of, in Rogers's possession, iv. 79.
 "Great Dinner of Type and Co., a poor Poet's Dream," vii. 221.
 Greathead, iii. 310. 356; iv. 16.
 Greave, "Description of the Pyramids," iii. 172.
 Greaves, Dr., vii. 105.
 "Greek Anthology," vi. 320.
 — Committee, the, iv. 88; said to have written to Lord Byron, requesting him not to fight, 162.
 — Testament, " vii. 370.
 Green, B. E., iv. 328.
 —, Sir C., iii. 334.
 — Bag, the, " ii. 131.
 Green's "Anthems," ii. 179.
 Greenfield, iii. 151.
 "Green Man, the," ii. 161.
 Greenwich Hospital, ii. 161; vi. 75.
 Greffulhe, iii. 231. 321. 339. 363.
 Gregg, Mrs., vi. 50.
 Gregorio, S., iii. 59.
 Gregson, v. 301; viii. 99.
 Grenfell, vi. 349.
 —, Miss, v. 312.
 Grenville, George, ii. 213. 316.
 —, Lord, i. 288. 296; ii. 72. 185. 194. 225. 292. 307. 316. 317; iii. 249; iv. 143. 159. and note, 229. 267. 289. 293. 300; v. 17. 74. 135. 166; vi. 3. 243; his spirited verses, iv. 139.
 Grenville, Thomas, letter from, to Moore, alluded to, ii. 189; offered Moore the use of his library vi. 54; see also ii. 166. et passim.
 Gretry, ii. 64.
 Greville, Charles, ii. 205; vi. 79. 188. 194. et passim.
 —, Sir Fulke, "Life of Sir Philip Sydney," iii. 143.
 —, Harry, i. 211; ii. 229, 230; viii. 49.
 —, P., v. 150.
 —, Mrs., ii. 318.
 Grey, Dowager Lady, viii. 28.
 —, Lady (Countess), ii. 327. 332; iii. 344. 345. 348. 351; iv. 58; v. 61. 178. 184. 261; vi. 40. 45. 55. 59. 61. 62. 124. 126. 199. 258; vii. 155. 158.
 —, Lady E., iii. 313. 317; iv. 58.
 —, Lord (Earl), i. 267; vi. 124. 193. note, 200. 216. and note, et passim; anecdote of, vi. 62; his domestic manners, ii. 163; his character, vi. 291; offered Moore his nomination to the Charter House School for Tom, 28; on extempore speaking, ii. 307.
 —, Sir Charles, iv. 303.
 —, Sir George, vii. 175.
 Grierson, i. 37. 70. 89. 93. 111. 113. 117; v. 24; his house at Rathfarnham, i. 71.
 —, Mrs., i. 27.
 Griffin, Dr., vi. 279. 285. 287. 297. 299. 301, 302. 304.
 —, Gerald, account of his visit to Moore, i. xxxii. note A; see also vi. 301.
 Grilparzer, his "Sappho," iii. 306.
 Grimaldi, vi. 61.
 Grimston, Lord, v. 320.
 Grisi, Madame, vii. 154; viii. 21.
 "Grondeur," the, iv. 14.
 "Gronovius," ii. 236.
 Grose, ii. 218; "Slang Dictionary," 216.
 Grossett, ii. 178. 217. 256. 282; iv. 247; v. 41. 107, 108.
 —, Mrs., ii. 178. 217; iv. 247; v. 107, 108.
 Grosvenor, Lady Robert, vii. 344.
 —, Lord, vi. 88; vii. 337.
 —, Lord Robert, ii. 233; v. 181; vii. 344.
 — Square, completely lighted with gas in 1839, vii. 254.
 — Street, ii. 233.
 Grotius, Hugo, iv. 143; vi. xii; vii. 17. 207, 208.
 Grove, Mr., v. 93.
 —, Mrs., v. 93.
 Groyne, the, v. 179.
 Grubb, ii. 296.
 Grubbs, the, ii. 215.
 Gruter, iii. 272; vii. 174.
 "Guardian, The," superintendence of, offered to Moore, ii. 120.
 Guarini, his own copy of the "Pastor Fido," iii. 29.
 Guercino, iii. 34. 56. 82; "Abraham and Hagar," the most striking picture Moore ever saw, 20. 69; "Agar," 27; "A Magdalen," ii. 32; iii. 67; "Assumption of the Virgin," 33; "Ecce Homo," 61; "Ester," 73; "Sibyl," 75.
 Guernsey Illies, ii. 183.
 Guiccioli, Countess, described, iii. 25. 27; her letter to Lord Byron, alluded to, refusing to receive any legacy from him, v. 271; refused a settlement of 10,000*l.* from Lord Byron, iv. 221; sent Moore part of Lord Byron's Storia, v. 277.
 Guiche, Duc de, ii. 216. 321.
 —, Duchesse de, iii. 321.
 Guidi, "Ode on the Arcadians," iii. 72.

Guldo, iii. 31. 34; "A Madonna," 32; "Andromeda," 51; "Aurora," 50; "Cencia," 75; "Christ on the Cross," 72; "Cleopatra," 42; "Contest between Apollo and Pan," 29; "Cupid," 27; "Cupid bending his Bow," 61; "Dead Christ," 81; "Flagellation and Martyrdom of St. Andrea, 59; "Judith," 51; "Lucretia," 29; "Michael," 58. 62. 81; "Michael and Satan," 89; Moore's opinions on two pictures by. 50, 51; "Peter and Paul," 83; "Samson," 81; "Slaughter of the Innocents," 30. 78. 81; "The Assumption," 66; "The Saints," 81; "The Two Apostles," 31.
Guizot, Mons. vii. 187. 191. 229. and note, 247; his appreciation of Moore's talents, 229; his Lecture on Representative Government in England, iii. 338.
Gulley, viii. 99.
"Gullistan," iii. 307.
"Gulliver's Travels," ii. 257; imitations of, 265.
Guncher, Madlle., iii. 282.
"Gustavus Vasa," vii. 22.
Guthrie, ii. 205; v. 128. 134. 196. 305; vi. 8. 307; vii. 34. 49. 65. 128.
Gwydir, Lady, iii. 173. 203. 211, 212. 214. 218, 219; v. 10.
—, Lord, iii. 192. 218; v. 10. 160.
Gwyndu, iii. 290.
Gwynne, Mrs., vi. 114.
Gymnase, the, iii. 198. 208. 214. 276. 303. 321. 331.

H.

H. B., and his productions, vii. 91; his anxiety to know Wilkie's opinions of his works, vi. 334.
Hackett, Mr., iv. 302.
Haddington, Lord, v. 302.
"Had I a heart," v. 37.
Hadley, v. 214.
Hafód, iv. 133.
"Hagar," by Guercino, iii. 20. 69.
Hagley, iv. 87; viii. 95.
Hainault, Countess of, her children alluded to. ii. 37.
Hale, Lady T., vi. 335.
Hales, Mr., iii. 221.
Halford, Sir Henry, vi. 76. 264.
Halhed, ii. 147. 164; Sheridan's most lively correspondent, still living, iv. 262.
Halifax, i. 143. 159. 160. 163, 164, 165. 169. 175; v. 218.
Hall, A. Maria, vii. 318, 319; letter to Moore, on presenting him with a copy of her "Sketches of Irish Character," 318.
—, Bishop, ii. 278; "Hard Measure," 278; "Moderation," 278.
—, Bond, his natural humour, i. 49.
—, Captain Basil, iv. 220. 239, 240. 242; v. 11; "Account of Chili," iv. 240.
—, Lady Theodosia, vi. 154.
—, Mrs., v. 176; viii. 12.
—, Robert, "Sermons," viii. 109. note.
Halls, the, vii. 315.
Hallam, Henry, ii. 263. 332. 335; iii. 53. 347; iv. 47. 143, 144. 166. 169. 220. 263. 264; v. 126. 223. 231. 267. 318; vi. 44. 110. 221. 233. 252. 310. 326; vii. 26. 64. 148. 175. 302. 314. 319. 322; viii. 20; "Constitutional History," v. 222; his opinion of Moore's "History of Ireland," vii. 148.

Hallams, the, vi. 103.
Hallet, v. 56. 283.
Halse, ii. 274.
Hamelin, Madame, iii. 183. 269.
Hamilton, i. 143; iii. 145. 147. 250; iv. 23; vi. 139; vii. 171. 194; viii. 123; proposed the Editorship of a New Monthly Review to Moore, ii. 161; the writer of almost all of Washington's Addresses, vii. 195.
—, Colonel, Consul at Norfolk, Virginia, i. 138, 139. 149. 154. 282; his kindness to Moore, 143; Moore's draft to, appropriated by his deputy, 300.
—, Dacre, his examination before the College Inquisition, i. 62.
—, Duchess of, iii. 352; iv. 167; v. 306; vii. 241; made a member of a Roman Society under the name of Polymnia Caledonia, iii. 274.
—, Duke of, iii. 173. 308; viii. 45; and Scott, story of, v. 4.
—, Lady, viii. 80. 112.
—, Lady Anne, ii. 327; vii. 241; viii. 141.
—, Lord Archibald, ii. 310, 311. 332; iii. 343; iv. 83.
—, Lord Spencer, iv. 326.
—, Mrs., i. 149. 162; iii. 207; v. 316.
—, Miss, v. 315.
—, Professor, vii. 100. 103.
—, Rev. W., v. 29.
—, Sackville, described by Grattan as a red tapist, iv. 245.
—, Sir W., vii. 165.
Hamiltons, the, iii. 91. 145.
"Hamlet," vii. 138. note.
Hammersley, i. 110; ii. 305; iii. 4; v. 251; vii. 241; viii. 85, 86.
Hammick, Sir Stephen, vii. 330, 331.
Hampden, Lord, vii. 69.
Hampstead, ii. 357. et passim.
Hampton Court, iv. 167. 320; vi. 67.
Hancock, Mr., v. 301. 318. 321.
Handel, George Frederick, iii. 365; "Let the bright Seraphim," vii. 241; Oratorios, some of the words written by Morel, ii. 180.
Handley, Major, iii. 317. 335. 340.
Hanson, iv. 223; v. 279. 289. 291; vi. 47.
Hanwell, ii. 314; vii. 26. 370.
Harcourts, the, vii. 341.
Harden, i. 88.
Hardicanute, ii. 332.
Harding, Mr., vi. 268.
Hardinge, Lady Emily, vi. 141. 150.
—, Sir Henry, Viscount, vi. 128. 141, 142. 150; vii. 240; anecdote of, vi. 148.
"Hard is his lot who edits, thankless job!" vi. 195.
Hardman, iv. 32. 277; v. 45, 46.
Hardmans, the, v. 315.
Hardwicke, Lord, his offer to create a Laureateship in Ireland, for Moore, vi. 228.
Hardy, Lord, ii. 209; iii. 255.
—, Lady, vi. 86. 113. 200. 206.
Hare, ii. 326; iii. 174. note, 233. 279. 285; iv. 101; v. xiii. 112.
—, Mrs., vi. 112.
Harewood, Lady, v. 80; vi. 45.
—, Lord, iv. 329; v. 80; vi. 45.
"Hark! I hear a Spirit sing," v. 46.

- "Hark! the Vesper Hymn," ii. 128. 154. 172.
 "Harlequin Munchausen," ii. 259.
 Harley, the Ladies, vi. 42.
 Harlowe's Collection, Pall Mall, ii. 329.
 Harmonic, the, ii. 279.
 "Harmonicon, The," vi. 179.
 Harmony of Languages, ii. 155.
 Harness, Rev. W., v. 290. 295, 296; vi. 195. 225.
 Harrington, Lady (Countess of), i. 110. 113. 186; ii. 32; iv. 55; viii. 62, 63. 183r
 ———, Lord (Earl of), ii. 32. 302; iv. 55; v. 156. 168; viii. 62, 63. 183.
 Harris, iv. 6. 102; vii. 20. 333.
 ———, Harry, iv. 125. 319.
 Harrison, Mr., iv. 317; the pawnbroker, ii. 232.
 Harrow, Byron's name cut in various places at, v. 190.
 Harrowby, Lady, ii. 61; iv. 256; v. 300; vii. 150.
 ———, Lord, ii. 61; iv. 39. 173; vii. 313; detailed account of Thistlewood's conspiracy, vi. 35.
 Hart, Mrs., v. 214.
 Hartham, v. 234; vii. 137.
 ———, Park, ii. 250.
 Hartington, Lord, vii. 212.
 Hartstonge, Weld, v. 34.
 Harvey, iv. 173.
 ———, John, vii. 334.
 ———, Lord, iii. 328.
 ———, Mrs., ii. 197, 198. note; v. 137.
 Harwood, Mrs., i. 104.
 "Has sorrow thy young days shaded," i. 298.
 Hastings, ii. 189; iv. 22; v. 303; vii. 317; viii. 181.
 ———, Lady, i. 346; ii. 120; iii. 271; iv. 286; v. 138. 245.
 ———, Lord, ii. 164; iii. 312. 329; iv. 287. 293. 295; v. 44. 138. 211. 245; vi. 270; and his melancholy, iv. 286.
 ———, Sir Charles, i. 346; ii. 157. note, 340; viii. 152; his complaint of Fox's hauteur, ii. 341.
 Hastings, Warren, ii. 147. 186. 190, 191. 203, 204. 207; iv. 93. 95. 231. 270; v. 140; vi. 311; vii. 304; impeachment of, a dramatic display, got up by the Whigs and favoured by Pitt, ii. 192; worshipped by the natives of India, 207.
 ———, Mrs., i. 100; vi. 311.
 Hatchett, iii. 296; iv. 46; vi. 193.
 Hatherton, Lord, vii. 158.
 Hatton, ii. 41. 149.
 "Hat versus Wig," v. 147.
 Hauteville, iii. 6.
 Havre, iv. 312; viii. 274.
 Hawes, iv. 307.
 ———, Dr., vi. 340.
 Hawker, Colonel, iv. 300.
 Hawkins, ii. 282; vi. 182.
 Hawthornden, v. 9.
 Hay, vi. 294.
 Hay, Captain, vii. 30.
 Haydn, Joseph, i. 193; ii. 179. 206. 307, 308; iii. 366; vi. 238. 255. 331; "Agnus Dei," ii. 171. 178; vii. 86; "Amen, dico tibi hodie tecum eris in paradiso," ii. 177; anecdote of, 308; "Creation," ludicrous association connected with, iv. 142; "Et incarnatus est," ii. 175. 179; his "first sonata," i. 25; his "Spirit song," adapted for Moore's Masque, 39; "Oggi con me," ii. 178, 179; "Thou shalt not steal," 308; "Tu di Grazie," vii. 241.
 Haydon, R. B., iv. 174; v. 211; vii. 221; "Napoleon at Elba," vi. 331.
 Haley, i. 210.
 Haymarket Theatre, the, ii. 161. 356; iii. 292; iv. 85. 92. 300; vi. 80. 211. 230; vii. 48. 259.
 Hayne, iv. 261.
 Hayter, Sir George, iii. 284; iv. 164; vi. 262.
 Hayward, vii. 174; "Translation of Faust," 173.
 Hazlitt, William, iii. 146. 235; "Lecture on Sheridan," ii. 251.
 Head, Captain, v. 126.
 ———, Miss, vii. 302.
 ———, Sir Edmund, vii. 324.
 ———, Sir Francis, vii. 302.
 Headforts, the, vii. 367.
 Headly, Dr., iv. 93.
 "Heaps of Lectures," ii. 155.
 "Heart of Midlothian," ii. 241. 242. 302; extravagant and incredible, 249.
 Heath, Charles, ii. 357; iii. 124. 126, 127. 134. 139; v. 173. 272; vi. 296; vii. 18; his proposal to Moore to furnish the contents of his "Keepsake," vi. 296; offered Moore the editorship of his Annual, v. 173. 272; and Scott the editorship of the "Keepsake," 272.
 Heathcote, Lady, iii. 193; iv. 260; vii. 241.
 Heaviside, vi. 257.
 "Hebe," by Canova, iii. 28; by Chantrey, 65.
 Heber, Reginald (Bishop), iv. 86. 143. 145; vi. 267.
 "Hebrew Melodies," ii. 79.
 Hebrides, the, viii. 161.
 Heffleton, viii. 265, 266.
 Helena, St., iii. 79.
 "Helioporus," iii. 150; "Ethiopics," 149.
 Heliopolis, vii. 256.
 Helsham, Fanny, viii. 232.
 Hemans, Mrs., vii. 81. 366; "Far from my own bright land," v. 215; "The Address to the Sea," 215.
 Hemming, iv. 154.
 Heneage, v. 108. 201. 228, 229; vi. 154. 340.
 ———, Mrs., v. 108. 201. 228, 229. 240.
 Henley, Dr., Notes on "Vathek," iv. 143.
 ———, Lord, vi. 327.
 ———, Major, iii. 240.
 Henn, the Misses, v. 28.
 Henri, iii. 332.
 Henry, Lady Emily, iii. 309. 317. 326. 365; vii. 100.
 ———, IV., iii. 336.
 "—— V.," v. 269.
 "—— VI.," vi. 206, 207.
 ———, VIII., ii. 325; iv. 138. 148. 301; vii. 19; viii. 149; "History of," vii. 196.
 "Herald, The Morning," iv. 186. 205.
 Herbert, i. 91. 257; ii. 217; iv. 115; v. 147.
 ———, Algernon, vi. 113.
 ———, Lady, iii. 105.
 ———, Lady Georgiana, vii. 279.
 ———, Lord, iii. 266. 341.
 ———, Miss, iii. 8, 9.
 ———, Mrs., iii. 9. 88. 97.
 ———, William, iii. 143.
 Herberts, the, iii. 9, 10, 11. 94. 99.

- Herder, vi. 266.
 "Here's a health to thee, Tom Moore," v. 93. 220; vii. 113. 127.
 "— the bower," iii. 284.
 "Here, take my heart," iv. 244.
 "—, while the moonlight dim," iv. 328.
 Hermaus, the, vi. 173.
 "Hermaphrodite," an, iii. 64. 89.
 Hermes, ii. 274.
 Hermitage, the, iii. 135.
 "Hermit in London," the, iii. 361.
 "Hernani," vi. 210.
 "Herodias's Daughter," by Titian, v. 66.
 Herodotus, ii. 270.
 Heron, Miss, v. 215.
 —, Sir R., vii. 69.
 Herries, v. 97. 202.
 Hertford, Lady (Marchioness of), ii. 349; v. 84. 289.
 —, Lord (Marquis of), i. 279. 288; v. 62; sham duel between, and Lord Mansfield, at the University, iv. 247.
 —, Mr., iv. 266.
 —, Mrs., iv. 266.
 Hervey, Lady, iv. 90.
 Hesperides, the, iii. 155.
 Hewlett, Dr., ii. 321.
 Heyne, ii. 307.
 Heyne's "Virgil," i. 338.
 Heytesbury, Lord, vii. 91.
 "Hey, Tutti tatte," sung by Scott, Moore, &c., iv. 342.
 Hibbert, ii. 326; ii. 195; iv. 79; vi. 89. 159.
 —, Mrs., iv. 79; vi. 89.
 —, the Misses, ii. 326; iv. 79.
 Hickey, a kind of Captain Rock, iv. 6. 116.
 Hickson, iv. 105. 106. 120. 224.
 Higginson, v. 255. 257. 258.
 Highbury, ii. 223; iv. 212. 316; vi. 331; viii. 175. 213.
 —, Terrace, iii. 300.
 Highclere, v. 307. 309.
 Highgate, ii. 163; vi. 196.
 "High Notions," ii. 281.
 Hill, iii. 151. 171. 276; iv. 62.
 —, Lord (Viscount), vii. 149. 193.
 —, Lord Arthur, iv. 55; v. 149.
 —, Lord Marcus, iii. 317. 318. 328.
 —, Thomas, pun on, by Smith, vi. 196.
 Hillyars, the, v. 92.
 Hinchcliffe, iii. 239; vi. 262.
 Hindley, Dr., iv. 63.
 Hindon, iv. 234; v. 90.
 Hindoos, the, ii. 277.
 Hindu College, the, vi. 253.
 "Hip, Hip, Hurrah!" v. 144. 151. 258.
 Hippisley, Sir J. Cox, iii. 196.
 —, Lady, vi. 194.
 "Histoire de la Conquête d'Angleterre," vii. 251.
 "— de la Peinture en Italie," iii. 108.
 "— des Juifs," iii. 165. 168.
 Historical Society, The, i. 46. 51. 68.
 History and Romance, confusion between, v. 231.
 "— of England," vi. 158.
 "— of Hastings' Trial," ii. 212.
 "— of the Affairs of Europe," v. 70.
 Hoare, viii. 227.
 —, Sir Richard, called to account by his brother magistrates for visiting Beckford, ii. 196.
 Hobart, Right Hon., i. 19. 94. 96. 119.
 Hobbes, Thomas, ii. 263. 274; iii. 77; vii. 207.
 Hobbima, iv. 79.
 Hobhouse, Henry, vi. 282.
 —, Sir B., v. 126.
 —, Sir John Cam, ii. 152. 157. 158. 227. 232. 259. 266. 285; iii. 296. 347; iv. 55. 81. 84. 170. 176. 177. 187. 188. 189. 190. 192. note, 194. 196. 197. 198. 200. 201. 211. 212. 213. 223. 257. 332; v. 40. 41. 43. 60. 66. 238; and Bowles, reconciled, 275; his views and conduct as to "Byron's Memoirs," iv. 188. 197; v. 185; appointed Russell Moore to a cadetship, vii. 252; conversation with Moore, on Lord Byron, iv. 257; on the "Life of Byron," v. 40. 76. 185; returned Moore his letters to Lord Byron, 238. et passim.
 Hobson, Mrs., vi. 173.
 Hoche, General, vii. 189.
 Hodges and Smith, vii. 300.
 Hodgkinson, ii. 161. 309; iii. 300; vii. 14. 15.
 —, Mrs., vii. 14. 15.
 Hodgson, Kirkman D., viii. 284. note; letter to, from Moore, 284.
 [—, Rev. Mr., v. 250. 253. 296; details of Byron's gift to himself communicated to Moore, 251. 252; see also, 216; verses on Moore's visit and departure, 254.
 —, Mrs., v. 251. 253. 254.
 Hogan, vii. 31. 32.
 Hogg, James, v. 121; vi. 234; vii. 171; his singing, v. 12.
 "Hohenlinden," iv. 335.
 Holbein, Hans, vi. 78.
 Holberg, Baron de, ii. 265.
 Holcombe, Dr., v. 255.
 —, George, v. 255.
 Holcombes, the, v. 211.
 Holcroft, "Memoirs," ii. 156. 167.
 —, Miss, iii. 128. 136. 164. 334; iv. 221; vi. 106.
 —, Mrs., iii. 127.
 Holland, v. 303; vi. 46.
 —, Dr., the Albanian traveller, ii. 264. 266. 313; iv. 260. 306; v. 124. 302; vi. 112. 185; vii. 158. 284; viii. 10.
 —, Lady, ii. 189. 324. 346. 349; iii. 262; iv. 55; v. 262; vii. 313. et passim; her attack on Moore's "Life of Sheridan," vi. 41. 284; her objections to "Lalla Rookh," ii. 328; praise of Moore's "Epicurean," v. 183.
 —, Lord, i. 207; ii. 146. note, 263; iii. 10; iv. 25. note, 230. and note, 303; vi. xv. xvi. xvii. 79. 120. 159. 198. 199. 208; vii. 3. 156; viii. 225. 276. et passim; anecdote of, vi. 52; conversation with Moore on Sheridan, iv. 228; "Dear Moore—neither poet nor scholar can fail," vii. 199; epigrams by, iii. 5. 295; vii. 282; on Southey, iv. 314; feeling for the Arts, 48; his ballad of "King William the T'ar for me!" vi. 189; his curious scene with Sheridan and the Prince of Wales, ii. 222; his description of a Spanish bull fight, iv. 311; his habit of mimicry, iii. 222. 270; v. 258; his hatred of oppression, vi. xv; idea of the three periods of Fox's life, ii. 198; his love of classical literature, vi. xv; rhymes, accompanying a present of "Bayle's Dictionary" to Moore, vii. 199; Italian epigram, alluded to, iii. 274; letter to Miss Fox, relating to Frost, vii. 267; maxims of, iv. 254; pun by, ii. 346; repartee on authors and their poems, iii. 246; his scruples re-

- specting the sale of Byron's "Memoirs," 298; short memoir of his "Own Times," v. 117; simile on his son Charles, iii. 273; translations from Metastasio, vii. 280, 281; amended by Rogers, 281; verses on Napoleon's gift to him, iii. 261; upon a clock, 272; viii. 20, 21. note.
- Holland, Mrs., vii. 350.
- , Philemon, epigram on, iv. 304; "Suetonius," iv. 304.
- , House, i. 266. et passim, 300. note: its conversations commemorated by Macanlay in the "Edinburgh Review," vi. xv; librarian of, ii. 203. note.
- Holman, iii. 133.
- Holmes, Mr., i. 123.
- , William, vi. 332.
- Holon, Miss, v. 215.
- Holt, the Wicklow brigand, iv. 335.
- "Holy Alliance, The," v. 114.
- "—— Family, The," by Andrea del Sarto, iii. 82.
- Holyrood, iii. 157. note.
- , House, ii. 353. 356; iii. 4; v. 8. 42; viii. 124. 252. 253.
- "Holy Trinity," the, by Raphael, iii. 42.
- Homburgh, Prince of, ii. 215.
- Home, John, "Douglas," iii. 281; verses by, 281.
- , Sir Everard, vi. 243. note.
- Homer, fac-simile from a papyrus MS., iv. 140; his knowledge of human nature instanced, vi. 267; never existed according to Dr. Parr, ii. 148; translated into Italian by Monti, who knew nothing of Greek, iii. 183; see also 20. 161. note, 162; iv. 75. 334; vii. 284. 364; viii. 95. 155; translation from, by Cowper, vii. 285.
- Honeybourne, i. 346.
- "Honeymoon, The," ii. 161.
- "Honour, temple of," iii. 62.
- Hood, Thomas, vi. 100; vii. 367.
- , Lady, iv. 84.
- , Lord, iv. 84.
- Hook, Dr., "Roman History," v. 286.
- , Theodore, iii. 151; vi. 42. 125; epigram by, iii. 108. and note; pun of, vii. 144.
- , Mrs., story of, told by Sir W. Scott, v. 286.
- Hooker, ii. 181. 317; iv. 148.
- Hookham's, ii. 212.
- Hope, Thomas, iv. 146. 236; vi. 27; vii. 241; viii. 70. 174. 191; sketch-book of, iv. 145.
- , Mrs., iii. 347; iv. 59. 82. 172. 236. 321; v. 152; vi. 27; viii. 191; rhyme of Luttrell on, iv. 321.
- "Hope comes again," v. 194. 196.
- Hopkinson, Mrs., i. 167.
- Hoppner, viii. 70. 71; "Recollections," vi. 25.
- Hopton, ii. 31.
- "Horace in London," vi. 195.
- , licentiousness of some of his odes, i. xxvi; "Sic te Diva potens Cyprî, ii. 173; parody on, by Moore, iv. 238; see also ii. 150. 156; iv. 62; v. 222. 306; vi. viii. 160; viii. 56. 69. 88. 121. 156.
- Horne, Rev. Thomas Hartwell, "Work on the Psalms," iv. 152.
- Horner, Francis, Jeffrey's second in his duel with Moore, his statement relative to the duel, i. 209—211; see also i. 206; ii. 105; vii. 141, 142; viii. 57. 116. 177. 288.
- Horns, the, Kennington, dinner at, ii. 157.
- Hornsey, Moore's residence at, ii. 116.
- Horse Guards, the, vii. 314. 329. 357; viii. 15.
- Horsley, Bishop, ii. 170; iii. 297; anecdotes of, vi. 81.
- Hort, Mr., iv. 113.
- Horton, Willmot, his connection with Byron's "Memoirs," iv. 188. et seq.
- , Mrs. Willmot, v. 177.
- "Ho sparo tante lagrime," ii. 77.
- Hotel Breteuil, iii. 7.
- , de Bourbon, iv. 21.
- , de France, iv. 8.
- , de Ville, iii. 227; iv. 9; viii. 277.
- , York, iv. 15.
- , Dieu and the Salpêtrière, their arrangements, iii. 182.
- Houdon, statue of "Voltaire," iii. 88.
- Hough, Dr., iv. 94.
- , Henry, vii. 334.
- Houlton, Catherine, vi. 163; vii. 29. 59.
- , Colonel, iv. 132. 178. 271; v. 48. 198.
- , Eliza, v. 98. 134; vi. 163; vii. 28, 29.
- , Ella, vi. 238. 240.
- , Flora, vii. 29.
- , Isabella, iv. 179. 271; v. 72. 98; vi. 164. 242.
- , John, iv. 179. 207. 271; v. 69. 97. 98. 144. 146. 163. 164. 205. 313; vi. 242; vii. 92.
- , Mrs., iv. 179. 207. 266; v. 313; vii. 59. 92.
- Houltons, the, iv. 200. 271. 274; v. 67. 68. 96. 97. 98. 201. 312; vi. 6. 163. 217. 219. 242. 245. 328. 330; vii. 28.
- Hounslow, v. 149.
- "Hours of Idleness," key to the persons alluded to, in the possession of William Banks, vi. 12.
- House of Commons, the, ii. 187. note, 264. 311; iii. 346. 348; iv. 85.
- Howard, iii. 33. 336; vi. 188. 255; vii. 45; viii. 20.
- , de Walden, Lord, iv. 51; v. 265.
- Howell, "Trial of Sir Walter Raleigh," ii. 330.
- Howick, Lord, vi. 106.
- Howley, Archbishop, vi. 340.
- "How sweet in the woodlands," i. 26.
- Howth, iii. 286. 290; iv. 100. 127; v. 37. 38; vi. 151. 152. 176; vii. 300.
- , Lord, v. 36. 38.
- Hoyle, vi. 217. 218.
- Hucknall, v. 248.
- Hudibras, v. 217; viii. 30.
- Hudson, Edward, i. xviii. 49. 57. 67. 163.
- , Sir Robert, iii. 141.
- , the river, i. 166.
- Hugginson, v. 214.
- Hughes, ii. 153. 164. et passim; his "Pamphlet on the Greeks," iv. 37.
- , Mrs., ii. 153. et passim.
- , Colonel, v. 310.
- , James, translation into Greek Anacreontics of a "Drinking Song," v. 143.
- , Mary, ii. 190; iv. 158; v. 220; vii. 318. note, 338. 359; viii. 12.
- , Susan, ii. 345; viii. 13.
- Hull, Colonel, iv. 129.
- Humanitarians, the, ii. 265.
- "Human Life," v. 179.
- Humboldt, Baron von, iii. 149. 151; vi. 349;

- his opinion of the Egyptians, iii. 150; influence of climate on language, 267.
- Humburg, advantages of, vi. 338.
- Hume, Arthur, viii. 107. 122.
- , Captain, vii. 107.
- , David, "History of England," vi. 253; vii. 11; "Life of Alfred the Great," vi. 158.
- , Rev. Mr., iv. 148.
- , Dr. Thomas, and Sterling, anecdote of, vii. 168; character of, i. 107; his connection with Moore in his duel with Jeffrey, 201. et seq.; presented Tom Moore with a gift, instead of a legacy of 100*l.*, vii. 16; "The Epicurean," ii. 224; see also i. 79. 133. 209; ii. 314; iv. 75. 88. 260. 265. 303. 317. 338; v. 60. 79. 294. 300; vi. 45. 46. 64. 250. 318; vii. 312. et passim.
- , Mrs. Thomas, vii. 370.
- , Sir P., "Memoirs," iv. 74.
- Hummel, John N., vi. 154.
- Hummums, the, ii. 160. 258; iii. 4; viii. 245.
- Humorous Proclamation, i. 45.
- Humour, ii. 251.
- Humphrey, Colonel, ii. 172.
- Humphreys, iv. 243.
- "Hundred Pound Note," v. 169.
- Hungerford, Lady Margaret, iv. 179.
- Hungerfords, the, the mummies of the, iv. 179; sepulchres of, 132; their bodies preserved in pickle, and one of them tasted by an antiquarian, 132.
- Hunloke, Lady, iii. 103. 106. 107. 317.
- Hunt, Henry, i. xvi.
- , Leigh, i. 274; ii. 59. 108. 110. 253. 255. 256. 263. 321. 339. 340; iv. 20. 220; v. 87. 182. 244. 255. 262; vi. 71; viii. 122; "Byron and his Contemporaries," i. xxxvii. note A; "Feast of the Poets," ii. 59; viii. 156. 157; description of Moore, i. xxxiv. note A; letters from, to Moore, viii. 120. 156. 171. 210. 214. 235; on Moore's "Magdalen Hymns," ii. 108; his opinion of "Lalla Rookh," viii. 236.
- , Mrs., viii. 122. 212. 238.
- Hunter, iii. 332.
- , John, vi. 267; anecdote of, 85.
- , Mrs. Orby, i. 126.
- Huntley, Lord, ii. 162.
- Husenbeth, Rev. F. C., vii. 21.
- "Hush, Hush!" v. 96.
- Huskisson, Right Hon. William, v. 199. 201; vi. 126; his ministerial explanation at Liverpool, v. 261.
- Hutchinson, C., iii. 310.
- , Lord, i. 124; ii. 156. 157. 306. 307. 310. 311; iii. 142.
- , Kit, ii. 156.
- , Provost, v. 150; vi. 265; and Doyle, anecdote of, 160; lines on, iii. 220.
- , Miss Prudentia, made a captain of dragoons, iii. 220.
- , Mrs., iv. 97. 210.
- Hutton, iii. 324.
- Huxley, Colonel, iii. 310. 319. 332. 334.
- Hyde, "Philo-Judæus," iv. 42; "Religio Persarum," 42.
- Park, iii. 295.
- Hyder Ali, v. 224.
- "I come from a land in the sun-bright deep," iv. 229.
- "If e'er I forget thee," deficient line in, i. 318.
- "— thou'lt be mine," ii. 110.
- "— thou wouldst have this heart pronounce thee fair," v. 51.
- "I have found out a gift for my Erin," v. 162.
- "— love but thee," v. 84.
- Ilam Churchyard, viii. 153.
- Hall, v. 214. note.
- Ilchester, Lady, ii. 203. 259; v. 233.
- Lord, ii. 203; v. 283; vi. 37. 238. 273. 309.
- "Il Crepuscolo and Aurora," by Michael Angelo, iii. 42.
- Ilissus, the, iii. 54.
- "I'll think of you waking and sleeping," i. 351; second verse to, 323.
- "Illustrious bonfire," story of, respecting a work of Moore's, v. 276.
- "Il Medico Ciabattino," iii. 38.
- "— Prigionero de Newgate," iii. 25.
- "— Turco," iv. 150.
- "Imbonatus de Moribus Tragicorum," ii. 223.
- Impey, Sir Elijah, ii. 189.
- Imposta, I., iii. 46.
- "Impromptu," iii. 300.
- on the repeal of the Witchcraft Act in Ireland, vii. 282.
- "I'm told, dear Moore, your lays are sung," iii. 302.
- "— wearing awa'," iii. 223.
- "Ina of Sigiswold," viii. 171.
- "Incantation of the Bubble Spirit," v. 105. 108. 109.
- "Incarnatus est," ii. 179.
- Incense, used at Holland House, brought from the north of Persia, ii. 311.
- Inchbald, Mrs., ii. 85; "Modern Theatre," presented to Mrs. Moore, by Messrs. Longman, 84; "Such things are," 244.
- Inledon, Charles, i. 95. 96. 97; knighted by the King of Dalkey, 44.
- Inconnu, tomb of the, iii. 136.
- "Index to the Rolls of the English Parliament," vii. 239.
- India used as a Scotch colony by Dundas, ii. 204.
- Bill, the, ii. 316.
- "Indian Minutes," ii. 188.
- Indians, the Oneida, i. 168.
- "In Genoa 'tis said that a jewel of yore," vi. 312.
- Ingerhouz and Frederick of Prussia, iii. 181.
- Inghis, Miss, iii. 301. 325. 339.
- , Sir Robert, vii. 260.
- Ingram, Mrs., v. 211. 257.
- Inisfallen, its beauty, iv. 114.
- "Innocence weeping the Death of a Snake," by Rany, iii. 360.
- Inscriptions on tombstones, iii. 284. 285.
- Installation of Lord Moira as Knight of the Garter, i. 295.
- Institute, the, ii. 307; iii. 10. 141. 142. 170.
- "Institutes of Calvin," ii. 168.
- "Insurrection of the Papers," viii. 121. 165.
- "In sweetest harmony, ii. 178; v. 105. 161.
- "Intercepted Letters, or the Twopenny Post Bag," i. 331. note. 332.
- "Intérieur d'une Etude," iii. 200.
- Inverary, viii. 45.
- Castle, viii. 46. 49.

- Inverness Castle, viii 162.
 "Ion," vii. 156.
 Iona, vii. 140; viii. 161. 177.
 "Iphigénie in Tauride," iii. 276.
 Ireland, i. et passim.
 — and the Irish Parliament, conversation on, iv. 56.
 —, excited state of the public mind in, v. 115.
 —, "History of," vi. 16. 43. 247. 309. 335; vii. 34. 37. 45. 63. 82. 148. 161. 164. 167. 175. 219. 250. 272. 296. 301. 319. 323. 325. 330. 361. 363. 364. 365; viii. 10. 17.
 —, population of, iv. 117.
 —, ruined between the Protestants and Roman Catholics, i. 231.
 —, unaccountable things in, iv. 237.
 "Ireneus," vi. 255.
 Irish, the, a people of tradition, dwelling for ever on the past, vii. 179.
 — Administrations, iv. 5.
 " — Airs," ii. 11.
 — Channel, the, viii. 89.
 — character, the, i. 261.
 — committee, the, i. 48.
 — defence of the King's reception, iv. 14; see also iii. 276.
 — Democrats, the, ii. 71.
 — deposition of a witness, vi. 198.
 — domestic economy, v. 206.
 — feeling for Buonaparte, iii. 258.
 " — Gentleman," vi. 328; vii. 12. 25. 28. 31. 60.
 — Gentlemen, the, iv. 116.
 — House of Commons, scene in, viii. 5.
 —, lower orders of, iv. 111.
 — MS. relating to the Brehon Laws, vi. 340.
 " — Melodies," i. xix. xxii; noticed in the "Monthly Review," 365; arrangements respecting the order of some of the songs, ii. 47; proposals for publishing, by subscription, a Latin translation of, vii. 43; reprinted in Philadelphia, ii. 110; translated into Polish, vii. 196; two Russian translations of, vi. 5; see also passim.
 " — Observer, The," iv. 182.
 — process of purchasing a horse, vii. 217.
 — pronunciation, vi. 131.
 " — Quarterly Review, The," i. xviii. note; extracts from, respecting Moore's appearance, manners, and conversation, i. xxxii. note A.
 — relief meeting in Paris, iii. 357.
 — Round Towers, letter to Moore about them, vi. 327.
 — State Trials, the, vii. 373.
 — stories, iii. 258.
 Irishism, iv. 240.
 Ironmonger, iv. 221, 222.
 Irvine, iii. 335. 339.
 Irving, Washington, his "Chronicles of Granada," vi. 64. 91; his "Columbus," v. 289; vi. 64. 91; description of an evening at Horace Twiss's, 115; his allusion to Moore in his description of Paradise, iv. 148; description of a bookseller's dinner, alluded to, iii. 252; his rapidity of composition, 211; introduced to Messrs. Longman by Moore, 349; his "Tales of a Traveller," iv. 208; "The Sketch Book," iii. 182; see also passim.
 Isabey, the, iii. 9.
 "Isagoge," ii. 149.
 "Isis and Osiris," ii. 86.
 Isleworth, iv. 287.
 Isola Bella, iii. 17.
 — del Pescatori, iii. 18.
 — di San Giulio, the, iii. 18.
 — Madre, iii. 17.
 "Italiana in Algeri," viii. 29.
 Italian and German women, their senses and imaginations, iii. 34.
 — Opera, the, iii. 89. 97. 111. 115. 117. 267. 303. 312. 314. 328. 333. 352, 353.
 — want of heart, iii. 40.
 Italy, Moore's visit to, iii. 3. et seq.
 " —, Revolutions of," by Debina, iii. 66.
 Ithaca, vi. 45.
 "Itinerary," vi. 347.
 "It is not the tear," vii. 352.
 Ivers, Miss, ii. 147.
 "I would tell her I love her," v. 53.
- J.
- "Jablonski," iii. 141. 164. 169. 171. 174. 186.
 "Jack," a clergyman who writes all Dr. Parr's letters, ii. 147.
 Jackson, iii. 3. 31. 53. 56. 58. 64. 65. 67. 69. 71. 74. 75. 77. 78. 82. 84. 85. 88. 89. 152. 296; "Agar," 83; "The Mothers," 78.
 —, Cyril, iv. 145.
 —, Randal, his speech in the House of Commons, vi. 88.
 —, William, of Exeter, "Memoirs" written by himself, ii. 195; vi. 163.
 —, the boxer, ii. 229, 230. 233; iv. 53. 58; vi. 72; showed Moore some letters of Lord Byron's, v. 269.
 "Jacqueline," viii. 180. and note, 184.
 Jamaica, ii. 182, 183; iii. 103; vii. 156; viii. 48. 165; station, the, ii. 29.
 James I., vii. 17. 368.
 — II., iii. 231; iv. 94. 148. 255.
 "Jane Shore" played by Miss Wemyss, i. 10.
 Janus Quadrifrons, Temple of, iii. 49.
 Jaqueline, ii. 39.
 Jardin Marbœuf, the, iii. 111. 113.
 — Suisse, the, iii. 365.
 Jay, ii. 250.
 Jean d'Acre, iii. 329.
 — d'Arc, iii. 225.
 — de Maurienne, St., iii. 85.
 — de Paris, iii. 255.
 "Jeanie Deans," the story of, communicated to Scott in an anonymous letter, iv. 333.
 Jebb, John (Bishop of Limerick), one of the speakers of the Historical Society, i. 51.
 "Je fais mes Farces," iii. 316.
 Jefferson, ii. 158; vii. 195. 198; "Memoirs and Correspondence," vi. 176.
 —, President, his civility to Mr. and Mrs. Merry, i. 162.
 Jeffrey, Francis, Lord, his duel with Moore, i. 203. et seq.; his article on "Lalla Rookh," ii. 131; his conversation with Moore on the Irish Bill, vi. 316; see also i. 52. 210; ii. 16. 26. 54. 67. 79. 101; iii. 350; iv. 156; vii. 344; his criticism on Modern Poetry, 366; epigram on, 367; his opinion of Epic writing, i. xxv; his opinion of Moore's "Sheridan," v. 7; visits America, vii. 164; letters from, to Moore, ii. 15. 25,

26. 39, 40, 41, 42. 53. 67. 78. 101. 138 ;
to Samuel Rogers, 13.
Jeffrey, Mrs., ii. 54 ; v. 7 ; vi. 183. 263 ; vii.
315.
Jeffries, Mr., v. 195.
Jekyll, Joseph, and Sir Whistler Webster, anecdote of, vi. 91 ; Epilogue to the "Miniature Picture," iv. 34 ; his account of his visit to the King, vi. 69 ; his account of Lord Erskine's strange history, 74 ; his joke, respecting the ceiling falling down at Lansdowne House, vii.
128 ; his sons, and the Duke of York, vi.
106 ; lines on the Emperor of China's hint to Lord Macartney, iv. 34 ; puns by,
163 ; v. 269 ; on an admirer of Bankes's
"Civil History of Rome," ii. 255 ; on Peat, v. 155 ; on the Russians eating tallow candles, vi. 257 ; punning epigram by, ii. 149 ; quotation by, v. 34 ; repartee of his, ii. 327 ; "Sage Chiankiti," v. 74 ; stories told by, vi. 76 ; of cheap living,
iv. 30 ; of hermetically sealed fiddlers,
31 ; of supplying families with sacred music from the waterworks at Chelsea, 30.
"Je le reçus avec tendresse," ii. 49.
"Jemappes, Battle of," by Horace Vernet,
iii. 234.
Jenkins, Billy, iv. 58.
Jenkinson, Mr., iv. 39.
Jenyns, Soame, ii. 198 ; "Origin of Evil,"
v. 142.
Jephson, Mr., iv. 110.
Jerdan, William, iv. 167 ; v. 158 ; vii. 244.
Jermyn Street, ii. 313.
Jerningham, iii. 348.
"Jerome, St.," by Correggio, iii. 82.
Jersey, Lady (Countess of), vi. 61.
——, Lord (Earl of), cause of his porter wishing to leave, ii. 232 ; see also passim.
"Jerpont Abbey," vii. 319.
Jerusalem, Panorama of, iii. 9.
Jesus, Church of, iii. 59.
"—— Christ," by Michael Angelo, iii.
35.
"Jeu de l'Amour et du Hazard," iii. 184.
Jeu d'esprit on a Mr. Aikin, ii. 209.
"Jeunesse de Henri V.," ii. 212.
"Jeune Werther," iii. 202.
"Jewess, The," vii. 154.
"Jews, History of the," vi. 226.
Jidd, Madame, iii. 204.
"Joan of Arc," viii. 277.
"Jobson of Dundee," v. 13.
Joddrel, i. 232 ; iii. 165.
——, Miss, i. 233.
"John, St.," by Parmigiano, iv. 79.
——, of Lateran, iii. 50. 59.
"——, the Baptist," by Fiancavelli,
iii. 43.
"——, the Evangelist, Head of,"
iii. 81.
—— of Gaunt, viii. 69.
"—— Bull Magazine, The," iii. 295 ; iv.
37. 65. 180. 182. 200. 212. 243.
Johnes of Harod, iv. 133.
——, Miss, iv. 82.
Johnson, Mr., ii. 250 ; iii. 141 ; v. 274.
——, Mrs., v. 274.
——, Benjamin, iii. 247 ; v. 212.
——, Captain, iii. 213.
——, Dr. Samuel, and Adam Smith, iv.
338 ; defended the licentiousness of Prior, i. xxvi ; definitions by, v. 269 ;
"Dictionary," 130 ; habit of, vi. x ;
his opinion that a new version of the Psalms must necessarily be bad, i. 284 ; review of Soame Jenyns' "Origin of Evil," v. 142 ; "Poets," iv. 130.
Johnson, Judge, vi. 129. 142. 146 ; appearance of, 144.
Johnsons, the, ii. 299.
Johnstone, Sir Alexander, ii. 335 ; vi. 196.
Joice, t. 88. 90. 131. 134. 158. 161 ; viii. 38. 39.
Joigny, iii. 12.
Jokes by Plunkett, v. 169 ; Lord Eldon,
203 ; Horace Twiss, vi. 53.
—— played upon the Mayor of Cork, ii.
209.
Jomelli, "Chaconne," ii. 206.
"Jonathan Wild," ii. 268.
Jones, ii. 268 ; v. 90. 91. 150. 158 ; vi. 188 ;
vii. 124. 182. 273 ; viii. 281.
——, Gale, ii. 269.
——, John, ii. 193.
——, Miss, v. 187.
——, Sir W., ii. 202. 277 ; vi. 283 ; "On the Liberties of the People," its various translations, ii. 146.
Jordan, Mrs., vii. 149.
Jortin, Dr., iv. 144 ; vi. 207 ; vii. 174 ; lines on, by Cowper, iii. 272.
"Joseph," opera of, iii. 197.
"—— Andrews," ii. 203. 208. 210. 211.
216.
Josephine, Empress, iii. 98.
Joss, Leopold, v. 99. 100.
Journal, the Freeman's, ii. 154.
"—— des Débats," v. 146 ; its vast expenses, 74.
"—— of Mr. Connor," iii. 97.
"—— to Stella," vi. 317.
"Journey into the next World," iv. 250.
"—— under Ground, The," iv. 132.
Jouy, iii. 318 ; "Sylla," 316.
Joy, Henry, ii. 178. 179. et passim ; an eternal quoter, 179.
——, Miss, ii. 243 ; iv. 130 ; vi. 244. 245 ;
vii. 137. 215.
——, Mrs., iv. 130 ; vi. 242. 244. 245 ; vii.
137. 215.
Joyce, Rev. J., pun of, ii. 153.
"Judas Maccabeus," iv. 31.
"Judith," by Guido, iii. 51.
"Jugement de Midas," iii. 176.
"—— de Paris," iii. 182. 276.
Juliet's tomb, viii. 188.
"Julius II.," by Raphael, iii. 61.
Jullien, M., editor of the "Revue Encyclopédique," iii. 249.
Jumillac, Madame de, iv. 91.
Jungfrau, the, iii. 16.
"Junius," iv. 170. 303 ; evidence of his identity with Sir Philip Francis, ii. 188 ;
vi. 65.
"—— Brutus," ii. 232.
Juno, Temple of, iii. 50.
"Jupiter presenting the Cup of Immortality to Psyche," by Camuccini, iii. 63.
—— Stator, iii. 49.
—— Tonaus, iii. 49 ; columns of, 49.
Jura, the, iii. 13.
—— Mountains, the, i. xv.
"Juvenal," ii. 155. 156 ; translations from,
by Dryden and Gifford, ii. 246.

K.

Kalmes, Lord, "Julia de Rubigny" written at his request, v. 8.

- Kalkbrenner, v. 316.
 Kane, vii. 97.
 Kanturk, Castle of, iv. 113.
 Kay, Mr., v. 8.
 —, Mrs., v. 8.
 Kean, Edmund, ii. 11. 320; v. 157; vi. 69, 70; vi. 128.
 —, Mrs., vi. 69.
 Kearney, Jane, ii. 201.
 —, Mrs., ii. 182.
 —, Mrs. T., viii. 197.
 —, Dr., i. 50.
 Keate, Colonel, v. 114.
 Keating, Mrs., vi. 134, 135.
 Keats, John, vii. 366.
 Keene, iv. 84.
 "Keepsake, The," v. 272. 314, 315; vi. 296.
 "Keep your tears for me," iii. 305.
 Kegworth, i. 286. 297. 299. 328. 329. 350. 360; ii. 88. 102; v. 211; viii. 105. 108, 109, 110. 112, 113, 124, 133. 144.
 Keir, Sir W., v. 48.
 Keith, Lady, v. 8. 10. 12, 13. 183; vii. 262.
 Keller, iv. 100; vii. 75; good things said by him, 181.
 Kelly, Dr., ii. 65.
 —, Joseph, vii. 99. 355; a guest at Mr. Moore's, i. 25; good thing said by ii. 251; Moore's godfather, 251.
 —, Michael, his music to "The Gipsy Prince," i. 123; rather an imposer than a composer, 123.
 —, Miss, anecdote of, iv. 104; her "Juliet" very bad, 22.
 Kelso, iv. 330. 339.
 Kemble, Charles, ii. 357; iv. 84. 87; v. 82, 83; vi. 39. 42. 76. 86. 92. 109. 311; viii. 223; opinion of Kean's "Othello," vi. 70.
 —, Mrs. Charles, vi. 42.
 —, John, ii. 122; v. 13; viii. 149; anecdote of, 6.
 —, Mrs. John, iv. 329.
 —, Miss Fanny, vi. 86. 92. 101. 110. 210; vii. 305.
 —, Stephen, iv. 166; story of him and a dwarf, ii. 152.
 Kemp, Sir James, vii. 331.
 Ken, Bishop, iv. 278.
 Kenilworth, ii. 147.
 —, Chateau de," iii. 340.
 Kenninge, iii. 290.
 Kenmare, iv. 97. 115. 119; v. 97. 309.
 —, Lady, iii. 310. 329; iv. 113, 114, 115. 116. 119. 299, 300; vii. 344.
 —, Lord, iii. 310. 329; iv. 87. 113, 114, 115. 116. 118. 299, 300; vii. 314; viii. 269.
 Kennure, viii. 268.
 Kennedy, Dr., vi. 25. 71; vii. 20.
 —, Lady, ii. 335; vii. 20.
 Kennis, vii. 169.
 Kenny, James, "False Alarms," viii. 19. note; his opinion of the character of Joseph Surface, iii. 127; his repartee to Moore on the Bermuda business, 169; impression made by Moore's "Irish Gentleman" on him, vii. 12; "Le Present du Prince," iii. 292; "Love, Law, and Physic," viii. 19. note; note to Moore, vii. 264; "Raising the Wind," viii. 19. note; "Sweethearts and Wives," 19. note; wrote "Raising the Wind" in seven days, iii. 169; see also passim.
 —, Mrs., iii. 130. 243. 245.
 Kenrick, vii. 217. 335.
 Kensington, ii. 324; v. 129; vi. 43. 105. 123; vii. 168. 271.
 Kensington, Lady, iii. 365.
 —, Lord, iii. 305. 337; iv. 78. 90.
 —, Palace, iv. 28.
 Kent, H. R. H. the Duchess of, iv. 92; vi. 189. 214; vii. 95; her style of singing, vi. 154.
 Kenyon, Lord, ii. 304; iv. 193; v. 316; vi. 76; anecdotes of, iv. 193; inaccurate inscription on his tomb, 35.
 —, Sir Lloyd, ii. 298.
 Keppel, George, vii. 6.
 —, Major, v. 240. 241. 265. 266. 302.
 Kerry, ii. 81; iv. 112. 120, 121; viii. 6.
 —, Earls of, iv. 138.
 —, Knight of, iv. 120. 137. 140, 141. 150. 155. 292. 316. 327; v. 170. 360; vi. 53. 111.
 —, Lady, iv. 119; vii. 63. 127. 152. 250. 306. 336. 361; viii. 12. 20.
 —, Lord, iv. 66. 119. 121. 128. 240; v. 128. 194. 196. 207. 240. 242. 243. 305; vi. 6. 7. 191. 217. 218. 221. 249. 259. 306, 307; vii. 28. 127. 152. 165, 166. and note, 167; his death, 166. note; "Life of Sir William Petty," 152.
 Kerrystone buttons, and poetry on them, in a genealogy of the Earls of Kerry, iv. 138.
 Keswick, vi. 331; viii. 89. 114, 115, 116.
 —, vale, viii. 123.
 Kevin's Church, St., v. 24.
 Kildare, vi. 142.
 —, Bishop of (Hon. Charles D. Lindsay), ii. 356; vii. 239.
 —, Club, the, vi. 150; vii. 122.
 Kilfaue, vi. 134; viii. 196.
 Kilkenny, i. 305. 307; iv. 102; v. 23, 29. 31. 37. 212; vi. 135, 136; vii. 27. and note, 91. 96. 103. 110. 130. 246. 256. 269.
 —, Castle, vi. 135.
 —, Theatre, the, iv. 18.
 —, theatricals, good criticism on, vii. 256.
 Killarney, i. 259. 269; iv. 96, 97. 112, 113, 114, 115. 120. 123. 301; vi. 12. 336; vii. 228; viii. 268, 269.
 Killcash, iv. 103.
 "Killing no Murder," vi. 314.
 Kilmainham, vii. 189. 192.
 —, Lodge, i. 333.
 King, Benjamin, vi. 83.
 —, Colonel, iii. 200.
 —, Dr., v. 53.
 —, John, iii. 273.
 —, Lady, Lord Byron's daughter Ada, ii. 127; iv. 59. 224; v. 76. 81; vii. 156, 157, 158.
 —, Lord, "Anecdotes of his own Times," ii. 240; his application to Moore of a line from the squib addressed to him in the "Times," v. 81; Ratcliffe orations, ii. 241; "The Toast," 240; see also 127. 203. 240. 272. 303. 317; iii. 175. 218. 320; iv. 58. 186. 207. 224. 292; v. 52. 76. 181. 265; vii. 55. et passim.
 —, Mrs., iii. 129.
 —, Fiddlefred, vi. 252.
 —, John, iv. 135.
 —, of Cluhs, the, iv. 54.
 King's College, division among the managers of, alluded to, v. 318.
 —, College, Cambridge, vi. 328.
 Kingston, Caroline, iii. 196. 219. 220. 223, 224, 225. 227. 229.
 —, Lady, iii. 219. 220. 223. 224. 227, 228, 229; viii. 222.
 —, Lord, iii. 219. 220. 223. 224. 227,

228, 229. 347; his motion on Tithes, iv. 173.
 Kingston House, iii. 345.
 Kinnaird, Douglas, his connection with the Byron "Memoirs," iv. 187. et seq.; see also ii. 157. 232. 234. 266. 310; iii. 193. 196. 199. 295. 296. 347; iv. 45. 84. 176. 187. 188. 189. 190. 198. 332; v. 183. 189. 234. 271. 304; vi. 69; viii. 45. 202.
 ———, Lady, viii. 164.
 ———, Lord, i. 250; ii. 61; iii. 19. 21. 22. 83. 84. 115. 116. 120. 155; v. 70. 71; vi. 69; vii. 176. 313; viii. 164.
 Kinnoul, Lord, iv. 173.
 Kinsella, Dr., vii. 361.
 Kirk, iii. 288, 289. 290. 358. 360; vi. 207; vii. 239.
 ——— Alloway, viii. 161.
 Kirkby Mallory, iii. 114.
 Kirwan, ii. 201. 205.
 Kitchener, Mr., vi. 115. 256.
 ———, Mrs., vi. 115.
 Klopstock, iv. 50.
 Kneller, Sir Godfrey, v. 92.
 Knight, i. 234; iii. 347.
 ———, Andrew, iv. 206.
 ———, Gally, v. 247; pun addressed to, by Lord Wellesley, v. 222.
 ———, Payne, iv. 53. 54. 55. 86; v. 138; deafness, bon-mot on, iv. 23.
 Knighton, Sir William, v. 160.
 ———, "Knights of Northampton, The," ii. 131.
 Knoeklofty, iv. 103.
 Knolles, Richard, ii. 323; his "History of the Turks," vii. 18.
 Knowell, ii. 286.
 ———, "Know your own mind," ii. 253.
 Knox, Mrs., vi. 45.
 Knogle, v. 92.
 Knuyvet, William, iii. 311.
 Kock, Paul De, iii. 297.
 Koerner, vi. 155. note.
 Kozeluch, ii. 65. 206. 300; iv. 36.
 Krasinski, Count, vii. 196.
 Kriloff, "Fables," v. 5.
 Kyle, remark made by him upon the "Loves of the Angels," iv. 101.

L.

L., Lord, epitaph on, v. 252.
 L. E. L., iv. 294.
 Labédoyère, tomb of, iii. 147.
 ———, "La Bella per Decreto," pronounced by Napoleon the finest woman in Venice, iii. 28.
 "La belle Termière," iv. 9.
 Lablache, Signor, vii. 154.
 Labonne, M., iii. 309.
 Laborde, Mad., iii. 91.
 Labouchere, iii. 155. et passim.
 ———, Mrs., iii. 140.
 Labourdonnaye, M., iii. 363.
 La Briche, Madame, iii. 338.
 ——— Butte, iii. 126. et passim.
 ———, "Caccia di Diana," by Domenichino, iii. 60.
 ———, Calnea, ii. 206.
 ———, Canné, i. 234.
 ———, "Capricciosa Penitita," iii. 19.
 Lacépède, M., ii. 231.
 La Chapelle, iii. 149.
 Lacock Abbey, ii. 217. 282; vi. 280; vii. 77. 296.

"La Coquette Corriée," iii. 11.
 Lacretelle, his strange style, instances of it, iii. 336; "History of the Wars for Religion in France," 3. 6.
 "L'Actrice en Voyage," iv. 13.
 "Lady Fair," i. 121.
 ———, "of the Lake, The," viii. 89. note.
 LaCaus, Dr., iii. 212.
 Lafayette, General, Moore introduced to, iii. 117.
 "La Festin de Balthazar," by Martinelli, iii. 43.
 Laffans, Dr., lii. 207.
 Lafitte, iii. 8. et passim.
 Lafond, lii. 323.
 La Fontaine, a Conte in the manner of, written by Moore, i. 67.
 ———, "Forêt Enchantée," iii. 327.
 ———, Fosse, i. 67; Moore's French master, 30.
 ———, "Gazza Ladra," the music in the trial scene, iii. 328.
 Lago Maggiore, iii. 17; viii. 185.
 Lagunes, the, iii. 228.
 Laidlaw, William, iv. 336. 342; his "Lucy's Flitting," 342; vii. 171.
 Laine, iv. 30.
 La Jeune Femme Colère, iii. 308.
 Lake, J. W., lines on Anastasia Moore, iii. 107; note to Moore, 98.
 ———, General, iii. 221; vii. 213.
 ———, of Killarney, the, its beauty, i. 261.
 ———, "of the Dismal Swamp," v. 158.
 "Lalla Rookh," the subject of, furnished by Rogers, i. xxiv; its beauties and defects, xxv; fête at Berlin, particulars of, iii. 217; French translation of, 116; lines addressed to the author of, vii. 265; Lord John Russell's opinion of, i. xxiii; picture of, by Stepanoff, v. 66; announced as a ballet at the Opera, vii. 17; raffled to raise money for the repairs of a chapel, v. 31; translated into French by a M. Arnaud, who did not understand a word of English, iii. 183. 218; translated into Persian, 167; verses upon, by Mr. Sneyd, 253.
 Lally, ii. 282.
 Lamartine, Alphonse, slight thrown upon him by Moore in the "Edinburgh," iii. 202.
 Lamb, Charles, anecdotes of, vi. 249; his eulogy on a dashing dissipated fellow, v. 317; his "Letters of Elia," iv. 51; pun of his, 50; remark of his to Elliston, iii. 136; repartees of, iv. 221; vi. 85.
 ———, Dr., iii. 134. 277.
 ———, George, iii. 259. 294; vi. 27. 201.
 ———, Mrs. George, iii. 313. 326; vi. 27.
 ———, Hon. H., v. 310. note.
 ———, John, iii. 146.
 ———, Lady Caroline, ii. 357; iii. 147.
 ———, Miss, i. 183.
 ———, William (Lord Melbourne), i. 183.
 Lambart, i. 48.
 ———, Mrs., daughter of Sir John Stevenson, ii. 48.
 Lambert, Mr., nicknamed Pyramid, iv. 242.
 ———, Mrs., ii. 81.
 Lambton, Lady, v. 177.
 ———, Lady L., iv. 283.
 ———, Lord, iii. 201. et passim.
 La Mira, lii. 24. 25.
 "— Mort au Tasse," iii. 198.
 ———, Mothe-le-Vayer, iii. 131.
 "L'Amour," iii. 305.
 "Lampe Marveilleuse," iii. 329.

- Lamprey, Alderman, vii. 120.
 Lancastrian Society, the, ii. 97.
 Landgravines, the, vi. 205.
 Landini, Taddeo, copy of Michael Angelo's statue of "Christ embracing the Cross," iii. 41.
 Landon, Miss, vii. 19.
 Landor, Walter Savage, described, vii. 224.
 Landseer, his "Sabæan Researches," v. 113.
 Lane, Captain, iii. 225.
 Lanesborough, Lady, iii. 104.
 Langbecus, vii. 84.
 Langdale, Lord, vii. 147. 152.
 Langford, Mr., iv. 179.
 Langlés, M., "Norden," iv. 13.
 Langley Priory, i. 316.
 Langrishe, viii. 27. note.
 Languedoc language, iii. 215.
 Lansdowne, first Marquess of, anecdote of, vi. 341.
 ———, Marchioness of, her amiability and kindness to Moore and his family, iv. 60; v. 305; to Mrs. Moore, ii. 166. 247; iv. 284; v. 265; vi. 23; vii. 336. 339; her personal attention to the poor, v. 141; her remark on Mrs. Moore's beauty, iv. 142.
 ———, Marquess of, anxious for Moore to settle in the country near him, ii. 89; extract from his letter to Moore relative to the cottage at Sloperton, iii. 366; offered to become security for Moore in the Bermuda business, ii. 341; placed 1000*l.* in Mr. Longman's hands to settle the Bermuda claims on Moore, iii. 281; appointed Lord Lieutenant of the county, v. 229, 230; at Benjamin Constant's, vi. 270; becoming a reformer, iii. 201; arguments for Moore's accepting a pension from the Government, vii. 97; announces the grant of a pension of 300*l.* a year to him, 108; his arrangements to visit Ireland with Moore, iv. 97; his admiration of Moore's address to the Limerick electors, vi. 307; his conversation with Moore on Politics, and the state of Ireland, 164. 342; delighted with the "Loves of the Angels," 30; iv. 41; his character, vi. 163; v. 231. 241; vii. 204; his objections to Moore's "Sheridan," v. 16; his opinions, according to Deville, 70; his position and prospects in the Ministry, 244; story of a Fitzmaurice claiming his relationship, and coming to beg of him, vi. 88; his letter to Moore, accepting the dedication of his works, vii. 279; mistake of his porter, v. 305; received a statement from Horton respecting Moore's money for the "Memoirs," and Moore's explanation thereon, iv. 223; Shiel introduced to him by Moore, vi. 205; his repugnance to a new creation of peers, 269; on coalitions, ii. 264; his last interview with Moore, i. xxx.
 ———, The Marquess and Marchioness of, iv. 129.
 ——— House, ii. 314. et passim.
 Lanti, Duchess, iii. 78.
 Lanza, and Reynolds, anecdote of, iii. 243.
 Lanzi, "History of Painting," iii. 61.
 Laocoon, The, iii. 48. 50. 54.
 "Laodamia to Protesilaus, Epistle of," iv. 276.
 La Palisse, iii. 86.
 "La Place," vi. 50.
 "Lara," the death of, exquisite, ii. 39.
 Larcher, "Herodotus," iii. 130.
 Larcom, Mr., vii. 232.
 Lardner, Dr., his "Cabinet Cyclopædia," vi. 247; his remark on predestination, iv. 262.
 "L'Arnaut Bossa," iii. 304.
 La Roche-foucauld, vi. vi.
 — Rochelle, iv. 3.
 "Larry and Jacky," viii. 180. note.
 "L'Artiste," iii. 303.
 "Las Casas," iv. 131.
 Lascelles, iv. 232. 294.
 ———, the, v. 187. 288.
 La Servaute Justifiée, iii. 7.
 "La Souche's bank," viii. 107.
 "Last Judgment," the, by Michael Angelo, iii. 232.
 "—— Rose of Summer, The," vii. 8.
 Latham, iv. 292. 327; v. 296; vi. 316.
 Latin, different pronunciations of, v. 277.
 ——— prose thesis, written at Lambeth by all pluralists, iv. 60.
 ——— Verse, and the Fellows of Trinity College, Dublin, i. 35.
 Latinus, Latinus, vi. 340.
 Latopolis, Temple of, iii. 143.
 Latouche, iii. 337.
 ———, Lady Cecilia, iv. 125.
 ———, Mrs., i. 88.
 Latrobe, Rev. J. A., "Collection of Sacred Music," ii. 152.
 Lattin, iii. 219. et passim.
 Laud, Archbishop, by Vandyke, vi. 109; his conduct on the condemnation of Prynne, falsely stated in Neal's "History of the Puritans," iv. 159.
 Lauder, vii. 174.
 Lauderdale, Lord, i. 250. et passim.
 Laurence, "Book of Enoch," iv. 13.
 Lausanne, viii. 185.
 Lauzun, Duc de, "Memoirs," iii. 316.
 Laval, M., iv. 231.
 Lavalette, iii. 273.
 ———, Madame, iii. 125.
 La Vattay, iii. 13.
 Laveno, iii. 18.
 "La Vestale," iii. 11. 271; vi. 250.
 Lavington, Lord, iv. 318.
 ——— Down, iv. 275.
 "La Visite à Bedlam," iii. 105.
 "—— Volière de Frère Philippe," iii. 150.
 Law, iii. 216; iv. 148. 287.
 ———, the Misses, iv. 195.
 Law's money plan, anecdote of, iii. 217.
 Lawes, v. 311.
 Lawless, John, v. 314; vi. 150.
 Lawley, Sir Robert, iii. 39. 79.
 Lawrence, Dr., his remarks on Moore's "Anacreon," i. 99.
 ———, Sir Thomas, his portrait of "Canning," v. 65; "Emperor of Austria," iii. 57; "Gonsalvi," full length of, 57; "Head of Ghentz," 57; his collection of curious and valuable drawings, vi. 95; "George IV.," iii. 349; his likeness of Canova, 71; his opinion on certain pictures, vi. 56, 57, and note; on young Napoleon, iii. 71; "Prince Blucher," 57; sketch of Napoleon's son, 69; story of a "Peniers" offered to the King, vi. 92; "The Daughter of Prince Metternich as Hebe," iii. 57; his "Pope," 57.
 ———, Miss, i. 367; ii. 30, 31.

- Lawrence, St., iii. 136.
 "Lay of the Last Minstrel," iv. 330.
 Lazare, St., prison, iii. 182.
 Leach, anecdote of, iii. 12.
 Leader, Mr., his speech, iv. 113.
 Leake, Colonel, v. 268.
 Leamington, ii. 147. 149. 155. 173.
 —, Spa, ii. 145.
 Learning of the older writers accounted for, iii. 131.
 Leatherhead, iv. 221. 312.
 Leaves, Rev Mr., and "Robin Gray," ii. 180; vi. xviii.
 Lebanon, Mount, v. 289.
 Le Bas, Mr., ii. 315.
 Leckie, "Balance of Power," ii. 272; hints to the Sovereigns of Europe on Marriage, 275.
 Lecky, Colonel, vi. 135.
 Le Clerc, "Russia," ii. 323.
 "— Colonel," iii. 198.
 Lectures on poetry and music, projected by Moore, i. 331.
 "Leda and Jupiter," iii. 26.
 "Leda and Nymphs," by Correggio, iii. 126.
 "Le Devin du Village," iii. 10.
 Ledway, vi. 337.
 Lee, Peter, vi. 138.
 —, Rev. Thomas, his letter to Moore, vii. 358.
 —, Miss, iii. 238; "Leaves," ii. 220; "The Chapter of Accidents," 173.
 Leech, William, iii. 286. 290.
 Lees, ii. 214.
 Leeson, Henry, iii. 208. 269. 337.
 —, Mrs., iii. 103.
 Lefanu, Rev. Joseph, ii. 145. 148; viii. 249. 252; a friend of Whyte's, i. 10.
 —, Mrs., Sheridan's sister, letter to, from Moore, viii. 247; the image of Sheridan, ii. 145.
 —, Miss, "Beloved of Heaven, how passing bright," vii. 276; her verses in praise of the "Loves of the Angels," iv. 43; letter to, from Moore, viii. 251; verses on reading the "Loves of the Angels," vii. 276.
 "Legends," v. 277. 291.
 Legge, Mr., iv. 43.
 Legh, Mr., v. 22. 24.
 —, Mrs., v. 23. 25.
 Le Grand's "Fabliaux," vi. 287.
 —, Madlle., iv. 9.
 Leibnitz, happy application of a classical quotation to Bayle, v. 90.
 Leicester, i. 130. et passim.
 —, Earl of, iii. 242.
 —, House, vii. 212.
 —, Races, the, vii. 60.
 Leigh, Captain, ii. 313.
 —, Peter, account of searching for crocodile mummies, ii. 254.
 —, Hon. Mrs., her letter to Lord Byron, alluded to, protesting against his leaving her so much of his property, v. 271; Moore introduced to her, iv. 315.
 —, Miss, v. 52.
 Leinster organisation, the, iv. 117.
 —, Duchess of, iv. 55; v. 156; vi. 148.
 —, Duke of, his letter to Moore, vi. 164.
 —, House, vi. 137.
 Leith, Lady Augusta, iii. 99. et passim.
 Letrim, Lady, v. 299.
 —, Lord, v. 299; vi. 33.
 Leland, Thomas, "History of Ireland," iv. 142; "Philip," i. 34.
 "Le Légs," iii. 11.
 "— Lépreux de la Cité d'Aoste," iii. 12.
 "— Marchant," vi. 349; vii. 3. 10.
 Lemon, Lady Charlotte, ii. 244. et passim.
 —, Sir Charles, ii. 244. et passim.
 —, Robert, his remark on the continuation of Historical Works, vii. 195.
 Lemoyne, "A Sleeping Nymph and Faun," iii. 360.
 Lending money, story of, iii. 101.
 Lennox, Colonel, his duel with the Duke of York, i. 37.
 "L'Ennui," iii. 200.
 Lens, Serjeant, iv. 128; vi. 283.
 Leone, ii. 160.
 Leopold, "Galileo," iii. 23; "Petrarch," 23.
 —, Prince, iii. 112. et passim.
 Lepanto, iv. 216.
 —, Gulf of, v. 265.
 "Le Paris de Surenné," iv. 13.
 Leprechaun, ii. 64. 65.
 "Le Rossignol," iii. 10. 90.
 —, Roy, iii. 210.
 —, Roy, "Lettres Philosophiques sur l'Intelligence et la Perfectibilité des Animaux," vii. 48.
 "Les Amours de Camille," iii. 332.
 "— Comédiens de Paris," iii. 321.
 "— Deux Manèges," iii. 337.
 "— Etourdis," the scandal scene, thought to have given the hint to Sheridan, iii. 7.
 Leslie, iii. 278. et passim.
 —, Professor, vi. 264. 349.
 —, Sir R., iv. 121.
 "Le Solitaire," iv. 4.
 "Les Pages du Duc de Vendôme," iii. 159.
 "— Petits Acteurs," iv. 13.
 "— Rousses," iii. 13.
 Lessert, M. de, iii. 333.
 "Les Voitures versées," vi. 283.
 "Let Erin remember the day," i. 58.
 Lethbridge, Sir Thomas, vii. 350.
 "Letter from a Corporal in the Patriotic Army, after its defeat and dispersion," iv. 325.
 —, to Francis, ii. 190.
 —, to the students of Trinity College, alluded to, i. 56.
 —, to Thomas Moore, Esq., on the subject of the School for Scandal," v. 55.
 Letters, i. 217; ii. 3; viii. 37. et passim.
 —, of condolence, useless, ii. 71.
 "Let the bright Seraphim," vii. 241.
 Letton, Dr., iv. 125.
 "Lettre Philosophiques sur l'Intelligence et la Perfectibilité des Animaux," vii. 48. and note.
 "— Provinciales," vi. 210. 258.
 Lever, vi. 152.
 Leveson, Lady Francis, "Hernani," vi. 210.
 —, Lord Francis, iii. 200. et passim.
 Levi, Duc de, iv. 256. 270. 271.
 Levins, iii. 294.
 Lewesdon Hill, ii. 202.
 Lewis, Frankland, ii. 193. et passim.
 —, Mrs. Frankland, ii. 193. et passim.
 —, Matthew G., his knowledge of stage effects, ii. 56; account of his visit to Scotland, vii. 45; congratulated Moore on having got a situation in America, 46; contrasted with Moore, i. xvii; first - set Scott to try his hand at poetry, iv. 333; his remarks to Moore, on letters and epistles, viii. 54; letters from, to Moore, 43. 46. 54; unwilling to die, ii. 301; cause of his death, 183.

- "L'Histoire du Système," iii. 216.
- "L'Homme à Trois Visages," iii. 311.
- "— entre le Vice et la Vertu," iv. 319.
- Lhuyd, Humphrey, vii. 369.
- Lichfield, Bishop of, vii. 245.
- Liddell, vii. 101.
- Liddell, vii. 323.
- Lidwill, George, ii. 81.
- Lieven, iii. 309; iv. 168.
- , Prince, v. 168.
- "Life of Burke," iv. 209.
- "— of Byron," article on the second volume of, in the "Quarterly Review," vi. 166; conversation between Moore and Hobhouse on, v. 76; second volume of, attacked in the "Times," vi. 167.
- "— of Lord Edward Fitzgerald," vi. 184. 216; Moore and Lord John Russell's conversation on, 208.
- "— of John Russell," ii. 343; iii. 6.
- "— of William Russell," vi. 215.
- "— of Sheridan," ii. 152. et passim.
- Light, Captain, iii. 333; v. 171.
- , Mrs., v. 171.
- "Like him who doomed," v. 97.
- Liker, the Demoiselles, ii. 326.
- Lilford, Lady, vi. 190; vi. 168. 258.
- , Lord, vii. 10. 168.
- Lilies, their introduction to Guernsey, ii. 183.
- Lill, Godfrey, ii. 280.
- "Limbo dei Santi Padri, The," by Angiolo Bronzino, iii. 40. 78.
- Limerick, Moore's proposed election for, vi. 279-305; address to the electors of, 305.
- , Bishop of, iv. 224.
- , Lord, ii. 348. et passim.
- , Union, the, vi. 303. 305.
- Lincoln, Bishop of, vii. 26. note.
- , Lord, v. 156.
- Lind, Jenny, viii. 28.
- Lindsay, Lady Anne, ii. 180.
- , Lady Charlotte, iv. 220. et passim.
- Linen Board, the, i. 308; viii. 26. note, 27. note.
- "Lines addressed to the Author of 'Lalla Rookh,'" vii. 265.
- by Luttrell, v. 114.
- by William Spencer, viii. 192.
- "— on Moore's Poem, on receiving an Inkstand from Crabbe," vii. 282.
- "— to Lady H.," vi. 209. note.
- "— to Sir Hudson Lowe," quoted by "The Examiner," ii. 183.
- "— upon John Allen Parke," iv. 33.
- Lingard, Dr., iv. 138; vii. 368.
- Linley, Mrs., ii. 174.
- , Miss, ii. 173. et passim.
- , Ozias, vi. 111.
- , William, ii. 178. 287. "Shakespeare Music," 212.
- Linwood, Miss, her Exhibition, iv. 85.
- Lippe, Count la, portrait of, v. 104.
- Lippi, Filippo, iii. 41.
- Lipsius, vi. 311.
- Liptrap, Amella, v. 277.
- Lisbon, i. 137. et passim.
- Lisburne, Lord, iii. 305.
- Lismore Castle, iv. 103.
- Lisse, "Portrait Charmant," v. 163.
- Lister, Mr., vi. 45.
- Listers, the, vi. 197. 243. 346.
- Liston, ii. 356. et passim.
- Listowel, Lady, iv. 220. et passim.
- , Lord, iii. 345. et passim.
- , Bridge, iv. 120.
- Listz, Franz, his wonderful performance, iv. 206.
- "L'Italiana in Algieri," iii. 62. et passim.
- "Literary Chronicle, The," iv. 31.
- , Club, the, v. 283.
- , Dinner at Bentley's, vii. 244.
- "— Examiner, The," iv. 98.
- , Fund, the, v. 61. et passim.
- , Fund Chambers, the, vii. 319.
- "— Gazette, The," ii. 277. 332.
- , Institution, v. 57.
- , men and political patronage, i. xiii.
- , Union, the, vi. 261.
- "Literature of the South," ii. 42. 43.
- Litta, iii. 40. 59.
- , Duchesse, iii. 309.
- "Little, Mr.," iii. 170; viii. 77.
- "— Man and little Soul," i. 337.
- "— May-fly, the sun's in the sky," ii. 182.
- "Little's Poems," i. xxvi. et passim.
- Littleton, Lord, iv. 251; v. 288.
- , Mrs., iv. 291.
- Litton, Dr., v. 85.
- Liverpool, i. 128. et passim.
- , Lord, anecdote of, iv. 39; as a speaker, v. 146; made the Catholic claims an open question in his Cabinet, vi. 3; sent for a copy of "Captain Rock" on the day of publication, iv. 178.
- , Packet, the, iii. 248.
- "Lives of Eminent Persons," vii. 67.
- Livia, Baths of, iii. 66.
- Livius, iii. 113. et passim.
- Livy, iii. 24.
- Lixnaw, iv. 119.
- Llandaff, Bishop of, v. 224; vi. 119.
- , Lord, iv. 123.
- Llangollen, iii. 290. et passim.
- Lloyd, Dr., vii. 101.
- , Miss, "Sketches of Bermuda," vii. 288.
- , Rufus, first symptoms of his madness, ii. 287.
- Loch, Mr., vii. 272.
- "Lochauer," i. 324.
- "Lochiel," ii. 214. 216.
- Loch Katrine, viii. 161.
- "Lock and Key," the, iv. 7.
- Locke, ii. 216. et passim.
- , Mrs., iii. 102. et passim.
- , Anne, vi. 220; vii. 30.
- , John, and Sir Isaac Newton, correspondence between them, iv. 154.
- "—, John, Life of," vi. 54; original letter of his, iv. 153.
- , Sarah, vi. 165. 220.
- , Selina, iv. 251. et passim.
- , William, iii. 8.
- Lockhart, Captain, v. 125.
- , John Gibson, iv. 334; his "Life of Scott," i. vii.
- , Mrs., iv. 330. et passim.
- Lockington, viii. 104.
- Lockitts, the, iii. 333. 334.
- Lockwood, Mr., vi. 32.
- Lodgings at a maison de santé, iii. 119.
- Lodi, Bridge of, iii. 83.
- Logan, vi. 206.
- "Lo gi," by Raphael, iii. 55.
- Logier, ii. 312.

Lohort Castle, iv. 111. 113.
 Loire, the, iii. 86.
 "Lollius," vii. 247.
 Lombardi, the, iii. 25.
 London, i. 72. et passim.
 —, Bishop of, ii. 214. et passim.
 —, Institution, the, vii. 15.
 " — Magazine, The," iii. 356. et passim.
 —, University, the, vi. 44.
 Londonderry, Marquess of, his madness at the time of the Union, iv. 11.
 "Lonely Man of Athos," iv. 243.
 Long, Charles, iv. 128. et passim.
 Longchamp, iii. 223. 339.
 Longchamps, iii. 109.
 Longhi, iii. 32.
 Longinus, ii. 277; vii. 51.
 Longlands, Mr., ii. 250. 251.
 Longleat, ii. 194. et passim.
 Long-lived individuals and tradition, instances of, v. 231.
 Longman, Thomas Norton, his offer of 3000 guineas, to Moore, for "Lalla Rookh," alluded to, ii. 34; letters to, from Moore, i. 263; ii. 75; letters to, from Moore, alluded to, viii. 4; see also i. 264; ii. 111. note; iii. 121. 281. 291; vi. 320; vii. 121. 173.
 Longman, Thomas, v. 208; letters to, from Moore, viii. 277. 280. 281. 282.
 Longman, Messrs., ii. 338. 355; copy of terms of agreement between them and Moore for a poem, 58; anonymous letter to, about Moore's poem, iv. 23; conversation with Moore, on the settlement respecting the "Life of Byron," v. 260; frank and satisfactory arrangement of the "Byron Life," 261; encouraged Moore to make the "Angels" Eastern, iv. 40; letters to, from Moore, ii. 57; letters from, to Moore, iii. 340; iv. 277. 322; v. 109. 110; proposal respecting a Cyclopædia, vi. 15; their claim on Moore, and the manner of its liquidation, viii. 272; their promptitude in business, ii. 220; their offers to Moore for a "History of Ireland," vi. 16; the purchasers of Moore's papers, i. ix; see also ii. 161. 252; iii. 184; iv. 73; v. 74. et passim.
 Longwood, iv. 337.
 Lonsdale, Lord, v. 111. 150.
 Lopez de Vega. See Vega, Lopez de.
 "Lord Belzebub," v. 312.
 " — Henry and St. Cecilia," vi. 312.
 " — of the Isles," ii. 68.
 Lords of Appeal, the, ii. 334.
 Lorenzo, Duke of Urbino, iii. 42.
 —, Sr., church of, iii. 42.
 " — de Medici," by Michael Angelo, iii. 53.
 L'Orge, Duke de, i. 230.
 Lorne, Lord, viii. 45. 47.
 Lorraine, Claude, iv. 11.
 Lothian, Lord, v. 66.
 Lottery, a prize in the, influence of, on Moore's views, i. 149.
 Loudoun, Lady, i. 282. 301. 306. 328.
 Loughborough, v. 209.
 —, Lord, iii. 270.
 Lough Lane Club, the, iv. 115.
 Louis XIV., his enormous appetite, iii. 164.
 —, XV., iv. 14. note; vii. 168.
 —, XVI., iii. 320. 332.
 —, XVII., ii. 96. et passim.

Louis Philippe, vii. 184. 187; letter to Moore, vi. 239.
 —, St., iii. 140. 270.
 "L'Ours et la Pacha," iii. 293.
 Louvre, the, iii. 8. et passim.
 Lovaine, Lady, iii. 167.
 —, Lord, iii. 80. et passim.
 Love, Miss, iii. 294.
 " — and Psyche," by Chantrey, iii. 65.
 " — is a hunter boy," vi. 152.
 " —, Law, and Physic," viii. 19. note.
 Lover, iv. 124. et passim.
 "Lovers' Vows," iv. 64.
 "Loves of the Angels," i. xxvi; iv. 37. 40; translated by Madame Beloe, 210; by three different persons, 97; various opinions as to the best story of the three, 36.
 Lowe, Sir Hudson, "Lines to," quoted by "The Examiner," ii. 183.
 Lowertz, Lake of, viii. 187.
 Lowes, v. 192.
 Lowth, ii. 218; iv. 58; vi. 198.
 —, Bishop, "The Choice of Hercules," iv. 243; epitaph on his daughter, v. 90.
 Lowther, viii. 101. 116.
 —, Lord, vi. 30. 105.
 Lubbock, vii. 275.
 Lubbocks, the, v. 297.
 Lucas, Mr., ii. 182.
 —, Paul, "Voyages," iii. 149; poem of "Joseph," ii. 182.
 Lucca, mountains of, iii. 36.
 Lucchesini, iii. 80.
 "Luce di Verità," vi. 321.
 Lucerne, Lake of, viii. 185.
 "Lucia, St., Head of," by Carlo D'ice, iii. 44.
 Lucian, Πῶς δὲ ἰστορεῖαν συγγράφειν, i. 36.
 "Lucretia," by Guido, iii. 29.
 Lucumo, iii. 226.
 "Lucy's Flitting," iv. 342; vii. 171.
 "Lugano Gazette, The," iii. 65.
 Luggelaw, iii. 5.
 Luke's, St., Academy of, iii. 74.
 Lulworth Castle, v. 93. 94.
 Lumley, iii. 339; viii. 17. 28.
 Luncheon, derivation of, iv. 270.
 Lushington, Dr., ii. 260. 339.
 —, Mrs., viii. 47.
 "Lusiad," iii. 304.
 Luther, Martin, "Life," ii. 12.
 "Luttatori," the, iii. 41.
 Luttrell, Henry, "Advice to Julia," ii. 300. note; iii. 137. 240. 245; "A fine feast is a farce and a fable," iv. 239; an amusing quaintness, quoted by, vi. 321; Alfred the Great, vii. 137; answer to Moore's parody on Horace, iv. 239; "Charade on Cobbett," v. 144; "Crockford House," 150; epigram on "Lalla Rookh," i. xxviii; epitaph on a man who was run over by an omnibus, vii. 85; his opinion of the Duke of Wellington, i. 12; Idea of the English climate, v. 280; his joke about Lord Dudley's speaking by heart, 320; his jokes, note upon, by the editor, vi. 100. note; his lines, alluded to, on the Reform Bill, and cholera morbus, 218; lines by, v. 114; Moore's opinion of his verses, ii. 300. note; opinion of Moore's proceeding in connection with the Byron "Memoirs," iv. 197; parody on the Brown Leaf, v. 123; "Poem on Rome," 104. 120; puns by, 113. 128; vi. 190.

- 286; remark of his, on the family of the Carlises, 63; on Lady Holland's crowded dinners, vii. 312; rhyme on Mrs. Hope, iv. 321; scepticism on Irish antiquities, vii. 137; stories of a tailor who used to attend the Greek Lectures at the University, vi. 260; stories of Lord Norbury, v. 151; stories told by, 280; vi. 251; "Translation from Gellert," v. 114; "True History," iv. 131; verse on alcig, 237; verses by, iii. 302.
- Luxembourg, the, iii. 97. 127.
- Lyceum Theatre, the, ii. 163. et passim.
- Lynch, i. 34; "Feudal Dignities," vii. 330.
- Lycurgus, iv. 230.
- Lyndhurst, Lady, v. 187. et passim.
- , Lord, v. 186. et passim.
- Lyne, Cornelius, his letter to Moore, alluded to, vii. 38; his letter to Moore on O'Connell's state of excitement at the perusal of one of the last "Irish Melodies," 35; see also 56.
- Lynedoch, Lord, iv. 61. 82; v. 78.
- Lysaught, vii. 106.
- Lyon, Captain, iv. 319.
- , Mrs., iv. 319; v. 47.
- Lyons, v. 32; its situation very fine, iii. 86.
- Lysons, Mr., ii. 203; iv. 147. 148.
- , Mrs., ii. 203; iv. 147. 148.
- Lysters, the, vii. 55. 176.
- Lyttleton, Lady, vii. 322.
- , Lady Sarah, v. 280.
- , Lord, his "Letters," written by Combe, ii. 201.

M.

- M. B., an editor of old chronicles, with Guizot, vii. 187.
- M'N ———, curious circumstances connected with him and the Irish Government, vii. 74. 75.
- "M. P., or the Blue Stocking," ii. 56.
- Macartney, Miss, v. 90.
- , Lord, iv. 34.
- Macarty, Count, vi. 346.
- Macaulay, Right Hon. Thomas Babington, account of the Monothelite controversy, alluded to, vi. 213; acknowledged the authorship of two squibs in the "Times," 213; see also vii. 304; vi. xv; his view of Goethe, vii. 2-0; his memory and range of knowledge, vi. 214; vii. 280. 283. 314; see also 258; vi. 210; writing a "History of England," vii. 304.
- "Macbean's Ancient Geography," i. 94.
- MacClellan, Mrs., i. 5.
- Macdonald, ii. 172. et passim.
- , Mrs., ii. 172. et passim.
- , David, vi. 155.
- , Mrs. David, vi. 155.
- , General, vii. 151; viii. 15.
- , Lady, v. 241. et passim.
- , Miss, iii. 16. et passim.
- , Norman, vii. 299.
- Macdonnell, iv. 155. 156; v. 69.
- , Eneas, iv. 206; v. 163.
- Macdonnell, Archdeacon, vi. 44.
- Machiavel, iii. 39. 40. note; v. 226; vi. 83.
- Macgregor, Miss, vii. 7.

- Mack, iii. 21. 98.
- Mackavino, Mrs., viii. 282.
- Mackenzie, ii. 313. et passim.
- , Henry, "The Man of Feeling," ii. 250.
- , Lord, v. 8.
- , R. S., letter from, to Moore, vii. 363.
- Mackey, Miss, iii. 178.
- Mackintosh, Lady, ii. 315; vi. 46.
- , Sir Eneas, vi. xiii.
- , Sir James, ii. 245; his characteristics, vi. xi. 81. 89; vii. 204; his article in "The Edinburgh" on "Universal Suffrage," ii. 261; his ethics examined, vii. 206; his journal, kept while in India, vi. 318; his manner of speaking in Parliament, xii; his opinions on Sheridan and the politics of his time, ii. 315; his style of writing, vi. xii; his "History of England," 84. 108; vii. 82; his "Life of Alfred the Great," vi. 158; his opinion of Rogers's "Essay on Assassination," iv. 260; professor at Hertford College, ii. 182; recommended "Little's Poems" for Rogers's perusal, viii. 101; his want of observation in common life, iii. 177; his death, vi. 292. note.
- MacKlin, Charles, anecdotes of, i. 68; good story of, iii. 133.
- , Hugh George, i. 67.
- Maclean, vii. 157.
- , Mrs., vi. 112. 190.
- MacLeod, his "Loo Choo," said to be written by Combe, ii. 201.
- , Mrs., iii. 274. et passim.
- MacLise, vii. 43. 182. 273.
- Macnamara, vi. 129.
- , Michael Foley, vii. 358.
- Macpherson, iv. 268.
- , Mrs., vi. 31.
- Macrone, his proposal to publish a new edition of all Moore's Works, vii. 163.
- Macroon, vii. 358. 359.
- "Mad Bess," iv. 148.
- Madden, Dr., vii. 107.
- Maddocks, William, iv. 173. 205.
- Madeira, i. 241.
- Maderno, statue of "St. Cecilia," iii. 61.
- Madison, Mr., v. 316.
- "Madoc," viii. 277.
- Maddock, William, viii. 94.
- "Madonna," by Carlo Dolce, iii. 80; by Guido, iii. 32.
- "——— and Child," by Carlo Dolce, iii. 42; by Julio Romano, 42; by Raphael, 84.
- "——— della Sedilla," by Correggio, iii. 82.
- "——— di Foligno," by Raphael, iii. 55.
- "———, the, Christ and Joseph," by Michael Angelo, iii. 38.
- "Madre Amata," vi. 163.
- Madrigal Society, the, failures at, v. 73.
- "Madrigaux," ii. 169.
- Mæneas, iii. 49; villa of, 70.
- Maffei, iii. 23.
- , Signor Andrea, vii. 92.
- "Magazine Rock," iv. 107.
- "———, Blackwood's," iv. 44. et passim.
- "———, The British," iv. 44.
- "———, The Dublin," viii. 75.
- "———, The Edinburgh," ii. 207; iii. 157.
- "———, The European," iv. 164.

- "Magazine, The Gentleman's," iv. 43.
 "———, The John Bull," iv. 212.
 "———, The London," iii. 356. et passim.
 "———, The Metropolitan," vi. 232.
 "———, The New Monthly," iv. 43. 158. 208.
 "———, The Old Monthly," iv. 43.
 Magdalen Asylum, the, v. 31.
 ——— College, iv. 94.
 "Magdalens," iii. 27. 43; by Canova, 56. 64. 68. 110; by Guercino, ii. 32; iii. 67; by Sommariva, 145. 283. 358; by Vandyck, 69; the number of them, 32.
 Magee, Archbishop, an admirer of Moore's translation of Lucian, i. 36; "Atone-ment," v. 108; curious dialogue on tithes with Lord Wellesley, iv. 141; his belligerent antithesis, i. 38.
 Magliabechi, iii. 35.
 Magnetism, by a Parisian professor, iv. 167.
 Maguire, iv. 103.
 Mahomet, iv. 149.
 Mahon, Lady, vii. 176. 303.
 ———, Lord, vi. 113. et passim.
 Mahoney, Major, viii. 269.
 Mahony, iii. 123; iv. 224; vi. 26.
 ———, Captain, i. 5.
 ———, Miss, Lord Byron's kindness to, iii. 123.
 "Maid of Marlevale," vi. 43.
 Mai, Cardinal, iii. 20.
 "Mail, The Evening," v. 37; vi. 140.
 ——— travelling in America, i. 162.
 Maillet, "Description of Egypt," iii. 129.
 Maimbourg, Latour, iii. 183.
 Maine de Biron, iii. 258.
 "Maison à Vendre," iii. 120.
 Maitland, Lord, iv. 199; v. 160.
 "Malade Imaginaire," v. 204.
 Malanotte, iii. 28.
 ———, Madame, v. 164.
 "Malaria of London," v. 143.
 Malays, the, ii. 207.
 Malcolm, Lady, ii. 318.
 ———, Sir J., v. 64. 152.
 Malet, Sir Alexander, iv. 143. 145; vii. 64.
 Malherbe, vii. 192.
 Malibran, Madame, vi. 28. 42. 44.
 Mallard, iii. 262.
 Mallet, iii. 14. 15; v. 269.
 Mallow, iv. 109. and note, 110.
 Malmaison, iii. 226. 231; gallery of, iii. 250.
 Malmesbury, iv. 128; v. 105. 107.
 ———, Lord, iv. 25. 153; vii. 20.
 Milone, Edmund, Moore's first school-master, i. 2. 11. 155.
 Malpin, Mr., v. 217. 218.
 Malesherbes, iii. 359.
 Malta, ii. 226. et passim.
 Maltby, Edward (Bishop of Chichester), ii. 306. et passim.
 Maltebrun, Conrad, iii. 323.
 Malthus, Rev. Thomas Robert, iii. 148.
 ———, Mrs., ii. 315.
 Manchester, i. 94. et passim.
 Manfrini Palace, the, iii. 29.
 Manielli, iii. 78.
 "Man in the Moon," iii. 120.
 Mann, Dr., v. 271.
 Manners, v. 145; vii. 31.
 ———, Lady L., i. 232.
 ———, Lord, vi. 260.
 ———, Lord Robert, viii. 74.
 ———, Sutton, Mrs., vi. 184.
 Manners-Sutton, Right Hon. Charles, anecdote of, iv. 317; description of his dinner with the King, vi. 211.
 "Man of Feeling," ii. 252; v. 8.
 "Manon l'Escarot," iv. 11; v. 206.
 Mansell, W. L., the Master of Trinity College, Cambridge, announced by a Frenchman, ii. 205.
 Mansfield, Lady, iii. 44.
 ———, Lord, sham duel between him and Lord Hertford, at the University, iv. 247.
 "Manuel des Libraires," iii. 233.
 Manzoni, "Sulla Morale Cattolica," vii. 127.
 Marais, the, iii. 109. 176. 327.
 Maratti, Carlo, "Cupids," iii. 75.
 Marboeuf, the, iii. 269.
 Marcellus, M. Cladius, vii. 43.
 "Marchande de Goujons," iii. 221. 223.
 Marché des Jacobins, iii. 105.
 Marchesa, iv. 7.
 Marcia, iii. 314.
 Marcion, v. 144.
 Marco, S., church of, iii. 43.
 ——— Polo, viii. 184.
 "Marcus Agrippa," iii. 27.
 Marescalchi Gallery, the, iii. 32.
 ——— Palace, the, iii. 82.
 Marescotti, Lady Sophia, iii. 31.
 Marguerita, ii. 329.
 Maria degli Angeli, church of, one of the sublimest things in Rome, iii. 71.
 ——— Louisa, iii. 79; Napoleon's note to her on his return from Elba, 79.
 ——— Maggiore, church of, iii. 50.
 Marie Antoinette, anecdote of, iii. 241.
 Mariegalante, vii. 342.
 "Marie Stuart," iii. 113.
 Marionettes, the, iii. 22. et passim.
 Mariton, iii. 322.
 Marjoribanks, vii. 268. 272.
 Mark, iv. 107.
 ———, St., iii. 25. 26. 28.
 ———, St., Place of, iii. 34.
 Markham, iv. 144.
 Marlborough, ii. 156. et passim.
 ———, Duchess of, v. 111.
 ———, Duke of, v. 111.
 ———, House, viii. 53.
 Marley, Dean, Bishop of Waterford, played "Lockit" in "The Beggars' Opera," i. 8.
 "Marmion," v. 120.
 Marmont, Marshal, vii. 190.
 Marmontel, John Francis, iii. 249. et passim; "Memoirs," 281; "Theatre," 249.
 Maronini, iv. 76.
 "Marriage at Cana," by Paul Veronese, iii. 278.
 "——— du ci-devant Jeune Homme," iii. 118.
 "——— of St. Catherine," by Correggio, iii. 32; by Leonardo da Vinci, 32; by Rossi, 32.
 Marryat, Captain, enclosed Moore 1007. for his verses to Lady Valletort, vi. 273. 276.
 Mars, Mademoiselle, iii. 11.
 "Marseilles Hymn," the, vi. 184.
 Marsh, ii. 183; vi. 36. 314.
 ———, Herbert, "Michaelis," iv. 270.
 Marshall, ii. 154; v. 80; vii. 154.
 ———, Henry, vii. 363.
 Marshalsea, the, iii. 286.
 Marston Moor, iv. 295.

- Martial, epigram applied to George IV. and Queen Caroline, iii. 152; translated by Moore, 152.
 —, Julius, supposed villa of his, iii. 62.
 Martin, John, ii. 321; "Travels," iv. 42.
 —, Lady Charlotte, v. 220.
 Martindale's, i. 126.
 Martineau, Miss, vi. 327.
 Martinelli, "Le Festin de Balthasar," iii. 43.
 Martini, Padre, ii. 308.
 Martino di Monti, S., iii. 57.
 "Martyrdom of St. Agnes," by Domenichino, iii. 30.
 "—— of St. Peter the Dominican," iii. 30. note.
 Mary, Queen, iv. 148. et passim.
 Maryborough, iv. 122.
 "Mary Magdalene," ii. 47; by Chevalier Curradi, iii. 43.
 Masaccio, iii. 41; iv. 72.
 Mason, sent his work on "St. Patrick's Cathedral" to Moore, iv. 125.
 "Massacre of the Innocents," by Daniel de Volterra, iii. 36.
 "—— of the Sciots," by Barker, v. 146.
 "Massaniello," vi. 39; vii. 22.
 Massey, Lord, iii. 90. 107.
 Massimiliano, iii. 62.
 Massimio, iii. 305. 312; iv. 4.
 "Massinger," ii. 248.
 Massinot's, iii. 7. 190.
 Masterson, Mr., i. 82. 85.
 —, Mrs., i. 80. 81.
 —, Sarah, played one of the characters in Moore's Masque, i. 39.
 Matarosa, iv. 260.
 Matchett, Mary, viii. 152.
 —, the Misses, v. 210.
 Matchetts, the, i. 360; v. 211.
 Mât de Cœgne, iii. 217.
 Materialism exploded by Italian Infidels, iii. 41.
 Mathews, Charles, stories of, vi. 71; his imitations, iv. 319; vi. iii; his "Life of Garrick," iv. 319.
 —, Major, ii. 173.
 Mathewses, the, iv. 176; vi. 115.
 Mathias, iii. 274.
 Mathilde, ii. 55.
 Mathison, Miss, iv. 70.
 Matlock, i. 301. et passim.
 "Matrimonio Segreto," iii. 303.
 Matthew, Montague, viii. 214.
 Matthews, M^s, i. 139.
 Matthias's Italian poetry, ii. 205.
 Matucievitz, Moore's meeting with, vii. 303.
 Maturin, Rev. Robert Charles, iii. 287. 290.
 "Matutinae ac Vespertinae," vii. 346.
 Maugham, Miss, ii. 347, 348.
 Maugin, v. 56.
 Mauguin, vii. 185.
 Maurice, Thomas, "Ruins of Babylon," ii. 293.
 —, Miss, iii. 335.
 Maury, Jean Laffren, iv. 136.
 Mavrocordato, Prince, iv. 215, 216.
 Maxwell, Mr., ii. 157.
 —, Miss, iii. 328.
 May, Isle of, v. 6.
 Mayfield Cottage, Moore's residence at, vignette, i. 362; ii. 34; vii. 123.
 Mayham, Miss, ii. 196.
 Maynard, Lord, v. 224.
 Mayo, ii. 255; iv. 129.
 —, Lady, vi. 315.
 —, Lord, vi. 315, 316.
 Mayor of Cork, the, ii. 209.
 "Mazarin, Cardinal," by Philippe de Champagne, iii. 234.
 Maze, Mr., v. 24.
 Mazepa, story of, ii. 323.
 Mazzinghi, Joseph, viii. 202.
 M'Cabe, vi. 130.
 M'Culloch, Dr., his "Western Highlands," vii. 136.
 —, J. R., Esq., v. 10; vi. 109. et passim.
 McDiarmid, "Life of Lord Strafford," iv. 138; "Lives of Statesmen," 138.
 McDonald, ii. 164; v. 134.
 M'Donnell, Captain, v. 95.
 M'Donal, Rev., viii. 65.
 M'Dowell, v. 21.
 McHale, Right Rev. Dr., translated Moore's "Melodies" into Irish, vii. 315.
 M'Kay, iii. 182.
 M'Leod, iii. 267. 277.
 M'Leods, the, iii. 263. et passim.
 McMahon, i. 82.
 —, Mrs., a letter to, alluded to, i. 88; her generous offer to Moore, 74.
 McNab, vii. 324.
 McNally, vi. 172.
 M'Neal, Mrs., iii. 120.
 M'Neil, Captain, iii. 44.
 M'Nevin, "Pieces of History," iv. 131.
 Mead, Mr., vi. 163.
 —, Mrs., vi. 163.
 Meadows, General, remark of, ii. 180.
 Meara, O', his opinion on Moore's "Irish Gentleman in Search of a Religion," vi. 328.
 —, Mrs., vi. 130. et passim.
 Meath, Bishop of, i. 110. et passim.
 —, Countess of, v. 188.
 —, Earl of, i. 355.
 "Medea," the, v. 176.
 Medenbach, i. 100.
 Medici, Giuliano, iii. 42.
 "——," the, iii. 43. 59.
 —, Cosmo di, i. 244.
 "——," Memoirs of the," iii. 79.
 Mediterranean, the, viii. 177.
 Medwin, Captain, iv. 20. et passim.
 "——," Captain, Notes on," iv. 251.
 Mee, Mr., vii. 92.
 —, Mrs., vii. 92.
 Meeanee, vii. 348.
 Meerza Jaffer Jabeeb, ii. 322.
 Meeting of the Waters, view of, vignette, iii.
 Meillerie, iii. 16.
 Melanconius, ii. 243.
 Melancthon, his MS. common-place book, vii. 245; statue of, ii. 278.
 Melbourne, Lady, v. 66. et passim.
 —, Lord, his letter to Lord John Russell respecting Moore's pension, vii. 89.
 Melcher, Mrs., ii. 108.
 Meleager, translations from, ii. 153.
 Melksham Concert, the, ii. 153. 166. 178.
 Mellon, Miss, v. 267.
 "Melodies," called "The Counsellor's Maladies," vii. 362.
 Melrose Abbey, iv. 339; v. 5; viii. 162.
 Melville, Lord, iii. 205. and note; iv. 90; v. 112.
 Memnon, statue of, iii. 143.

- "Mémoire Justificatif," vi. 283.
 Mémoires de Brienne, v. 273.
 "— de l'Académie," ii. 255; iii. 238; iv. 43.
 "— d'un Colonel," iii. 331.
 "Memcirs," ii. 151, 152.
 "—," Mrs. Crouch's, ii. 152, 156.
 "—," Holcroft's, ii. 151, 152, 156.
 "— of Berwick," v. 116.
 "— of Jackson," ii. 195, 196.
 "— of Lord Byron," negotiations and statements regarding the redemption and destruction of them, iii. 298, 345; iv. 191. note, 185. et passim; accounts of the burning, &c., in the "Courier," "John Bull," "Chronicle," "Observer," and "Times," iv. 200, 201.
 Memoirs of Moore, written by himself, i. 1-76.
 "Memorial of the States-General," ii. 224.
 Memory, the, its treacherousness instanced, v. 228.
 Memphis, iii. 148; vii. 183.
 Ménage, ii. 224.
 "— de Molière," iii. 319.
 Menai Bridge, the, v. 20; vi. 152.
 "Menauder," iii. 55.
 Mencke, extract from the preface to his translation of "Lalla Rookh," viii. 346.
 Menon, iii. 142.
 "—, Madame de, iii. 326.
 Mercadanti, "Claudio è Elisa," v. 55.
 Mercandotti, Maria, iii. 267, 304, 307.
 Mercer, iii. 137. et passim.
 Merchant Tailors' Hall, v. 91.
 Mercier, "La Demence de Charles IX.," iii. 197; "Louis IX.," 268.
 "Mercury," by Thorwaldsen, iii. 63.
 Mer de Glace, viii. 185.
 Mereweather, ii. 282. et passim.
 "—, Mrs., ii. 178. et passim.
 Merivale, "Greek Anthology," vi. 320.
 "—, jun., vii. 243.
 Merlin, Maime, iii. 117.
 "Merope," iii. 337.
 "Merrily Oh!" to be called "The Tyrolese Song of Liberty," i. 283.
 Merry, Mr., i. 162; viii. 50, 52.
 "—, Mrs., letter from, to Moore, viii. 50.
 Messageries Royales, the, iii. 271, 273.
 "Messiah, The," iv. 207.
 "Metamorphosis," vi. 312.
 Metastasio, translation from, by Lord
 Holland, vii. 280, 281.
 Methuen, Paul, author of most of the squibs in the "Morning Chronicle" about the Rat Club, vi. 178; see also vii.
 23; "To the Sea," v. 232.
 "—, Mrs., ii. 249. et passim.
 "Metrical Miscellany," ii. 161.
 "Metropolitan Magazine, The," vi. 232. et passim.
 Meudon, fête at, iii. 130.
 "— Terrace, iii. 126.
 "—, woods of, viii. 255.
 Meurice, iii. 182, 207, 271.
 Meyer, Dr., "Voyage," vii. 136.
 Meynell, Mrs., vi. 203.
 Meyrick, Colonel, iii. 343.
 Michael, St., iv. 288, 289.
 "—, St., by Guido, iii. 62, 81.
 "—, St., and Christine," iii. 331.
 "—, St., and Satan," by Guido, iii.
 89; by Raphael, 89.
 "Michaëlis," iv. 270.
 Michot, iii. 212.
 Middle Temple, the, iv. 44, 49.
 Middleton, iv. 237; v. 317, 318.
 "—, Conyers, "Free Enquiry," v.
 105.
 "— Dale, v. 252.
 Milan police, iii. 19.
 "Mi lasci oh madre amata," iv. 281.
 Milbauke, Miss, v. 226; vi. 58; viii.
 185.
 Mildmay, Sir Henry, iii. 142. et passim.
 "—, Lady, her fear of Lord Byron,
 iii. 247.
 "—, Paulet, v. 312.
 "—, Mrs. Paulet, v. 312.
 Miles, ii. 178, 243.
 Milesius, vii. 94.
 Mill, James, "History," iv. 93; "India,"
 ii. 277, 281, 284.
 Millbank Penitentiary, the, v. 106.
 Millbrook, Church of, iii. 284.
 Milles Colonnes, the, iii. 7, 83, 96, 190.
 "Millennium, The," v. 96; commencement of, predicted, ii. 164.
 Miller, vi. 93, 343.
 "—, Lady, "Batheaston Poetry," vi.
 65.
 "—, Miss, iv. 232.
 "—, Mrs., v. 7, 8.
 Millet, Mr., v. 218.
 Millican, Mr., vii. 98.
 Millingen, iii. 322. et passim.
 Mills, iii. 310; iv. 255, 300.
 "—, Dr., v. 26.
 "—, Mrs., i. 125, 257.
 Milman, Colonel, iii. 333.
 "—, Rev. Henry Hart, vi. 226.
 "—, Mrs., v. 60. et passim.
 Milne, vii. 224.
 Milnes, vii. 260. et passim.
 Milo, iii. 258, 265.
 Milon, iv. 11.
 Milton, John, agreement, with Symonds, for the sale of "Paradise Lost," v. 119;
 "Arianism," 143; discovery of papers of his at the State Paper Office, 321; his Satan compared with Napoleon, ii. 70;
 Tasso's Pluto, i. xli. note B; "Latin Sonnet," iv. 298; laxity of metre in "Paradise Regained," ii. 200; "Paradise Lost," 200; v. 119.
 "—, Lord, vi. 314.
 Miltown, Lord, iii. 142. et passim.
 Milward, Mr., viii. 193.
 "Mi manca la voce," iv. 170.
 Mina, General, iv. 174; vi. 329.
 "Minerve," the, iv. 310.
 Minto, Lady, vi. 267. et passim.
 "—, Lord, ii. 227. et passim.
 Mirabeau, iv. 136.
 "Miracle of the Hammer," by Tintoret,
 iii. 84.
 Mirandola, Pico della, iii. 43.
 Miriova, iii. 117.
 "Mirror, The," iii. 269.
 "Misanthrope," the, iii. 7.
 Miseries of Human Life, ii. 215.
 Missionaries, laughed at in India, iv. 129.
 Missionaries' converts, nicknamed "Company's Christians," iv. 129.
 Missolonghi, iv. 162. et passim.
 Missouri, viii. 274.
 Mistakes in Acts of Parliament, instances of, ii. 146.
 "— in Advertisements and Notes. instances of, v. 38.
 "— of a Reviewer's translation, in the "Quarterly," on Dr. Myer's "China,"
 vii. 136.

- "Mistress of Titian," the, lii. 42.
 Mitchell, Admiral Sir Andrew, i. 155.
 ———, Mr. Forbes, ii. 321.
 ———, Mrs., iv. 173.
 Mitford, William, "Harmony of Languages," ii. 155. 346; "History of Greece," 155.
 Mitford, Dr., vii. 14.
 ———, Miss, vii. 15.
 Modena, iii. 82.
 ———, Duke of, edits a newspaper, vi. 321.
 Modern Greek, v. 103.
 "—— Parnassus," ii. 153.
 "—— Theatre," ii. 84.
 Morris, Lake, iiii. 148.
 "Mœurs Administratives," v. 88.
 Moguerre, vii. 366.
 Mohawk river, i. 166. 169.
 Moira, Lady. See Loudoun, Lady.
 ———, Lord (first Marquess of Hastings), accepted a dedication from Moore, i. 185; accused by a clerk of the Bank, 211; a dupe of the Prince of Wales, 295; his advent to power, and Moore's hopes, 188; advice to Moore respecting the translation of Lucien Buonaparte's poem, 263; installed as a Knight of the Garter, 295; his efforts to form an administration, ii. 254; appointed Governor-General of India, 308. 317; viii. 105; detail of Moore's interview with, sent to Bryan and Philip Crampton, i. 326; extract from his letter to Moore respecting the duel, 210; interest in Moore's pecuniary affairs, 301; his opinion of Moore's "Anacreon," i. 108; remarks, to Moore, on the Governor-General of India's patronage, viii. 219; sent Lord Rancilffe to offer Moore a small appointment, i. 191; severe remark upon, by Moore, 312; shockingly treated in the "Edinburgh Review," 300; negotiation about his becoming Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, 306; thanked by Moore for his father's appointment, 193; the champion of Lord Yarmouth, 288; letters from, to Moore, 185. 193. 222. 313; viii. 219; letters to, from Moore, 124. See also passim.
 "Mokanna unveiling his face to Zellca," vi. 314.
 Mole, Mrs., ii. 153.
 Molière, J. B., anecdote of, v. 204; "Bourgeois Gentilhomme," iv. 326; "Malade Imaginaire," v. 204; "Tartuffe," 147.
 Molini, iii. 78.
 Molinos, Madame, iii. 330.
 "Moll Flanders," ii. 240.
 Molloy, Mr., v. 15.
 Molyneux, vi. 268.
 ———, Sir Capel, v. 34.
 Molyneuxes, the, v. 34.
 Monaco, Prince of, vi. 103.
 Monastereven, vi. 142. et passim.
 Monballi, iii. 62.
 Monck, Madlle., iii. 195.
 Moncrieff, Sir Henry, v. 8. 11.
 Money, ii. 174. et passim.
 ———, Mrs., vii. 162.
 "Moniteur," the, v. 3.
 Monk-Mason, ii. 248.
 Monkhouse, iv. 49.
 Monkish couplet on the resignation of livings, v. 49.
 Monkland, v. 55. 57.
 Monkstown, iii. 286.
 Monkton, iv. 227.
 Monmouth Street, ii. 243.
 Monothelite Controversy, account of, by Macaulay, alluded to, vi. 213.
 "Monsieur Tonson," iii. 294.
 Montalembert, Count, his note to Moore, vii. 262. 264.
 Montalemberts, the, iii. 336.
 Montague, Captain, vi. 89.
 ———, Dandy, iii. 205.
 ———, Lady, vi. 67.
 ———, Matthew, anecdote of, viii. 214.
 note.
 ———, Miss, v. 29. 36.
 ———, Mrs., vi. 89.
 "Montaigne," i. 225; iii. 136; vii. 182.
 "Montanus," Emmett the elder's nom de plume, i. 55.
 Montbard, iii. 12.
 Mont Blanc, Hôtel du, iii. 275; Moore's first view of, 13.
 ——— Brilliant, iii. 6.
 ——— Cenis, iii. 6.
 Monteagle, Lord, vii. 349.
 Monte Bello, iii. 19.
 ——— Cavallo, the, iii. 48.
 ——— di Pietà, vii. 10.
 ——— Fontaine, iii. 134.
 ——— Gennicolo, the, iii. 62.
 ——— Mario, the, iii. 67.
 Montesquieu, iii. 136; vi. 97.
 Montfaucon, v. 57.
 Montgomerie, George, vii. 199, 200.
 Montgomery, iii. 102. et passim.
 ———, Frederick, v. 103. 317; vii. 290.
 ———, James, his hesitation to meet Moore, on account of an attack he had made on him, v. 253; two passages of his criticised by Lord Holland, ii. 342.
 ———, Sir James, vi. 51.
 ———, Lady, iii. 177. et passim.
 ———, Miss, vi. 67.
 ———, Mrs., iv. 215. et passim.
 ———, the Misses, i. 8.
 "Monthly Magazine, The," ii. 257.
 "—— Museum, The," iv. 44.
 "—— Review, The," i. 316; iv. 43; vii. 39.
 Monthon, Count, vi. 270.
 Monti, his "Aristodemo," viii. 45. note.
 Montjoie, Comtesse de, vii. 327.
 Montjoye, iii. 91.
 ———, Madame de, iii. 192.
 ———, Mademoiselle, iii. 181.
 Montmartre, iii. 340.
 Montmorenci, iii. 359, 360, 361.
 Mont Parnasse, iii. 184.
 Montrenil, ii. 224; iii. 301. 355; "Madrigaux," ii. 169.
 Montron, iii. 183. et passim.
 Montrose, Duke of, iv. 161. 166; v. 4.
 Moore, Mrs. Anastasia (the poet's mother), i. 16. 57. 162. 338; iii. 286; vi. 167. 172; her interview with Lord Lansdowne, iv. 100; her death, v. 272; letters to, from Moore, i. 79, 80, 81, 82. 87. 90. 91. 93. 94. 95. 96. 97. 98. 101. 102. 103. 104. 105. 106. 107. 108. 109. 110. 111. 112. 113. 114. 115. 116. 117. 118. 119. 120. 121. 122. 123. 124. 125. 126. 128. 129. 132. 133. 134. 135. 137. 142. 144. 147. 148. 152. 154. 156. 158. 159. 161. 163. 166. 168. 170. 171. 173. 175. 176. 177. 178. 179. 180. 183. 184. 185. 186. 187. 188. 189. 190. 191. 192. 193. 220. 222. 223. 226. 227. 230, 231. 238. 240. 244. 245. 246. 249. 250. 251. 252, 253. 254. 256. 257. 264. 267. 273. 274. 281. 282. 289. 300. 301. 307. 312. 315. 319. 320. 328. 329. 332. 333. 338. 342. 346. 351. 352. 358. 359. 361. 362. 363. 365. 370. 371. 372; ii. 7. 8. 9. 12. 17. 18. 24. 27. 28. 29. 32. 35. 37. 50. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 66. 69. 82. 83. 84. 89. 90. 99. 100. 103. 106. 107. 111. 116. 117. 118. 119. 120. 121. 122. 123. 124. 125. 126. 127. 131. 136. 139; viii. 40. 65. 74. 103. 105.

Moore, Anastasia Mary, born, i. 337. note; her education, iv. 45; her death, vi. 18. 21. 22; buried at Bromham, 22.

—, Anne Jane Barbara, dangerously ill from a fall, ii. 121; her death, 125; viii. 227. note.

—, Catherine (the poet's sister), her letter to Moore, alluded to, i. 225; married to Mr. Scully, ii. 160. note; "The Canadian Boat Song" sent to her by Moore, i. 180; her death, vii. 63.

—, Charles, i. 269.

—, Edward, iii. 111. et passim.

—, Mrs. (the poet's wife), described as like Catalani, i. 371; sensation created by her at the Ashbourne ball, 371; advice to her son Tom, vi. 51; her arrival at Sloperton welcomed by the church bells, iv. 16; brought some lines of her own, to Moore, on Anastasia, vi. 154; dangerous illness of, vii. 217; description of her fellow-travellers to Calais, iii. 260; her attention to Moore's mother, vi. 151; extracts from her letters to Moore, iii. 291; vi. 48; vii. 294. 318; introduced to the Duchess of Sussex, iii. 192; letter to Moore, alluding to his pension, vii. 120; presented by Messrs. Longman with Mrs. Inchbald's "Modern Theatre," ii. 84; only survivor of Moore's family, i. ix; viii. 137.

—, Ellen, arrived from Dublin, vii. 161; her kindness and meekness, iii. 286; her death, viii. 13.

—, Garrett, i. 1.

—, Graham, "Lives of Ripperda and Alberoni," iii. 231.

—, James, vii. 147.

—, General Sir John, his private Diary, and the use made of it by Napier, vii. 147.

—, John, the poet's father, v. 22; appointed barrackmaster in Dublin, i. xiii. 193; dangerous illness of, v. 15; death of, 22; letters from, to Moore, alluded to, i. 130; letters respecting money matters, ii. 253; letters to, from Moore, i. 85. 86. 88. 91. 92. 93; viii. 37. 39.

—, John Russell, born, iv. 67; baptized by Bowles, 96; sent to Dr. Firminger's to prepare for Addiscombe, vii. 252; dangerously ill, 255. 308; his death, 337.

—, Major, iv. 208.

—, Thomas, Vol. I.: — Introduction to his Diary, by the editor, v—xxxii; his ancestry i. 76; his childhood and school days, 3. 11; his beginnings in music, 71; his intimacy with Beresford Burstin, 19; his first appearance in print, 22; entered Trinity College, Dublin, 24. 30; at confession, 30; rewarded for his English verse, 33; wrote a masque, 39; and an ode to the King of Dalkey, 44; admitted a member of the University Historical Society, 51; "Ode upon Nothing," 52; his "Letter to the Students of Trinity College, Dublin," 56; commencement of "Anacreon," 59. 97. 103—118. 120; his intimacy with Robert Emmett, 61; and Macklin, 67; took his B. A. degree, 69; entered at the Middle Temple, 70; his adventure with a swindler, 72; his early friends in London, 74; his introduction to Lord Moira, 75; his letters from 1793—1806, 79—195; his adventures with a madman, and with a sharper, 83; his economy, 86; his treatment for an abscess, 103; his introduction to the Duke of Clarence, 106; the Prince of Wales, and Mrs. Fitzherbert, 107. 112; his "Little's Poems," 114; appeared as "Trudge," at the Union Masquerade, 122; about to publish "Memory," 122; wrote an "Ode" for the Birth-day, 127; left England for Bermuda, 135; his voyage from Virginia to Bermuda described, 149; his life at Bermuda, 155; travels in America, 160—174; his arrival in England, 176; his "Canadian Boat Song" written, 181; particulars of his hostile meeting with Jeffrey, 199—216; his letters from 1807—1813, 217; offered 1,000*l.* for a poem, 238; admitted a member of a Dublin Club, 243; married to Miss Dyke, 252. note; his opera of "M. P.," 256. 262; Power's liberality to him, 265; resolved to settle in the country and devote himself to literature, 271; chosen by Lord Byron as his second in a duel, 273; settled at Kegworth, 277; writing the "Irish Melodies," 280. et passim; his happy marriage, 292; took a Derbyshire tour with Rogers, 301; his expectations on Lord Moira's being appointed Governor-General of India, 305. 311; project of a series of lectures on poetry and music, 331; his "Intercepted Letters," or "The Twopenny Post Bag," published, 331. 340. 342. 352; offered the editorship of a Review, 348; took Mayfield Cottage, 352. 359; sold his deputy at Bermuda the profits of his office during the war, 369.

Vol. II.: — Letters (1814—1818), 3—141; his relations with Messrs. Longman in reference to "Lalla Rookh," 17. 34. 57. 58. 75. 116; offered the Jamaica secretaryship by Admiral Douglass, 29; visits Chatsworth, 63; his opinion of Scott's "Lord of the Isles," 68. 69; his opinion of Napoleon, 70; on agitation and Catholicism, 73; "Epistle from Tom Cribb," 81. 277; presents made him, 82; opinion of Scott's "Waterloo," 85; invited to lecture at the Royal Institution, 89; solicited to write a poem on the battle of Waterloo, 98; left Mayfield, 117; settled at Hornsey, 118; "Lalla Rookh" published, 119. 120; takes possession of Sloperton, 128; "The Fudges," 131. 136; his deputy's defalcation at Bermuda, 133; excitement on his visit to Dublin, 139; his diary, 145—358; his description of Dr. Parr, 145; specimens of letters sent him, 151; editorship of a proposed new monthly review offered him, 161; assigned his works to Power, 162; "Beckford's Travels" offered to him to prepare for the press, 193; reasons for thinking the Scotch novels not Scott's, 199; his arrangements with Messrs. Longmans, 220; and with Power, 222, 256; his opinion of Gifford, 230; his opinion on "The Heart of Midlothian," 249; his devotional feelings, 253; his opinion of "Don Juan," 260, 263, 329; his facility and fancy improved when writing in bed, 270; his desire to travel, 287; description of Good Friday sermons, 288; his opinion of Chaucer, 290; his employment at church, 293; the catastrophe of his Bermuda business, 296, 327, 340; his friends' offers of assistance, 339, 340, 341, 343; his description of Mrs. Piozzi, 299; introduced himself to Adair, 303; at the Wiltshire dinner, 308; at a bath, 310; his arrangements with Messrs. Longman as to the "Life of Sheridan," 319; sat to Phillips for his portrait, 327; outline of his intended poem, the "Epicurean," 330.

Vol. III. :—His tour on the Continent with Lord J. Russell, Sir Francis Chantrey, and Jackson the painter, 3, et seq.; his feelings on ascending the Jura, 13; opinion of the road over the Stompin, 16; visits Milan Cathedral, 21; his interview with Lord Byron, 24; introduced to the Countess Guiccioli, 25; visits Venice, 26; Byron's gift to him of his memoirs, 29; visits the library at Ferrara, 29; his visits at Bologna, 30; arrives at Florence, 35; his sojourn at Rome, and intercourse with Canova &c., 47—68; his description of Terni, 70; his arrival at Florence, 77; visits Rousseau's chateau at Chambéry, 85; returns to Paris, 87; his residence in Paris, 88—362; began the "Epicurean," 131; visited his father and mother in Dublin, 286; settlement of the Bermuda business, 291, 339; returned to Paris, 301; arrived in London, 343; returned to Paris, 351; commenced the "Letters from Abroad," 354; commenced a poem, the "Three Angels," 354; requested by Barnes to take his place as editor of the "Times," 362.

Vol. IV. :—Visits Rouen, 8; his publication of the "Loves of the Angels," 24, 31, 32, 36, 40; his opinion of Lord Brougham, 87; his conversation with Constable relative to the editorship of the "Edinburgh," 88; with Canning respecting Sheridan, 90; his tour in Ireland, 100—127; conversation with Mr. Grenville on Sheridan, 134; gave Murray the assignment of Byron's "Memoirs" as security, 176; publication of "Captain Rock," 178, 181, 120, 137; received news of Lord Byron's death, 186; the redemption and destruction of the Byron "Memoirs," with the opinions and acts of the various parties concerned, 186—192; statements and counter-statements that appeared in print, 193—206; negotiations and advice tendered to him about being indemnified for the destruction of the "Memoirs," 194—205; his conversation with Lord Holland, 218; with Mrs. Shelley, 220; with Hobhouse on Lord Byron, 257; visits Longleat, 232; difficulties in the way of his "Life" of Byron, 209, 253; conversation with Dr. Bain about Sheridan, 280, 322, 326; visits York Minster, 329; his visit to Sir Walter Scott at Abbotsford, 331, 343.

Vol. V. :—His visit to Edinburgh, 1—6; conversation with Jeffrey, 7; met Professor Wilson, 9; and Hogg, 12; his reception at the Edinburgh Theatre, 14; arrived in Dublin, 20; death of his father, 22; Messrs. Longmans' kindness to him, 27, 74, 115; visits O'Connell, 35; returns home, 39; his intention of writing a "Life of Byron," and negotiations connected with it, 40, 66, 77, 110, 154, 185, 234, 239, 247, 259; his poetical squibs for "The Times," 46, 50, 73, 194, 239, 309; received a present from Constable of Sir Walter Scott's works, 47; his schemes and occupations, 51—60, 62—114, to the end; Deville's examination of his head, 64; called on Sir Walter Scott in London, 120; Heath proposed to him to edit an annual, 173; appearance of the "Epicurean," 182, 208; visited Newstead, 212, 247, 254; offered the editorship of the "Keepsake," 272, 315; conversation with Sir Walter Scott, 286; and with Mrs. Siddons, 297.

Vol. VI. :—Editor's preface, v—xix; translation of the "Melodies" and "Peri" into Russian, 5; conversation with O'Connell, 11; and with Peel, 13; publication of Vol. I. of the "Life of Byron," 12, 104; proposal of a "History of Ireland" for Laidner's "Cabinet Cyclopædia," 16; description of Anastasia's illness and death, 18—22, 48; elected a member of Brookes's, 53; his picture to be painted for Murray by Sir T. Lawrence, 65; visits Strawberry Hill, 95; appointed one of the members of the Athenæum to elect a hundred members out of a thousand, 119; his materials for a "Life of Lord E. Fitzgerald," 127, 131, 154; visits Ireland, with Mrs. Moore and his sons, 128; his enthusiastic reception, 138—151; publication of his second volume of "Byron," 167; returns to Ireland on account of his mother's illness, 167—176; his "Travels of an Irish Gentleman in Search of a Religion," in hand, 218; wrote an article on "German Rationalism" for the "Edinburgh," 219; his conversation with Lord Lansdowne on Reform, 221; applied to by Bulwer to write for the "New Monthly," 244; conversation with Van Buren, 252; with Schlegel, 258; elected an honorary member of the Literary Union Club, 261; offered terms for an illustrated poem by Harding, 269; his accounts with Power, 271; death of his mother, 272; a contributor to the "Metropolitan Magazine," 273; his proposed election for Limerick, 279, 285, 287, 297—304, 305; conversation with Lord John Russell on Reform, 289; Heath's proposal to him respecting the "Keepsake," 296; address to the electors of Limerick, 305; conversation with Jeffrey, 316; and with Messrs. Longman on his dealings with Power, 319; his name placed on the free lists of the two great houses by Mr. Bunn, 342.

Vol. VII. :—His business relations with Power, 4, 5; visits Mr. Walter at Reading, 14; visits Windsor Castle, 15; correspondence on O'Connell's appliance of "The Dream of those Days" to himself, 35, 56, 130, 145, 146; introduced to Tallyrand, 48; death of his sister Kate, 62, 63; arrangements respecting the appearance of the "Irish History," 66, 82; conversation with Wordsworth, 70; and with Dr. Saunders, 78; went to Liver-

- pool, 95; offered the head clerkship in the State Paper Office, 96; his tour in Ireland, 109—119. 209. 213, 220; his arrival at Dublin, 97; his reception at the theatre, 103; receives a pension of 300*l.* a year, 104. 120; made an honorary member of the Antiquarian Society of Iona, 140; arrangements for supplying the "Chronicle" with squibs, 151; visits Paris with his son, 183; notes of his conversations with General Corbett, 189; correspondence relative to the purchase of an ensigncy for Tom, 193; presented with a copy of "Bayle" by Lord Holland, 198; correspondence with Longmans respecting the projected edition of his works, 213. 245. 272; his "Irish Melodies," and Bunting's selection examined, 277; long interruption in the "Diary," and its causes, 290; visits Corry at Cheltenham, 293; went to Ireland with Hume, 298; his remarks on the translation of the "Irish Melodies" into Irish by Dr. M'Hale, 316; named one of the Prussian Order of Merit, 323; description of the manner of Russell's death, 337; visits Sydney Smith at Combe Florey, 349; letters criticising his works, 352; attends Campbell's funeral as one of the mourners, 373.
- Vol. VIII.* :—Failure of his health and spirits, 7; visited by his sister Ellen, 11; death of his sister Ellen communicated to him, 13; death of his son Tom announced to him, 14; his feelings on finishing his "History of Ireland," 16; newspaper paragraphs respecting him, 18; visit to the Bowood Library, 20; visits Sir Benjamin Brodie, 21; conclusion of the "Diary," 33; Letters (from 1799 to 1847), 37; his reception at Donington, 40; his reception in Dublin, 61; elected a Knight of St. Joachim, 87; his opera of "M.F.," and its success, &c., 91; cottage-hunting in Wales, 104. 141; settled at Mayfield, 132; his domestic felicity, 136; his opinion of Lord Byron's praise, 169; settled at Sloperton, 227; sixth edition of "Lalla Rookh," 229; his literary projects, 233; his opinion of Lord Lansdowne, 234; his opinion of Bowles, 234; his feelings respecting the Bermuda affair, 239; his "Life of Sheridan," 242; Byron's gift of his "Memoirs" to him alluded to, 253; his testimony to Messrs. Longmans' kindness to him, 255. 283; description of his house, 255; allusion to his pension, 272; editor's postscript, 287; view of his tomb, 292.
- Moore, Thomas, Letters from, to — Codd, Joice, i. 239; viii. 39.
Corry, James, viii. 90. 96. 98. 100. 108. 110. 129. 143. 144. 158. 170. 216. 227. 231. 239. 242. 246.
Crampton, Philip, viii. 268. 276. 278.
Dalby, Miss, i. 337. 360; ii. 30. 34; viii. 104. 141. 152. 192.
Dalton, Edward T., i. 292. 302. 304. 305. 325; ii. 7. 36. 55. 76. 79. 80. 87.
Donegal, Lady, i. 181. 209. 210. 212. 224. 235. 241. 246. 257. 262. 265. 268. 269. 272. 286. 320. 362; ii. 3. 21. 41. 47. 70. 73. 96. 108. 112. 114. 129. 132. 137; viii. 62. 82. 83. 113. 135. 196.
Gardiner, William, i. 296. 302; ii. 5. 102; viii. 109.
Godfrey, Miss, i. 179. 194. 207. 217. 220. 228. 232. 270. 280. 290. 299. 311; ii. 23. 67. 84. 92. 104. 140. 141; viii. 59. 61. 82. 91. 132. 134. 188. 200.
Hodgson, Kirkman D., viii. 284.
Kemble, Charles, proposing to write a piece for Covent Garden, for which 400*l.* was to be advanced, v. 82.
Lefanu, Miss, viii. 251.
——, Mrs., viii. 247.
Longman, Mr., i. 263; ii. 75.
Longman, Thomas, jun., viii. 277. 280. 281, 282.
Longman, Messrs., ii. 57.
Moir, Lord, viii. 121.
Moore, John, i. 85. 86. 88. 91. 92. 93; viii. 37. 39.
Moore, Mrs., i. 79. 80. 81. 82. 87. 90. 91. 93. 94. 95. 96. 97. 98. 101. 102. 103. 104. 105. 106. 107. 108. 109. 110. 111. 112. 113. 114. 115. 116. 117. 118. 119. 120. 121. 122. 123. 124. 125. 126. 128. 129. 132. 133. 134. 135. 137. 142. 141. 147. 148. 152. 154. 156. 158. 159. 161. 163. 166. 168. 170. 171. 173. 175. 176. 177. 178. 179. 180. 183. 184. 185. 186. 187. 188. 189. 190. 191. 192. 193. 219. 220. 222. 223. 226. 227. 230. 231. 238. 240. 244. 245. 246. 249. 250. 251. 252. 253. 254. 256. 257. 264. 267. 273. 274. 281. 282. 299. 300. 301. 307. 312. 315. 319. 320. 324. 329. 332. 333. 338. 342. 346. 351. 352. 358. 359. 361. 362. 363. 365. 370. 371. 372; ii. 7. 8. 9. 12. 17. 18. 24. 27. 28. 29. 32. 35. 37. 50. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 66. 69. 82. 83. 81. 89. 90. 99. 100. 103. 106. 107. 111. 116. 117. 118. 119. 120. 121. 122. 123. 124. 125. 126. 127. 131. 136. 139; viii. 40. 65. 74. 103. 105.
Power, James, i. 243. 277. 282. 284. 285. 297. 298. 304. 308. 314. 316. 317. 322. 323. 324. 330. 331. 334. 335. 336. 337. 339. 340. 343. 347. 348. 349. 350. 353. 354. 356. 364. 365. 367. 369; ii. 4. 9. 11. 33. 46. 51. 63. 64. 77. 85. 86. 90. 109. 110. 112. 114. 124. 128. 129. 135. 139.
Rogers, Samuel, viii. 168. 174. 179. 182. 193. 195. 198. 204. 228. 233. 234. 240. 252. 254. 257. 258. 267. 271. 273. 276. 278. 283. 285. 286; vi. 239.
Moore, Thomas, Letters to, from —
A Missouriao, viii. 274.
Auckland, Lord, and Miss Eden, about Russell, vii. 285. 286.
Barnes, Thomas, viii. 269.
Bessy, alluding to his pension, vii. 120.
Cook, A. B., respecting phrenology, vii. 255.
Corry, James, viii. 106. 147. 160. 163. 260.
Crampton, vi. 272.
Dalby, Mr., i. 275.
Donegal, Lady, i. 277; ii. 38. 71. 98; viii. 52. 57. 77. 117. 125. 206. 252. 262.
Douglas, Captain, R. N., i. 165.
Glenbervie, Lord, i. 291.
Godfrey, Miss, i. 182. 212. 232. 259. 277. 287. 293. 309; ii. 94; viii. 41. 56. 66. 72. 75. 138. 155. 165. 190. 202. 208. 221. 226. 243. 249.
Griffin, Dr., vi. 299.
Hunt, Leigh, viii. 120. 156. 171. 210. 211. 235.
Jeffrey, Francis, ii. 15. 25. 26. 39. 40. 41. 42. 53. 67. 78. 101. 138.
Lee, Thomas, vii. 358.
Lewis, Matthew G., viii. 43. 46. 54.
Merry, Mrs., viii. 50.

- Molra, Lord, i. 185. 193. 222. 313; viii. 219.
- Moore, John, i. 130.
- Murray, John, viii. 230.
- Perry, James, viii. 127. 146. 177.
- Rogers, Samuel, viii. 68. 79. 81. 88. 93. 94. 97. 101. 111. 114. 115. 123. 252. 176. 181. 184. 212. 218. 221. 224. 245.
- Sheridan, Charles, alluded to, iv. 32.
- Strangford, Lord, vii. 225.
- The Superiress of the Presentation Convent at Wexford, vii. 127.
- Thierry, M., vii. 250.
- Moore, Thomas Lansdowne Parr, born, ii. 202; taken to school at Mr. Lawes' at Marlborough, v. 274; enters the Charter House, vi. 51; his regiment ordered to Dublin, vii. 220; resolved to sell his commission, 307. 324; advised to enter the Foreign Legion of the French Army in Algiers, 325; his letter to his father, 327, 328; dangerously ill in Africa, viii. 11; his death 14; extracts from his last letter, 14.
- Moorson, Admiral, iv. 28.
- Moran, vii. 43. et passim.
- Morantin, iii. 279.
- Morata, Miss Olympia Fulvia, vii. 17.
- More, Sir Thomas, "Utopia," v. 34; vi. 307.
- "More last Words," iv. 322.
- Moreau, M., iii. 154, 155.
- Morel, ii. 180.
- Moreton, v. 106; vi. 40; vii. 69.
- Morgan, Lady, her success, iii. 36; her "Life of Salvator Rosa," iv. 101; her story of Sir A. Carlisle and the little female dwarf Crachami, vi. 130; "O'Briens and O'Flahertys," vii. 192.
- , Sir Charles, anecdote of, v. 297.
- "Morphofus," vi. 340.
- Mori, Nicholas, v. 68.
- Morier, ii. 313. et passim.
- , Mrs., iii. 308.
- Morley, Lady, iv. 85. et passim.
- , Lord, ii. 354.
- "Morning Chronicle, The," paragraph from, respecting Moore's "Epistle from Tom Cribb," ii. 81.
- "—— Herald, The," iv. 186. 205.
- "—— Post, The," ii. 59. et passim.
- "—— Register, The," vi. 141; vii. 233.
- Mornington, Lord, ii. 275. 281.
- Morpeth, Lady, ii. 61. et passim.
- , Lady Georgiana, ii. 347.
- , Lord, letter from, to Moore, vii. 229.
- Morris, Captain, an annuitant of the Prince of Wales, ii. 175; and Lord Stowell, story of, iv. 93; extracts from two volumes of his MS., vii. 246. 248; "Old Horace, when he dippt'd his pen," 248; played "Captain Mac-heath," i. 8; stanzas on Molly Dacre, vi. 94; "The Old Bard" written by, ii. 175; "Where nothing is seen," 249.
- , Miss, ii. 275. et passim.
- Morrison, Mr., iii. 15.
- Morrit, Rev. Mr., always at war with his parishioners for tithes, iv. 110.
- Morse, Miss, iv. 169.
- Mortainville, ii. 262.
- "Mort du Tasse," iii. 203.
- Morton, Thomas, "School of Reform," ii. 176.
- "Morus," v. 91.
- Moschelles, Ignace, v. 316; vii. 8.
- Moscow, ii. 318; vi. 5.
- Moseley, Dr. Willis, i. 96.
- "Moses," by Michael Angelo, iii. 56. 71.
- Mosheim, John Laurence, "Account of the First Age of Christianity," iv. 94; "Ecclesiastical History," 94, 95; vi. 224.
- Mosquitoes, i. 141.
- Mossop, modelling a series of heads of eminent Irishmen, iii. 288.
- Mostorganem, vii. 343; viii. 11. 14.
- "Mother Goose," ii. 335.
- Moulins, iii. 86.
- Moulsey, vi. 89.
- Moulson, i. 37.
- Mount-Cashel, Lord, iv. 20.
- , Charles, the, vi. 260.
- , Edgcumbe, Countess, i. 119. et passim.
- , Edgcumbe, Lord, viii. 26.
- "—— of Olives," iv. 207.
- Mourne Abbey, iv. 109. note.
- Mozart, Wolfgang Amadeus, "Benedictus," ii. 175. 276; vii. 86; "Dona nobis Pacem," 128; "Requiem," 323.
- Mozzi, Madame, iii. 80.
- "Mrs Rundell's Cookery," sale of, v. 118.
- "Much Ado about Nothing," vii. 305.
- Muckle-mouthed Meg, drawing of the legend of, iv. 336.
- Mucross Abbey, iv. 115.
- Muir, Dr., v. 317.
- Mulgrave, Lord (Marquess of Normanby), directed that half pay should be paid to Moore's father, ii. 114.
- Muller, "Account of the Ionian Isles," iv. 37.
- Mulock, his lecture, iii. 169.
- Mulvany, vi. 152. et passim.
- Münck, Mademoiselle, iii. 113. 175. 216.
- Mundys, the, vi. 286.
- Mungo Park, iii. 292.
- Munich, iii. 163; iv. 255.
- Munster, Lady, vi. 208.
- , Lord, vi. 208.
- Murat, King of Naples, ii. 247. et passim.
- Muratori, iii. 20.
- Murchison, vii. 246.
- Mure, Dr., v. 11.
- Muretus, ii. 332; vii. 173. 174.
- Murillo, "Prodigal Son," iii. 234.
- Murphy, Arthur, a dull writer, ii. 253; "Apprentice," vi. 117; "Know your own Mind," ii. 253.
- , James C., "Arabian Antiquities of Spain," iv. 138.
- , Mrs., vi. 143.
- , Billy, anecdote of, vii. 239.
- Murtadi, "Egypt," v. 145.
- Murtado, iv. 250.
- Murray, Mrs. Anne (Bessy's sister), death of, v. 180.
- , Lady A., ii. 318; v. 179.
- , Archbishop, v. 31; vii. 106; viii. 31.
- , Lady Caroline, v. 179; vii. 156.
- , Charles, vi. 249. 251. 257.
- , Master Charles, vi. 121. 123.
- , John, Esq., wished Moore to write a "Tom Brown on the literature, manners, and characters of the day," ii. 282; his arrangements with Moore about the payment for Lord Byron's "Memoirs," iii. 260. 280; iv. 198; v. 261; and Moore, correspondence between them alluded to, respecting an Essay on

- Byron's poetical character, vi. 216, 247; reconciliation between, v. 71; failure of his "Representative" newspaper, 101; his "Handbook," iii. 30. note; letter from, to Moore, viii. 230; his plan with respect to "Byron's Life and Works," vi. 223.
- Murray, Sir John, i. 337; squib on, not Moore's, 337.
- , Lord Advocate, accompanied Jeffrey to Chalk Farm, i. 203. note.
- , Rev. Mr., lines applied to him and his wife, ii. 181.
- , William, v. 6. et passim.
- Museum of the ropes in which various malefactors had been hung, ii. 150.
- "——, The Monthly," iv. 31. et passim.
- Musée Napoleon, iii. 127.
- Musgrove, translation of "Camoens," vii. 32.
- Music issuing from light a good idea of Heaven, iii. 66.
- Muskerry, Lord, story of, iv. 16.
- Musters, v. 258.
- , Mrs., v. 258.
- Muswell Hill, ii. 163. et passim.
- "My harp has one unchanging theme," vi. 179.
- "—— muse, too, when her wings are dry," vii. 248.
- Myronian Gallery, the, viii. 179.
- "Mystères d'Isis," iii. 181.

N.

- Naas, iv. 121, 122.
- Nabob of Arcot, ii. 194.
- Nagle, Sir E., iii. 270.
- Naldi, Madlle., iii. 138, 254.
- Napier, Colonel, v. 101, 143.
- , Mrs., viii. 125.
- , Sir Charles, remark of his, before the battle at Meeanee, vii. 348.
- , Miss Emily, iv. 38. et passim.
- , Henry, v. 130, 131, 171.
- , Mrs. Henry, v. 130, 131.
- , John, vii. 122, 299.
- , Lady, vii. 108.
- , Lady Sarah, v. 117.
- , Lord, vi. 233.
- , Professor, opinion of Moore and his "Life of Sheridan," v. 34.
- , Richard, vi. 137.
- Naples, iii. 51. et passim.
- , Bay of, iii. 44.
- , King of, iii. 32. et passim.
- Napoleon Buonaparte, alluded to, ii. 6; and Emanuel's roads at the Echelles, iii. 85, 86; and his guard, embarking for Elba, 116; and Pozzo di Borgo, v. 228; the Bayeux tapestry, vii. 192; "at Elba," by Haydon, vi. 331; autograph letter of, to Louis XVIII., vii. 44; bust of, iii. 70; by Canova, ii. 32; iii. 32; compared with Milton's "Satan," ii. 70; curious and characteristic autograph of, in the possession of Sir Robert Peel, vi. 58; his dislike of the Irish accounted for, vii. 189; heaps of pencil notes of his, in the possession of Count Montholon, vi. 270; his coronation announced by balloons, v. 200; detention of English travellers, dispute upon it by Lord Holland and Sir J. Mackintosh, ii. 334; irreparable losses near Smolensko, viii. 128; library at Mal-
- maison, iii. 231; system of carrying off a tragedy successfully, 364; his will, alluded to, 316; instructed Talma how to play Nero, 4, letter to the Empress Josephine, read to Moore, 98; "Life of," iv. 341, 342; v. 177; method of translating the English newspapers to him, i. 295; note to Maria Louisa on his return from Elba, iii. 79; opposed by Bernadotte, i. 294; report concerning his driving towards the royal army ungarded, ii. 70; his road over the Alps, viii. 185; "Tragedy on the Life of," by Niccolini, iii. 42; wished to be allowed to live in England, viii. 191; intelligence of his death, iii. 250, 255.
- Napoleons, the, viii. 197.
- Napoli di Romania, iv. 88.
- "Napper Tandy" dinner, i. 18.
- Nares, Rev. Robert, "Glossary," iv. 95.
- Narishkin, v. 271, 272.
- Nash, Mrs., vi. 42.
- "National Airs," ii. 268; iii. 4.
- , Gallery, the, v. 72; vi. 57. note.
- "——, Melodies, The," i. xxii.
- , Songs, conversation on, alluded to, iii. 332.
- "Naturâ ad modos ducimur," ii. 128.
- Natural Music, its characteristic omission of the 4th and 7th, ii. 235.
- Nature and art, iii. 70.
- Nautilus, the, viii. 181.
- "Naval Recollections," vii. 47, 85.
- Naylor, viii. 87.
- "Nea," her grave, iii. 358.
- Neale, Daniel, "History of the Puritans," iv. 159.
- , Colonel, iii. 344.
- Neapolitan Revolution, squib on, iv. 325.
- Neapolitans, the, iii. 173. et passim.
- Need, General, v. 247.
- Negroes, the, ii. 183, 184.
- Neilson, story of his meeting Reynolds, vi. 170.
- "Nell Gwynne," portrait of, v. 210.
- Nelson, Lord, epitaph on, v. 139; his death deplored, i. 186.
- "——, Memoires de," iii. 267.
- Nenagh, iv. 122.
- Neptune, grotto of, iii. 70.
- Nero, iii. 4, 28.
- "Neron," iii. 265.
- "Nerot's Hotel," iii. 166.
- Neuilly, iii. 180. et passim.
- Neumann, vii. 325.
- Newark, Castle of, v. 3.
- Newbury, ii. 164. et passim.
- Newcastle, Duke of, iii. 315. et passim.
- "New Edinburgh Monthly Review, The," ii. 268; iv. 256.
- "Newenham," iv. 130.
- Newmarket, ii. 158. et passim.
- "New Monthly Magazine, The," iv. 43. et passim.
- Newnham, Mr., iv. 108.
- Newport, Sir John, vi. 208. note.
- "News for Country Cousins," v. 101, 103.
- Newstead Abbey, the brass eagle found there, v. 249.
- Newte, Mrs., iii. 317.
- Newtes, the, iii. 315.
- "New Times," the, iii. 126.
- Newton, iii. 277. et passim.
- , Sir Isaac, and Locke, correspondence between them, iv. 154; anecdote of, v. 246; said to be an Arian by Moore, 265.

New York, prettiness of its environs, i. 160.
 ——— paper, a scrap relating to Moore, i. 168.
 Ney, Marshal, tomb of, iii. 147.
 Niccolini, "Tragedy on the Life of Buonaparte," iii. 39. 42.
 Nice, v. 204.
 Nicholl, Sir John, iv. 167.
 Nicholson, Charles, "Last Rose of Summer," iii. 349.
 ———, Margaret, v. 131.
 ———, Mrs. Stewart, iv. 169.
 Nicolas, Sir Harris, vii. 227.
 Nicolle, and a "show-off" man, iii. 187.
 "Night after the Battle of Jena," by Benvenuti, iii. 44.
 "Nimrod," v. 308. 311.
 Nimyerich, vi. 243.
 "Nina," iii. 90. 182. 307.
 "Ninon chez Madame de Sévigné," iv. 4.
 ——— de l'Enclos, iii. 177.
 Niobe, iii. 45.
 "——, Son of," by Pradier, iii. 360.
 "No and Yes," v. 202.
 "——, leave this heart to rest," iv. 274.
 "Non sequitur," heads, iii. 185.
 Nootka Sound, story connected with, iv. 320.
 "No Popery, a Despatch from Don Streptos Diabolo," v. 88.
 Norbury Lord, joke of, iv. 118; story of, told by Luttrell, v. 151.
 Norfolk, Virginia, i. 139; its strange climate, 146.
 ———, Duke of, ii. 175. et passim.
 Norman, vii. 362.
 Normanby, Lady, iv. 76; v. 295; vii. 236.
 ———, Lord, v. 273. et passim.
 Norris, Miss, iii. 324.
 North, Brownlow, iii. 128.
 ———, Dudley, iv. 231; v. 30. 223.
 ———, Lord, anecdote of, iv. 136. 166; stories of, 171.
 Northampton, Lord, v. 157; vii. 165.
 Northcote, iv. 75. 125.
 "Northern Whig, The," vi. 104; vii. 93.
 North Pole, the, vi. 100. note, 264.
 Northumberland, Duchess of, vi. 150, 151; vii. 212.
 ———, Duke of, iii. 155. et passim.
 North Wales, viii. 94.
 Norton, Hon. Mrs., Moore's intention to dedicate his "Summer Fête" to her, vi. 201.
 Norway, Sueno, King of, viii. 162.
 Norwegians, the, iii. 222.
 Norwood, vii. 45.
 Nötre Dame, iii. 217. 267.
 "Nouvelles de la République des Lettres," ii. 169.
 Novaro, iii. 84.
 Nova Scotia, v. 218.
 "Novelle," iii. 10.
 Novello, ii. 293.
 Nugee, Mr., v. 167. 291.
 Nugent, drawing the head of "Anacreon," i. 97.
 ———, Lord, iv. 79. et passim.
 "Nymph," a, by Canova, iii. 56.
 "—— and Satyr," iii. 54; by Correggio, 265.
 Nymphs, the," iii. 73.

O.

Oakden, ii. 203. et passim.
 ——— Mrs., ii. 203. 206.
 Oakhanger Hall, i. 343; viii. 141.
 Oakley, iii. 283.
 Oak-over Hall, viii. 153.
 Oatlands, iii. 99; vii. 331.
 O'Brien, ii. 295. et passim.
 "Oboron," the music more odd than agreeable, v. 60.
 Obrecht, iii. 326. 330.
 ———, Lady James, vi. 203.
 ———, Lord James, iv. 271; v. 145; vi. 203.
 "O'Briens and O'Flahertys," the, vii. 192.
 Observatoire, the, iii. 365.
 "Observer, The," iv. 201.
 "——, Irish," iv. 182.
 "O Cara Memoria," iv. 250.
 Ochinus, vii. 52.
 Ockzakow, vi. 78.
 O'Connell, Daniel, offered Moore a seat in Parliament, i. xx; correspondence with Moore, relative to English Protestants, in the reign of Queen Mary, vii. 333; and the Repeal of the Union, vi. 146. 325; arrangement between him and the Government on the trials in 1844, 168; construed "The Dream of those Days" into a personal attack, vii. 35; conversation with Judge Day on Ireland, iv. 118; his praise of Moore in his speeches at the Dublin Union, vi. 305; his inconsistency on George IV.'s visit to Ireland, iii. 275; his new reading of Moore, alluded to, vii. 369; his perversion of power, alluded to, 37; his ignorance of the events of '98, vi. 183; instance of his inconsistency, v. 35; his agitation on reading Moore's verses, vii. 38; told Moore a story of himself, vi. 12; fatal consequences of his extraordinary career, vii. 36.
 ———, John, vii. 369.
 ———, Maurice, vii. 171.
 O'Connor, "The Four Masters," vii. 238.
 O'Connor, Arthur, one of the originators of "The Press," i. 55.
 ———, Dr., "Rerum Heb. Script.," vii. 369.
 ———, Roderick, "last of the bards," his appeal to Moore, iv. 106.
 Odd effect of seeing a comic personage in an ill humour, vi. 61.
 Oddity of Scotch law terms, ii. 225.
 Odéon, the, iii. 225. 317.
 "Odes and Epistles from America," v. 266.
 Odescalchi, Vittoria, her six masses, iii. 64.
 "Ode to a Hat," omitted stanza of, v. 100.
 "—— to Posterity," i. 269.
 "—— to the Sunlike Porte," v. 130.
 "—— to the Youths of Trinity College," vi. 312.
 "—— upon Nothing," removed from the books of the Historical Society by Moore, i. 55; the debate on the, 53, 54.
 O'Donnell, ii. 74.
 O'Donoghue, tomb of, iv. 115.
 O'Donovan, "The Four Masters," vii. 238.
 O'Driscoll, "Views of Ireland," iv. 105.
 O'Dwyer, vii. 45.
 "Odyssey," parallel found in the, to the

- story of the Indian Chief at Niagara,
 vii. 284.
 "Œuvres de Bayle," vii. 52.
 O'Ferrall, Miss, vii. 162.
 —, More, vii. 143.
 Office and routine, vii. 223.
 Offer, iv. 212.
 "Oft in the stilly night," ii. 222; iv. 233;
 vii. 124.
 "Oggi con me," ii. 178, 179.
 Ogilvie, vi. 174.
 Ogle, Moore accused of borrowing his translation of "Anacreon" from him, iv. 243, 244.
 —, Dean, a very absent man, vi. 101.
 —, George, i. 113.
 —, Miss, ii. 298, 299.
 —, Mrs., iv. 52. et passim.
 —, Mrs. H., iv. 48.
 —, Sir C., v. 304.
 O'Gorman, vi. 11, 12.
 O'Hagarty, iii. 88.
 O'Hallaran, "History of Ireland," iv. 137.
 "Oh, all ye angels of the Lord," vii. 119.
 "— bear me to that gloomy lake," iv.
 181.
 "— ! blame me not," Byron's opinion of,
 i. xxii.
 "— ! blame not the bard," vi. 196.
 "— ! 'breathe not his name," Byron's opinion of, i. xxii.
 "— come to me when daylight sets," v.
 181; vii. 305.
 "— Death!" v. 59.
 "— ! doubt me not," an omission to be corrected in, i. 340; discordantly correct, 356.
 "—, fair ! oh, purest !" i. 322.
 "— ! had I a bright little isle," additional verse of, alluded to, i. 347; quoted in "The Morning Chronicle," 355.
 "— ! had we some bright little isle," i.
 xxviii.
 "— how sweet to think hereafter," ii. 176.
 "—, if your tears are given to care," ii.
 178.
 "—, Lord Lyndhurst," vii. 161.
 "— no, I would not leave thee," v. 92.
 "— ! remember the time," second verse,
 i. 349.
 "— ! see those cherries," second verse, i.
 319.
 "— ! the days are gone when beauty bright," ii. 177; vii. 352.
 "—, the Shamrock !" i. 318.
 "— ! the sight entrancing," vii. 369.
 "— Thou who driest the mourner's tear," ii. 195.
 "— ! where's the slave so lowly," ii. 52;
 v. 80.
 "— Woman !" ii. 56.
 Okeden, v. 136, 137, 138.
 O'Keefe's "Poor Soldier," i. 13.
 O'Kelly, Georgiana, vii. 105, 232.
 Oldenburg, Duchess of, viii. 191.
 Oldham, iv. 124, 217; vi. 129.
 "Old Horace, when he dipped his pen,"
 vii. 248.
 "— Monthly Magazine, The," iv. 43.
 — newspapers, the most interesting history, ii. 190.
 O'Leary, Arthur, viii. 31.
 —, Dr., iv. 112.
 Olympic Theatre, the, ii. 236; vi. 255.
 "—, the, iii. 93, 94.
 "Olympus late to Ossa said," iv. 246.
 Ombark, Boubi, iii. 315; iv. 152.
 "Ombra Odorata," iv. 202.
 Ombres Chinoises, iii. 144.
 O'Meara, forwards witnesses for Queen
 Caroloe, iii. 151.
 —, Thomas, vii. 106.
 "O Memory," iv. 270.
 Omitted lines from "Erasmus on Earth to Cicero in the Shades," vii. 152.
 "Omnipresence," v. 288.
 "One bumper at parting" i. 318, 347
 "— hour with thee," v. 288.
 Oneida Indians, divided into three tribes,
 i. 169.
 O'Neil, Colonel, v. 217, 218, 219.
 —, Miss, her singing one of Moore's songs, ii. 310.
 —, Phelim, proposal to murder him,
 vii. 302.
 Onofrio, St., iii. 63.
 "O noi d'Arcadia fortunata gente," iii. 72.
 Onslow, Mr. Speaker, settled a point of etiquette between the Houses of Lords and Commons, v. 108, and note.
 Ontario, Lake, i. 171, 173, 174.
 Opera, Bal Masqué at the, iii. 206.
 —, contrast between the audiences of
 London and Paris, iii. 316.
 Opie, Mrs., "Tales," ii. 269, 270.
 Opposition measures and the Ministry,
 ii. 97.
 Oratory, powers of the Irish and Scotch for, contrasted, iv. 334.
 Orde, ii. 178. et passim.
 —, Mrs., ii. 178. et passim.
 O'Reilly, Mr. Bernard, ii. 165.
 Orfila, Madame, iii. 338.
 Orford, Lord, iv. 264, 303.
 Origen, i. 211.
 "Origin of Evil," v. 142.
 Orlando, iv. 213.
 Orleans, Duchess of, iii. 181, 308.
 —, Duke of (Louis Philippe), his opinion that there would be war between England and Russia, iii. 204; invited
 Moore to dine with him, 191.
 —, Mademoiselle, her present to
 Moore of a clock, iii. 303.
 Orloff, Count, and thirteen to dinner, ii.
 206; in search of Moore's autograph, iv.
 12; on a visit to Scott, v. 5. note.
 Orme, Cosmo, Esq., letter from, proposing
 Moore as the editor of a new annual,
 v. 133.
 Ormond, Lord, ii. 288; viii. 147.
 "Ormonde," iv. 165.
 O'Rourke, vii. 352.
 Orta, Lake of, iii. 17.
 Osborne, Sir Henry, v. 149.
 Osmond, Marquis d', iii. 127.
 "—," iv. 93.
 Ossian, an imitation of, written by Moore,
 i. 56; see also vii. 365.
 Ossory, Lord, ii. 261.
 Ossulston, Lady, iii. 310. et passim.
 —, Lord, iii. 285; v. 320.
 Osterley, iv. 228.
 Ostrowski's translation of the "Loves of the Angels," vii. 169.
 O'Sullivan, Rev. Mortimer, "Rock Detected," iv. 224.
 Oswestry, iv. 98; v. 19.
 "Othello," iii. 38. et passim.
 Otricoli, iii. 76.
 Outley, v. 74.
 Ottoman flag on the ball of St. Peter's at Rome, iii. 218.
 Otway, Captain, i. 89.

- Oudenarde, Madame d', iii. 207.
 "Our home is on the sea, boy," iv. 266.
 Ousely, Sir Gore, and the King of Persia, iii. 215.
 Ovid, "Art of Love," vii. 30.
 Owen, Robert, vi. 242; anecdote of, 343.
 Owensson, Miss, Irishism, from the "Dublin Magazine," on her portrait, viii. 75.
 Oxford, ii. 159. et passim.
 —, Lady, ii. 178. et passim.
 —, Lord, ii. 234; iv. 312.
- P.
- Paccini, iii. 105.
 Pacetti, iii. 74.
 Packwood, vi. 234.
 Pacodsky, M., vii. 43.
 "Padre Amato," vi. 163.
 Padua, iii. 23. et passim.
 "Paddy O'Rafferty," viii. 60.
 "Paddy's Metamorphosis," vi. 312.
 "Pæniinsularum Sermio," iv. 129.
 Paer, "Agnes," iii. 297; his introduction of an air sung to the bagpipes, in Rome, at Christmas time, 93.
 Pasiello, iii. 73.
 Paganini, Moore's opinion of, vi. 210.
 Page, Colonel, v. 245.
 "Pages," the, iii. 169.
 Paget, Lord Clarence, vii. 262.
 —, the Lords, vi. 173. 175.
 Pahlen, Count, iii. 333; vii. 46.
 Paine, iv. 258.
 Painting and Painters, remarks on by Newton, iii. 278.
 Pakenham, A'miral, viii. 6.
 Palais de Justice, iii. 24.
 —, Royal, the, iii. 21. et passim.
 Palatine Mount, the, iii. 66.
 Palazzo Commune, the, iii. 46.
 —, Pitti, the, iii. 42.
 —, Spada, the, iii. 53.
 Palerine, the, iii. 20.
 "Palestine," v. 147.
 Paley, Rev. Dr. William, li. 199. et passim.
 Palgrave, Sir Francis, his offer of assistance to Moore in his "History," vii. 144; "Parliamentary Writs," 209.
 Palladio, iii. 23. 31.
 Pallavicini Palace, the, iii. 50.
 Palmella, Marquis, iv. 307. et passim.
 Palmer, Colonel, iii. 252.
 —, Lady Madalina, li. 180.
 Palmerston, Lord, vi. 30. et passim.
 Pamela, li. 332.
 Pamfili, Pope, "Velasquez," iii. 62.
 "Pamphlet on the Regency," ii. 189.
 Pancharilla, iv. 144.
 Panfili, the Villa, iii. 52.
 "Pandarus, Book of," vii. 238.
 Pangloss, Dr., ii. 179; vii. 120; viii. 211.
 Panicali, Massolino, iii. 41.
 Panizzi, Signor, vii. 261. 322.
 Panmure, Lord, vii. 293.
 Panorama, the, li. 313.
 —, Dramatique, the, iii. 226.
 —, of Thebes, vii. 150.
 Panshanger, iii. 281. et passim.
 Pantheon, the, iii. 48. et passim.
 "Panurge," iii. 154.
 Paolo fuori delle Mure, S., lii. 56.
 Papplewick, v. 212.
 "Paradis de Mahomet," iii. 336.
 "Paradise and the Peri," beauty of, i. xxvi; translated into Russian, vi. 5.
 "——— Lost," ii. 200; v. 119.
 "——— Regained," ii. 200.
 Parc de Sablons, iii. 124.
 "Paria," the, iii. 312. 317.
 Parini, iii. 74.
 Paris, Moore's residence at, ii. 124. et seq.
 —, University of, vi. 187.
 —, Dr., v. 263.
 —, Matthew, vi. 280.
 Park, Mungo, v. 4.
 Parke, John Allen, iv. 33.
 —, Judge, his address to a young woman in court, vi. 52.
 Parker, iv. 33.
 Parkgate, i. 80. 93.
 Parkinson, Dr., v. 257; and Paley, ii. 208; jilted by a girl he had educated on purpose to marry, 279; see also i. 339, 340.
 Parliament, Acts of, instances of mistakes in, ii. 146.
 "Parliamentary Debates," ii. 233.
 —, Oratory, conversation on, vii. 175.
 —, Reform, Mr. Fox's main object, ii. 304.
 Parma, its library containing 80,000 volumes, iii. 82.
 Parmigiano, "St. John," iv. 79.
 "Parnaso Italiano," iii. 68.
 Parnell, Sir Henry, iv. 206.
 —, William, vii. 109.
 "Parody of the Prince's Letter," i. 266.
 —, on Crabbe, Bowles, and Moore, by Watson Taylor, v. 52.
 "——— on Horace," ii. 194.
 —, on the Brown Loaf, by Luttrell, v. 123.
 Parr, Dr., claimed descent from Archbishop Usher's chaplain of the same name, ii. 149; his contemptuous opinion of Irish scholars, 148; criticised Fox's Letter to the Electors of Westminster, 149; his Greek verses against the Prince Regent, 147; story of his cutting the throat of his first wife's picture, 255; his utterance, 146. and note; written to by Moore respecting his promise to be godfather for his expected child, 211; amusing instance of his stilted phraseology, vii. 153; his bequest of a ring to Moore, iv. 297.
 —, Mrs., ii. 147.
 Parry, Dr., viii. 51.
 —, Captain, iv. 217.
 —, John, viii. 28, 29.
 Parsons, v. 66. 310.
 —, Sir Lawrence (First Lord Rosse), couplet on, i. 40.
 Partridge, Miss, iv. 143.
 Pascal, "Lettres Provinciales," vi. 210. 249. 258.
 Pashley, Mr., vii. 240. 250.
 Pasquin, Antony, cause of his death, iii. 239.
 Passaick Falls, i. 163. 166.
 Passion sermons in the Dublin chapels, ii. 288.
 Passy, pavillon at, iii. 353.
 Pasta, Madame, iii. 367; admirable in "Tancredi," v. 274; and Sontag, partisanship for each of them, 290; failure of, iv. 5.
 "Pastoral Ballad, A," quoted, i. 23.
 "Pastor Fido," i. 94.

- Pataille, M., vii. 186.
 Paternoster Row, ii. 259. et passim.
 Paton, Miss, iv. 304.
 Patras, v. 266; vi. 14.
 Patrick, St., a name for the Devil, ii. 148.
 Patrickson, Mr., i. 83.
 Patriots, non-existence of, i. 289.
 Patterson, Miss, i. 158. note.
 Paul, St., iii. 31. 59. 351; "preaching at Athens," by Raphael, iv. 72.
 —, Emperor, iv. 340.
 — of Wirtemberg, Prince, iii. 320. 343.
 Paulet, Lord, lii. 333.
 "Paul Pry," v. 72.
 Paulus, Dr., vii. 83, 84, 90.
 Pavilion, the, iv. 295.
 Payne, John, iv. 309.
 —, Judge, epigram on, viii. 6.
 —, Lady, iii. 209.
 —, Mr., ii. 148.
 —, Sir Ralph, anecdote of, iv. 318.
 Peace, Temple of, iii. 49. 59.
 Peach, Mr., ii. 102.
 Peachey, General, iv. 181, 182.
 Peacock, v. 218.
 Peacocke, Sir William, lii. 212.
 Peake, ii. 67.
 Pearce, ii. 232. et passim.
 "Pearls of the East," vii. 178.
 Pearse, ii. 215. 317.
 Pearse, the Misses, ii. 215. 318.
 Pearson, v. 248, 249, 255.
 "Peasant Boy," a, by Thorwaldsen, iii. 63.
 Peat, pun on, by Jekyll, v. 155.
 Peculiar Scotch phrase, iv. 233.
 Peel, Lady, vi. 331.
 —, Lady Alice, v. 173.
 —, Lady Jane, vi. 203.
 —, Mrs., vi. 55.
 —, Sir Robert, v. 162; vi. 162. 203. 317; curious and characteristic autograph of Napoleon, in the possession of, 58; extract from his letter to Moore, 326; ghost story of, respecting Lord Byron, 14; happy use of Moore's lines in his reply to Lord Palmerston, vii. 326; letter to Moore, thanking him for a Byron autograph, vi. 58; Moore's opinion of, iv. 292; viii. 246; nicknamed the "Veiled Prophet," vii. 306; repartee of, iv. 311.
 Peers, the, ii. 264, 265.
 Pelagie, St., iii. 305.
 Pelham, vii. 212, 213.
 Pellegrin, iii. 204.
 Pellegrini, iii. 111. 196.
 Pellegrino, the, iii. 26. et passim.
 Pemberton, Mr., vi. 256.
 —, Mrs., vi. 256.
 Pembroke, Lady, iv. 248. et passim.
 —, Lord, iv. 248, 249, 250.
 Pendel, iv. 257, 258.
 Peninsular War, the, iv. 255; "History of the," v. 143.
 Penleaze, Mr., iii. 217.
 Penn, William, ii. 167; vi. 108; vii. 246.
 Pennington, Dr., v. 258.
 —, Mrs., v. 213.
 Pennsylvania, vii. 349.
 Penrith, viii. 116.
 Penrose, "Journal," vi. 10.
 "Pensa alla patria," viii. 29.
 Penschurst, vi. 170.
 Pension List Committee, Moore's grant confirmed by acclamation, vii. 220.
 Pepe, General, iii. 347.
 Pepinus Brevis, vii. 366.
 Pepys, Samuel, v. 43.
 Perceval, Right Hon. Spencer, his advice to Tierney, vi. 184; his private virtues, alluded to, viii. 108.
 Percival, Dr., iv. 101.
 Percy, Lord, vi. 150.
 "Peregrine Pickle," vi. 41.
 Père la Chaise, iii. 9.
 Pergola, the, iii. 43.
 Perigord, iii. 183.
 Perlet, iii. 208. 276.
 Pernetz, "Fables Egyptiennes," iii. 130.
 Perrier, Casimir, iii. 202. 262.
 Perry, James, letters from, to Moore, viii. 127. 146. 177; mentioned Moore's poem to Mr. Longman, 177.
 —, S., ii. 301; his death, iii. 307.
 —, Mrs., viii. 128. 179.
 "Persecution of the Christians," by Domenichino, iii. 30. 81.
 "Perseus," by Benvenuto Cellini, iii. 36; by Canova, 48.
 Persia, King of, lii. 215.
 Persian Ambassador, the, ii. 311.
 "Persius," vii. 45. and note.
 Personifications, ii. 200.
 Perth, Lady, ii. 247.
 Perticari, Madame, iii. 67, 68, 69.
 Perngia, iii. 76.
 Perngino, iii. 20; vii. 192.
 —, Pietro, iii. 77. 81.
 Pesaroni, vi. 32. 33.
 Peshall, Lady, i. 86. 88.
 Peter, St., iii. 46. et passim; "and Paul," by Guido, 83.
 "Peter's Letters to his Kinsfolk," ii. 357; v. 12.
 Peterborough, Dean of, vii. 307.
 —, Lord, anecdote of, vi. 7.
 Peters, iii. 222. et passim.
 Petersham, Lord, i. 178; ii. 320.
 "Peter Wilkins," v. 169.
 "Petites Danaïdes," iii. 92. 101.
 "Petition of the Orangemen of Ireland," v. 98.
 Petrarch, bust of, iii. 151; by Canova, 23; by Leopold, 23.
 —, "Virgil," iii. 20.
 Petre, Lord, v. 281; vii. 370.
 Petrie, vii. 232. 237, 238.
 Petty, Sir William, characteristic passage from one of his letters, vii. 152; "Life of," 152.
 Petworth, viii. 224.
 "Peveril of the Peak," v. 125.
 Peyronnet, iii. 325.
 Peyton, iii. 332.
 Phaeton, the, vii. 47. 85, 86.
 Phibbs, Mr., i. 88.
 Philadelphia, the only place in America boasting literary society, i. 164.
 Philalethes Cantabrigiensis, attributed by Lord John Russell to Dr. Maltby or Dr. Thayer, vii. 25, 26. and note.
 Philharmonic Society, the, ii. 167. 324.
 Philippe le Bel, iii. 247; MS. 15.
 Philipps, Captain, iv. 235.
 —, Charles, vii. 167.
 —, jun., George, vi. 201.
 Phillips, ii. 327; vii. 44; his "Recollections of Curran," ii. 241.
 —, Mrs., ii. 320; vii. 20.
 —, Mrs. G., iv. 60.
 —, Rev. Mr., vi. 233.
 —, Sir George, v. 290; vi. 183. 197.
 —, Sir Richard, iv. 296, 297.
 Philæ, Island of, iii. 143.

- Philo of Byblos, vii. 173.
 Phipps, his caution as to relations with Moore, i. 60, 61.
 —, General, i. 181.
 —, Mr. T., iv. 177.
 —, Mrs., ii. 166. et passim.
 Phocas, iii. 49.
 "Phntius," v. 204.
 Phrenology, conversation on, v. 67.
 Physicians, pedantic phrases of, iii. 244.
 "Physiognomist," the, ii. 218.
 "Phytologia," v. 102.
 Plazetta, the, iii. 24.
 Piazza, the, ii. 302. et passim.
 — d'Armi, the, iii. 21.
 — Navona, iii. 73.
 Picheraut, Madlle., iii. 364.
 "Pickering's American Vocabulary," ii. 252.
 Pickersgill, vi. 112.
 Pickford, ii. 64.
 — "Pickwick Papers," vii. 174.
 Pico, peak of, vii. 85.
 "Picture Gallery of the Colonna Palace," by Paul Panini, iv. 72.
 — of the "Société des Amis des Arts," iii. 360.
 Pictures, instance of their precarious value, vi. 88; their sameness and want of interest, iii. 25.
 — at Bologna, iii. 30, 32; at Florence, 41; at the Chapel Royal, Paris, 203; at the "Giovanni and Pisani Palaces," 27; at the Hotel de Ville, Rouen, iv. 9; at the Palazzo Pitti, iii. 41.
 — collected with a view to an institution, iv. 125.
 — in the Bologna Gallery, iii. 81; in the Palazzo Corsini, 61; in the Parma Gallery, 82.
 Picturesqueness of the Thames, Lambeth, and the House of Commons, at night, vi. 32.
 Picturesque scene at a vintage, iii. 18.
 Picus Miradula, iii. 33.
 Pierrepoint, H., v. 76.
 "Piers Plowman," ii. 321.
 Pietà, the, iii. 28, 53.
 Pietro in Montorio, iii. 52.
 Pignatelli, Prince, iii. 319.
 "Pig organ," alluded to, vii. 168.
 Pigot, Mrs., v. 249.
 Pigott, Lady, iii. 314.
 —, Sir Arthur, "A Petition," vi. 120. and note; appropriation of a joke of, by Sheridan, ii. 225.
 Pigou, ii. 341; vii. 6.
 —, Mrs., viii. 124.
 Pike, the, to be used in popular warfare, described, vi. 145.
 "Pilot, the," viii. 18.
 Pindar, Peter (Dr. Walcot), remark of, on booksellers and authors, viii. 76; speech in defence of, by Erskine, v. 150.
 Pindemonte, iii. 26.
 Pineand, Mrs., iii. 343.
 Pinelli, vi. 18, 20.
 Pinkerton, "Travels," iii. 150.
 Pink snow at Spitzbergen, iii. 17.
 Pinney, Miss, iv. 274; v. 279, 292.
 —, Mrs., v. 299.
 Piombo, Sebastian del, "The Visitation of St. Elizabeth," iii. 67.
 Piozzi, Mrs., anecdote of, ii. 300; iv. 329; "Ode to Posterity," 38; "Retrospections," 38.
 Pipons. Mr., v. 45.
 Piquers, the, attributed to the study of Byron's works, iii. 101.
 Piræus, the, iv. 192. note.
 Piron, iv. 228; v. 139.
 Pisa, iv. 29; v. 189, 225.
 Pisani Palace, the, iii. 27.
 "Pistol Congress" at Calais, ii. 81.
 Pistrucchi, "Don Quixote and the Windmills," iv. 71; improvisazione on "Hiero and Leander," 71.
 Pitt, Right Hon. William, and Fox, their generous feeling towards each other, vi. 35; his dislike of, and frequent attacks on Erskine, iv. 25. and note; his speeches alluded to, 76, 230; his opinion of Sheridan, ii. 226; iv. 212; took his nurse with him when he went to the University of Cambridge, v. 47; two bon-mots of, ii. 227; prophecy of the Spanish war, a short time before his death, vii. 242; reports of his death, i. 187; epitaph on, v. 139.
 "Pitt Club," the, v. 285.
 Pitti Palace, the, iii. 43, 78, 80.
 "Pizarro," alluded to, i. 90; the music of, uninteresting, 93.
 Place de Grève, iii. 333.
 — Louis Quinze, iii. 122, 140, 360.
 — Royale, iii. 176.
 — Vendôme, iii. 203.
 "Plaideurs," the, iii. 148.
 "Plain Dealer," the, ii. 267.
 Planché, vii. 107.
 Planta, Right Hon. Joseph, v. 172; v. 177.
 Plato, "Timæus," vii. 7.
 Play-bill containing Master Moore's name, i. 11.
 Playfair, Professor, "Heaps" of Lectures, ii. 155.
 "Pleasures of Hope," iv. 335.
 Pleyel, ii. 343.
 Pliniana, iii. 19.
 Pliny, iii. 19, 101.
 "Plumasster, The," viii. 121.
 Plunket, Hon. Captain, i. 86.
 —, Lord, his amiableness, v. 169; his eloquent speech, 302; jokes by, 169; pun by, iv. 245; story of Keller and M'N—, vii. 75; the part he took on Emmett's trial, vi. 172.
 —, Young, v. 217.
 Plutarch, "De Iside," v. 94; "Life of Alcibiades," ii. 287; "Life of Coriolanus," 288.
 "Plymley, Peter," vi. xlv.
 Plymouth, i. 176.
 "Pocket Magazine," ii. 259.
 Pococke, passed through Tempe without knowing it, i. 35. note.
 Poem, a, the highest sum ever paid for, ii. 111. note.
 — on Moore's arrival in Paris, inserted in Galignani, iii. 11.
 Poerio, Counts, vi. 286. and note.
 Poetical Midshipman, a, iii. 348.
 "Poeti Viventi," by Deina, iii. 66.
 Poetry, discussion on, by Lord Holland, Lord Lansdowne, and Moore, ii. 344.
 —, Head of, by Carlo Dolce, iii. 44.
 —, the study of, iii. 162.
 Poets' Corner, iii. 233.
 Poets, conversation on, iii. 344.
 — of Italy, Spain, and Portugal, ii. 42; their attempts, and success, i. xxiv.
 Poix, Prince de, iii. 337.
 Pol a Phuca, vii. 120.
 Polr, Wellesley, viii. 132.

- "Polichinelle est par tout bien reçu," iii. 194.
 Polidori, v. 137. 178.
 Polignac, Prince, iv. 168; v. 290.
 ———, Princess, iv. 305.
 Poligny, iii. 12.
 Polish Fancy Ball, the, vii. 348.
 Politian, iii. 43.
 Political conversation on a coach, vi. 157.
 ——— conversations, v. 231, 232.
 ——— Economists, their objects, vi. 45.
 "——— Economy," iv. 302.
 "——— songs, collection of, to Irish Airs," i. 340.
 Political squibs, excellence of Moore's, i. xxix.
 ——— subjects, but one right way of thinking on, i. 306.
 Politics, the only thing minded in England, i. 225.
 "Polyhistor," ii. 148.
 Polymnia Caledonia, the name under which the Duchess of Hamilton was made a member of a Roman society, iii. 274.
 Pompeii, ii. 207.
 Pompey, statue of, iii. 5.
 Ponsonby, George, ii. 302. et passim.
 ———, John, vii. 46.
 ———, Lady C., i. 183.
 ———, Lord, vi. 61.
 ———, Mrs., v. 29.
 ———, William, iv. 86. et passim.
 Pontécantino, iii. 46.
 Pont Louis Seize, iii. 153.
 Poole, his "Hamlet Travestie," iii. 151. 245; on national delights, 245.
 "Poor broken heart," iv. 171, 199.
 Pope, Alexander, i. xxviii. et passim; bust of, by Roubiliac, vii. 25.
 ———, Thomas, i. xxiii.
 "——, The," by Sir Thomas Lawrence, iii. 57; his private chapel, 58.
 Popham, Captain, iii. 312.
 ———, Lady, iii. 312.
 "Popish and Protestant Intolerance," a pamphlet by Bowles, vii. 158.
 Poplars, Isle of, iii. 135, 136.
 Porchester, Lord, v. 174.
 Porson, anecdotes of, v. 203, 204; "Hecuba," 190; "Photius," 204.
 Porta del Popolo, iii. 46.
 Portalis, iii. 203. et passim.
 ———, Madame, iii. 324. et passim.
 Porta Pia, the, iii. 66.
 ———, Santa, the, iii. 50.
 Porte St. Martin, iii. 92. et passim.
 Porter, Sir R. Ker, iv. 285.
 ———, Walsh, viii. 58.
 "Portfolio," the, ii. 178.
 Portland, Duke of, anecdote of, and the Westminster Election, v. 119.
 Portman, Mr. (Lord), v. 69.
 "Portrait Charmant," anecdote of the song of, v. 163.
 ——— of Henry, Marquess of Lansdowne, after Sir T. Lawrence, vii.; of James Corry, vi.; of Lord John Russell, v.; of Moira, ii.; of Moore, i.; of Moore, after MacIse, viii.; of Samuel Rogers, iv.; of Sir John Stevenson, Mus. Doc., iii.
 Portsmouth, i. 134, 135.
 ———, Lord, vi. 47.
 Portugal, ii. 197. note; iv. 54; vi. 83.
 ———, Queen of, vi. 40.
 "Post, The Evening," iv. 125; v. 34.
 ———, The Morning," iv. 205. 315.
- "Post Bag, The," rapid sale of, i. 342, 343. 352; referred to by Lord Byron, xvi.
 Postscript, by Lord John Russell, viii. 287.
 Post Office, havoc of the English Commissioners in the Irish, iv. 127.
 Potato-digging, iii. 356.
 ——— Quay, the, ii. 209.
 Potier, iii. 118. et passim.
 Potlers, v. 204.
 Potomac, the, i. 161.
 Potter, his Translation of "Prometheus and Æschylus," v. 193.
 Poucet, iii. 158.
 Poudrette, the, iii. 355.
 Pouilly, iii. 86.
 Poultenay, Lady, iv. 193.
 Poussin, Gaspar, "A Landscape," iii. 67.
 ———, Nicolo, "Cupid," iii. 51; "Landscapes," 61; "The Deluge," 127; "The Hours dancing to the sound of a Harp played by Old Time," 69.
 Powell, iv. 158. et passim.
 Power, James, his relations with Moore, i. 285. 325. 367; ii. 256; vi. 271; vii. 5; iv. 151; i. 367; vi. 320; ii. 91; i. 356; iv. 162; vii. 164; i. 349; vi. 320; supposed the Duchesse de Broglie an opera dancer, iii. 311; wished Moore to secure the copyright of the "National Melodies" in France, 327; letter from, to Moore, iii. 138; letters to, from Moore, i. 243. 277. 282. 284. 285. 297. 298. 304. 308. 314. 316. 317. 322. 323. 324. 330. 331. 334. 335. 336. 337. 339. 340. 343. 347. 348. 349. 350. 353. 354. 356. 364. 365. 376. 379; ii. 4. 9. 11. 33. 46. 51. 63. 64. 77. 85. 86. 90. 109. 110. 112. 114. 124. 128. 129. 135. 139; see also i. 264. 305; vi. 263; i. 307. 279; iii. 96; i. xiii. 277.
 ———, Jane, ii. 300. et passim.
 ———, Mrs., i. 285. 332; vii. 313.
 ———, Richard, i. 305. 309; ii. 302; iii. 307; iv. 16; death of, 263.
 Powers, the, going to law about the "Sacred Songs," ii. 105; paid Moore five hundred a year for his music, for seven years, i. 274; their kindness on the occasion of Anastasia's illness, v. 259.
 Powerscourt, Lord, and Mr. Roebuck, allusion to a duel between them, vii. 254.
 Powis, Lord, report of his being made Lord Lieutenant, i. 186.
 Pozzo di Borgo, Count, and Napoleon, iii. 250; v. 228; a warm admirer of "Captain Rock," 44.
 Practical jokes by Sheridan, ii. 196.
 Pradell, Mons., iii. 94.
 Pradier, "Son of Niobe," iii. 360.
 Pradt, Abbé de, ii. 247; iii. 325.
 Prato della Valle, iii. 23.
 Praxiteles, iii. 61.
 Prece, "Matutinæ ac Vespertinæ," vii. 346.
 Precedence in Society, vii. 140.
 "Preciosa," the, v. 59.
 Pre-established harmony of dinners, iv. 80.
 "Prefatory Notice," by Baron Smith, iv. 210.
 Prendergast, iv. 175; vi. 83.
 Prepared conversation, instance of, iv. 225.
 Prescott, v. 218.
 Presentation Convent, the, vii. 117.
 "Pretty maid, pretty maid," iv. 282.
 Prettyman, ii. 295.

"Prettymania," the, ii. 295.
 Prevost, Abbé, anecdote of, v. 206; "Manon d'Escant," 206.
 —, Mrs., v. 315.
 Price, "Essay on the Picturesque," v. 96.
 —, Uvedale, ii. 149. et passim.
 Pride, Colonel, vi. 314.
 Prideaux, "Life of Mahomet," iv. 41.
 Priestley, "Early Opinions," v. 103;
 "Lectures on History," vii. 102.
 Primogeniture and entail, remarks on, vi. 63.
 Primrose Hill, reported to be selected as a spot for a villa for the Prince of Wales, i. 263.
 "Prince's Song, The," dated to prevent an equivocal, ii. 65.
 Prior, Matthew, "Dear Chloe, how blubbered," ii. 218; defended by Dr. Johnson, i. xxvi; "Life of Burke," iv. 218; "Poems," ii. 219. note.
 — Park, Moore's visit to, vii. 49.
 "Private Theatricals," Moore's article on, praised by Chief Justice Bushe, v. 239.
 Prize-fighting, ii. 233.
 Pro-caccini, iii. 92.
 Proclamation, forbidding people to talk of, or describe, Queen Elizabeth's person or features, vi. 33.
 Proctor, ii. 337.
 "Prodigal Son," the, iii. 232; by Muriilo, 234.
 "Profane and Divine Love," by Titian, iii. 65.
 "Progress of Reform," vii. 127.
 "Prometheus" of Æschylus, ii. 290.
 Propertius, "Cynthia," vii. 219.
 Property of the songs in Moore's poem, alluded to, i. 355.
 "Prophecy, The," v. 146.
 Proposal to elect Moore Librarian of the Dublin Society, ii. 3.
 "Proserpina," iv. 281.
 Protestants and Catholics, difference on the subject of tradition, v. 267.
 Providence, in the Bahamas, i. 155.
 Prowse, Mrs., v. 39. et passim.
 —, Rev. Mr., his death and funeral, vi. 179.
 Prudentia, iii. 320.
 Prudher, Madame, iv. 4.
 Prussia, King of, ii. 19. et passim.
 —, Prince of, always slept with a copy of "Lalla Rookh" under his pillow, iii. 361.
 —, Princess of, iii. 217.
 "Prussian State Gazette, The," vii. 323.
 Prynne, ii. 157; iv. 159.
 Psalms, a New Version of the, must necessarily be bad, i. 284.
 Psyche. See Moore, Mrs. Elizabeth.
 —, "iii. 305; by Westmacott, 349.
 —, or the Legend of Love," vii. 355.
 Public dinner, to Moore, at Derby, described, v. 256.
 "Wash," the, at Bell Town Springs, i. 163.
 Publishers, vi. 12.
 "Pucelle," the, iv. 6.
 "Puck," by Sir Joshua Reynolds, iii. 82.
 Puget, iv. 11; vii. 121.
 "Pugilate of the Ancients," Baretti's Essay upon the, ii. 255.
 "Pugilists," by Canova, iii. 48.
 Pulling, Rev. Mr., sonnet to Moore, vii. 272.
 Pulteney, Mr., ii. 315; viii. 288.

Pun of Lord Wellesley's, addressed to Gally Knight, v. 222; upon Moore, 264.
 Puns by Lord Alvanley, vi. 321; by Lord Erskine, on the Devil, v. 150; by Theodore Hook, vii. 144; by Jekyll, v. 269; on Peat, 155; on the Russians eating tallow candles, vi. 257; by Henry Luttrell, v. 113; vi. 182. 286; on Sharpe, v. 128; on the two parties, vi. 190; by Moore, iv. 8; by Plunkett, 245; by Sydney Smith, vi. 196; by the Duke of Sussex, on the Archbishop of Tuam, v. 302.
 Purcell, Henry, beauty of the words to some of his compositions, iv. 148; "Lord, Thou knowest," ii. 179; "Waters of Babylon," 158, 159.
 "Pursuits of Literature," ii. 205.
 Purvis, Mrs., ii. 357. et passim.
 Pusey, iv. 254. et passim.
 Puteaux, iii. 234.
 P. zzi, M., iii. 305.
 "Pyramid, Lambert," iv. 242.

Q.

Quantity and Quality difficult to attain together, i. 242.
 Quarantotti, iii. 59.
 "Quarterly Review, The," full of anecdotes of the Battle of Waterloo, ii. 98; its circulation, viii. 80; design and plan, communicated to Moore by Rogers, 70; the article against Moore's "Sheridan," v. 54.
 Quatremère, "Fables Egyptiennes," iii. 129. 131; "Memoire," 129.
 Quebec, its appearance, i. 173.
 "Queen's Trial," the, iv. 74.
 Queensberry, Duke of, anecdote of, vii. 258; his will, i. 250.
 Quigley, vii. 204.
 Quin, Dr., vi. 318.

R.

Rabelais, ii. 251.
 Racine, ii. 219. et passim.
 Radcliffe, Mrs., her "Romances," i. 24.
 Radicofani, iii. 45, 46.
 Radnor, Lord, vii. 168.
 Radstock, Lord, v. 66.
 Radzivil, Prince, iii. 217.
 Rae, Lady, vi. 227.
 —, Sir William, vi. 227.
 Raffaele, "The Fornarina," iii. 82. See also Raphael.
 Raffel, "Account of the Revolution," iv. 36.
 Raffles, Sir Stamford, dismissed his body-guard at Bencoolen, ii. 207.
 Raglan, Lord, vii. 307.
 Raguse, Duchess de, iii. 111.
 Raimbault, Madame, iii. 228.
 Rain, i. 346. 363.
 —, Mrs., i. 363.
 Raincy, iii. 355.
 Raine, v. 203.
 "Raising the Wind," viii. 19. note.
 Raleigh, Sir Walter, ii. 330; iv. 104; his trial, ii. 330.
 "Rameses," v. 49.
 Rammohun Roy, vi. 196.
 Ramsay, General, iii. 45. et passim.

- Ramsbury Manor, ii. 152.
 Ramsgate, i. 180. et passim.
 Ramy, "Innocence weeping the Death of a Snake," iii. 360.
 Ranccliffe, Lady, iii. 91. et passim.
 ———, Lord, sent by Lord Moira to offer Moore a small appointment, i. 191.
 Randall, ii. 233, 234.
 ———, Miss, iii. 232, 235.
 Randolph, the American orator, described, iii. 348.
 Ranuzzi, the Palazzo, iii. 31.
 Ranz des Vaches, ii. 206; iii. 15, 17; iv. 138.
 "Rape of the Sabines," by John of Bologna, iii. 36.
 Raphael, a fresco by his scholars, iii. 52; "Cupid and Psyche," 52; "Galatea," 52; his repetitions of attitudes and actions, 55; image of "The Eternal Father," 55; "Julius II.," 61; "Loggi," 55; "Madonna and Child," 84; "Madonna di Foligno," 55; "Michael and Satan," 89; "Paul preaching at Athens," iv. 72; "St. Cecilia," iii. 30, 81; "Study for the School of Athens," 20; "The Crowning of the Virgin," 55; "The Dresden Madonna," v. 107; "The Holy Trinity," iii. 42; "The Transfiguration," 48, 55; v. 107.
 Raphael's Villa, iii. 64.
 Ranccliffe, Captain, iv. 70. et passim.
 ———, Lord, vi. 149; orations, ii. 241.
 Rathfarnham, i. 71.
 "Ratto di Proserpina," by Albano, iii. 83.
 Ravenna, iii. 24. et passim.
 Ravensworth, Lady, vi. 53.
 Ravoglia, v. 178.
 Rawdon, Lady Charlotte, i. 113. et passim.
 ———, Elizabeth, i. 118.
 ———, Mrs., iii. 9. et passim.
 ———, Miss, viii. 119.
 Rawlius, iii. 103, 286, 289.
 Rawson, Lady, vii. 169.
 Raymond, v. 183.
 Raynier, Archduke, iii. 20.
 Read, "Four through Ireland," iv. 98.
 Reading, ii. 219. et passim.
 ——— School, Latin address to the governors, iv. 243.
 Ready, Mrs., i. 343, 344.
 Reaumur, iii. 218.
 Reay, Lord, vi. 109.
 "Rebecca," by Graham, iv. 161.
 Rebellion, the Irish, enlisted Moore's political sympathies, i. xviii.
 "Recollections," vi. 25.
 ——— in the Peninsula," iv. 262; v. 279.
 "Record Commission," vii. 245.
 ——— Office, the, vii. 11.
 Reddish's, ii. 303.
 "Red Hugh, Life of," vii. 237, 238.
 Redmonds, Mr., vii. 111.
 Rees, Owen, letters to Moore, vii. 16; v. 10; his message to Moore, respecting the last Bermuda claim, iv. 6; his negotiations with Cramer and Co. for Moore's songs, vii. 86; his proposal respecting the profits of the "Life of Sheridan," iv. 170; his death alluded to, vii. 200.
 ———, Dr., vi. 105.
 "Rees's Cyclopædia," ii. 281.
 "Reflector, The," viii. 120.
 Reform, a plan of, received by Lord Holland, ii. 263.
 "Reformation, History of the," v. 29.
 Reform Bill, the, conversation on, between Moore and Lord John Russell, vi. 289; Moore's opinion of, 221; vii. 79; Lord John Russell's speech on, alluded to, vi. 210.
 Regan, vi. 129.
 Regency, the, in 1789, the popular side taken by the Tories, vii. 139.
 Regent, the dissolute court of the Prince, iv. 218.
 Regnard, iii. 188, 267.
 Regnier, his "Memoires sur l'Egypte," iii. 131, 138.
 "Regulus," iv. 14.
 "Rehearsal, The," iv. 248.
 Reid, iii. 75.
 "Reign of Edward II.," vii. 208.
 Reinagle, ii. 159.
 "Rejected Addresses," produced the Smiths 1000*l.*, vi. 195.
 "Religion," iii. 48.
 Rembrandt, "Head of Christ," iii. 69.
 Remston, viii. 59.
 Renaudin, Madame, iii. 64; iv. 71, 72.
 "Rendezvous, Bourgeois," iii. 176, 294.
 Rendlesham, Lady, iii. 80.
 ———, Lord, iii. 80.
 Rennie, Mr., vi. 177.
 ———, Miss, iv. 294.
 Repartees of a discontented man at the Theatre Français, iii. 13; Cooper, v. 289; Lord Dudley, vi. 59; Charles Lamb, iv. 221; vi. 85; Sir Robert Peel, iv. 311; Bobus Smith, vii. 342; Tierney, v. 63; an Irish nurse, vi. 325, on Language, iv. 38.
 Repeal of the Union, Moore's opinion of, vi. 302.
 "Reply to the Judges," ii. 221.
 Reports in newspapers, ii. 301.
 "Representative, The," v. 102.
 "Rerum Heb. Script.," vii. 369.
 "Retrospective Review," article on the Mass, and mention of Moore in the, iv. 304.
 "Return Home to Sirmio," viii. 121.
 Reuss, Prince de, vi. 103.
 ———, Sir Joshua, Commentary on Fresnoy's "Art of Painting," iii. 97; "Death of Dido," v. 104; "Discourses," iii. 103; "Lectures on Painting," 162; "Mrs. Reynolds," v. 149; "Mrs. Siddons as Tragic Muse," iv. 79; "Out of Place," iii. 243; Picture of "Garrick between Tragedy and Comedy," iv. 319; "Primate Robinson," 125; "Puck," iii. 82; "Werther," 133.
 "Rezzonico, Pope," monument of, by Canova, iii. 48.
 Rhode Island, ii. 276.
 Rhone, the, iv. 230, 263.
 "Rhymes on the Road," iii. 316.
 Rialto, the, iii. 26; vii. 186.
 Ricardo, "The Sinking Fund," iv. 95, 277. et passim.
 ———, Osman, v. 139.
 ———, Mrs. Osman, v. 139.
 ———, Miss Bertha, v. 42. et passim.
 Rice, Dominick, his idea of a Catholic Petition, v. 36.
 ———, Thomas Spring, (Lord Monteaigle), vi. 276.
 Rich, iii. 165. et passim.
 ———, Lady, i. 97.
 ——— and Rare," vii. 53.
 Richard, "Itinerary," vi. 347.

- Richard Cœur de Lion, iii. 8.
 ———, il., vii. 238.
 ———, III., vi. 69.
 Richardson, ii. 303. et passim.
 ———, "Sir Charles Grandison," originally in thirty volumes, iii. 162.
 ———, Dr., ii. 357.
 ———, Mrs., ii. 299.
 Richardson's Coffee-house, iii. 350. et passim.
 Riche, iii. 137. et passim.
 Richelieu, Cardinal, and Fenelon, anecdote of, vi. 80; appeared before Anne of Austria dressed as a Spanish dancer, v. 273; and Philippe de Champagne, iii. 234.
 ———, Duc de, iii. 119; iv. 91.
 Richmond, ii. 317. et passim.
 ———, the Duke of, and Lord John Russell, vii. 73.
 Rickets, Messrs., viii. 165.
 Ricketts, iii. 329, 330.
 Rickman, Clio, epigram by, iv. 50.
 Riddell, Mrs., i. 161.
 Ridgway, ii. 302.
 Ridley, "Tales of the Genii," iv. 130, 243.
 Rienzi, iii. 107.
 ———, "——," vii. 14.
 "Rimini," ii. 101, 266.
 Rinuccini, "Memoirs," vii. 370.
 Ripon, Lord, v. 61. note.
 "Riquet à la Houpe," iii. 209, 275.
 Ritchie, Mr., vi. 332.
 Ritson, i. 147; vii. 13.
 "Rival Opera Houses," viii. 29.
 ———, "—— Topics," vi. 6.
 "Rivals, the," ii. 232, 335.
 Rivarol, vi. 322. note.
 Rivas, Duchesse of, iii. 324.
 "Rivaux d'Eux Mêmes," iv. 9.
 Rivière Anglaise, iii. 355.
 Rivington, vi. 295.
 Rizzio, viii. 124.
 Roanne, iii. 86.
 "Robert Macaire," vii. 233.
 Roberts', iii. 207. et passim.
 Robertson, vi. 249.
 "Robin Gray," words of, ii. 180.
 "Robin Hood," vii. 75.
 Robinson, Mr., lii. 205. et passim.
 ———, Miss, iv. 186.
 ———, "Primate," by Sir Joshua Reynolds, iv. 125.
 ———, Sir G., iv. 58. et passim.
 ———, Crusoe, alluded to, i. vi.; pantomime of, written by Sheridan, iv. 222.
 "Rob Roy," ii. 281.
 Rob Roy, the, iii. 301.
 Rocca, viii. 218.
 Roch, St., iii. 312.
 Roche, Mrs., iii. 314.
 ———, Sir Boyle, anecdotes of, iv. 241; viii. 5.
 Rochefoucauld, vi. 310.
 Rocher, de Cancale, iii. 90. et passim.
 Rochester, Bishop of, iv. 209, 257.
 ———, Lord, ii. 308.
 Rochford, Colonel, v. 259.
 Rock, Dr., vi. 330; vii. 124.
 ———, Captain, the name said to be the initials of Roger O'Connor King, iv. 112.
 "—— Detected," iv. 224, 241, 254.
 Rockingham, Lord, epigram on, vi. 89.
 Rodbury, v. 105, 107.
 Roden, Lord, vi. 249.
 "Rodes' air," ii. 56.
 Roebeck, Baron, iii. 191.
 ———, Baroness, iii. 191, 193.
 Roebuck, J. A., and Lord Powerscourt, allusion to a duel between them, vii. 254; described, vii. 253.
 Rogers, Henry, iii. 282. et passim.
 ———, Miss, ii. 228. et passim.
 ———, Mrs., iv. 212.
 ———, Samuel, a friend to Moore in the affair of the duel between Moore and Jeffrey, i. 213; meeting of Moore and Jeffrey at his house, 212; negotiator between Moore and Jeffrey on the subject of an engagement of the former on "The Edinburgh Review," ii. 14; advanced Campbell 500*l.* to purchase a share in the new "Metropolitan Magazine," vi. 232; his advice to Moore on the subject of the Byron "Memoirs," iv. 187, 199; alluded to the hostile correspondence between Moore and Byron, viii. 98, and note; amended Lord Holland's translation from "Metastasio," vii. 281; visited Matlock, i. 301; his "Common-place Book," iv. 215; his description of Venice, viii. 186; epigram, quoted by, vi. 114; furnished the subject for "Lalla Rookh," i. xxiv; his causticity, vi. 39; his good and kind qualities, vii. 76; his scrape with Auguste de Staël, vi. 232; his "Human Life," iii. 219; his "Italy" forwarded to Moore, 299; his acts of kindness, vi. 232, and note; offered to lend Moore 1000 guineas to settle with Messrs. Longman, v. 118; on the game laws, iv. 314; his opinion of Chantrey, vi. 39; proposed trip to Paris, with Scott, v. 122; his opinion of the "Loves of the Angels," iv. 47; his opinion of Moore's "Life of Byron," 259; outline of his intended tour, viii. 181; his "Pleasures of Memory," first read by Moore, i. 23; print of, alluded to, vii. 318. note; read Moore his story of "Foscari," lii. 267; his remark that Raphael, Mozart and Byron, all died at the age of 37, vi. 254; his story of a practical joke, v. 121; his story of the young couple at Berlin, in their Opera Box, 286; his story from Le Grand's "Fables," vi. 286; his verses on Theophilus, iv. 225; his "Voyage of Columbus," viii. 101; account of his brother's domestic life, 95; visits Moore, 184; his letters to Moore, 27, 68, 79, 81, 88, 93, 94, 97, 101, 111, 114, 115, 123, 152, 176, 181, 184, 212, 218, 221, 224, 245; letters from, to Moore, alluded to, chiding him for not taking up his quarters at his house, vii. 172; letter to, from Francis Jeffrey, ii. 13; letters to, from Moore, viii. 168, 174, 179, 182, 193, 195, 198, 204, 228, 233, 238, 240, 252, 254, 257, 258, 267, 271, 273, 276, 278, 283, 285, 286. et passim.
 Rogerson, Mr., vi. 85.
 ———, Mrs., vi. 85.
 Roget, Dr., vii. 165.
 Rokeby, alluded to, i. 334.
 "——," songs in, i. 335.
 ———, Lord, viii. 214. note.
 Roland, iii. 307.
 Rolie, Baron de, anecdote of, vi. 347.
 ———, Lord, ii. 304.
 "Rolliad, the," what gave rise to it, ii. 298.
 "Romaika," vi. 175.
 Romana, iv. 255.
 Roman Catholic petitions, i. 261.
 "—— History," v. 286.

- Romano, Julio, "The Madonna and Child," iii. 42.
- Roman remains, coins, &c., discovered at Bath, ii. 207.
- Rome, Moore's residence at, iii. 47—75; view of, from the campanile of the Capitol, 49.
- "Romeo and Juliet," ii. 305. et passim.
- Romilly, Lady, viii. 222.
- , Sir Samuel, his death, ii. 210; his strong affection for his wife, 211.
- , William, vi. 166.
- Romulus Riggs, a strange name, ii. 193.
- Ronan's Island, iv. 118.
- Ronciglione, iii. 46, 47.
- Ronzi, iv. 79, 215.
- Ros, Lady de, iii. 311, 312, 316.
- Rosa, Salvator, "Landscapes," iii. 44; "The Conspiracy of Cataline," iii. 42, 80.
- "— quo locorum," v. 103.
- Rosaspina, iii. 82.
- Roscoe, iv. 242, 248, 322.
- Rose, George Pitt, iv. 110.
- , Stewart, iii. 328; "Italy," ii. 287; offered 2000*l.* by Murray for a translation of Ariosto, 290; whimsical joke by, 317.
- , W., "Ariosto," iv. 302; v. 102.
- Roseberry, Lady, vi. 121, 187.
- , Lord, vi. 121, 187.
- "Rose d'Amour," ii. 232.
- "— of the Desert," v. 235.
- Roses and carnations, maintained by Sydney Smith to be exotics in England, ii. 27.
- Rosetti, lines by, v. 103; remarks on Spencer's Translation of "The wreath you wove," vii. 291.
- Roslyn Castle, v. 9.
- , Lord, iv. 78; vi. 55.
- Rospigliosi, the, iii. 50.
- Rosa, Captain, particulars of the Arctic expedition, vii. 6.
- Rosset's, iii. 175, 261.
- Rossi, "Marriage of St. Catherine," iii. 32.
- , the, iii. 32.
- Rossie Priory, viii. 164.
- Rossini, Giacomo, "Barber of Seville," ii. 237. et passim; character of his music, iii. 315; described, iv. 165; "Figaro qua," 169; his manner of hinting chords, v. 316; "Il Turco in Italia," iii. 47, 120; "La Cappricciosa," 47; "La Gazza Ladra," 31; passed off an old opera for a new one, and was imprisoned for the trick, 334; "Ricciardo," iv. 74; "Semiramide," first performed, 218; "Torvaldo and Dorliska," iii. 171.
- Rothe, vii. 187. et passim.
- Rothés, Lady, iii. 106.
- Rothschild, Baroness, viii. 341. et passim.
- , Baron, iii. 205. et passim.
- , Lionel, vii. 368.
- Rothwell, vii. 43.
- Rotond^a, the, iii. 92. et passim.
- Rottenburgh, Baron de, ii. 299.
- , Baroness de, ii. 299.
- Rotunda, the, vii. 98, 101.
- Roubilliac, his bust of "Pope," vii. 25.
- Rouen, described by Moore, iv. 8.
- Rough, Serjeant, iv. 310.
- Roul, M., vii. 186.
- "Round Towers, the," vii. 31.
- Rousseau, Jean Jacques, iii. 12, 135. et passim.
- Rousseau, Chateau of, iii. 85.
- Rousselot, viii. 29.
- Routh, Dr., "Fathers of the Middle Ages," vi. 95.
- Rowan, Hamilton, iv. 125; v. 239.
- Royal Institution, wish of the Directors that Moore should lecture there, v. 239.
- Irish Academy, the, Swift's skull produced, vii. 105.
- Royalists, the, iii. 103.
- "Royal Recollections on a Tour to Cheltenham," ii. 189.
- Rubens, Sir Peter Paul, always made himself handsome though he was not so, ii. 283; "Dance of Infant Satyrs," iii. 84; "Landscape," iv. 79.
- Rubini, vii. 154, 198.
- Rucchesi's, iii. 11.
- Rumbold, Lady, i. 297.
- Rumford, Comtesse, iii. 147.
- Rupert, vii. 346, 347.
- Rushton, the "Robin" of "Childe Harold," v. 247.
- Rushworth, iv. 159.
- Russel, Miss, ii. 162.
- Russell, Dr., vi. 28. et passim.
- Russell, Lord John, note by, concerning Moore's baptismal register, i. 76; his "Life of Lord Russell," ii. 222; iv. 23; his imitation of Talma, iii. 4; of Dugald Stewart, 12; his Reform speech, 91, 346; letter from, to Moore, alluded to, 91; on the epigram, by Lord Cowley, 108; on the character of Joseph Surface, 127. note; upon Wordsworth's assertion that Byron plagiarised from him, 161. note; his view of political proceedings consequent upon the Queen's business, 172; dedicated the second edition of his "Essays" to Moore, 172, 173; his offer for liquidating Dumoulin's debts, 181; parody on "It has gone with its thorns and its roses," 181; "On the English Government and Constitution," 242; his intended plan of Reform communicated to Moore, 272; announced his departure for England, and offered to take Moore with him, 276; his "Don Carlos," reserved by Moore to read at Sloperston, iv. 22; verses on the French armament against Spain, alluded to, 44; on the "Life of Sheridan," 73; v. 61; writing his "Political History of Europe," iv. 74; his reasons for omitting Moore's account of the destruction of the "Memoirs," 191. et sup. note; his opinion of Byron's "Memoirs," 192. note; on Moore's proceeding in connection with the Byron "Memoirs," 203; his advice to Moore not to write a Life of Byron, v. 51; corrects an inaccuracy of Moore's, 157. note; proposed to Moore, to join him in a trip to Ireland, 307; on conversation, vi. x; on the learning of Sir James Mackintosh, xi; his description of Lord Holland's tastes and talents, xv; urged Moore to undertake a Life of Grattan, 17; his conversation, with Moore, about his coming into Parliament, 202; and Lord William Russell, characteristic meeting between them, 207; on the "Life of Lord Edward Fitzgerald," 208; his difference from Moore's judgment on the Whig party, 216. note; on a letter of his to Lord Francis Gower, on the Reform Bill, 261; on Mr. Croker, 268. note; enclosing some verses of his, 312; extract from his letter, in answer to Moore's, re-

- garding his speech, vii. 33; the King's suggestions to him, as to the manner and matter of his explanation in the House with regard to Lord Stanley, 56; and the Duke of Richmond, 73; letter to, from Lord Melbourne, respecting the pension for Moore, 81; to Moore, enclosing a letter from Lord Melbourne to Lord John Russell, 89; offered Moore the vacant place in the State Paper Office, 95; congratulated on his marriage, by Peel and O'Connell, 129; success of his speech on the Orange-men, 148; his definition of a proverb, 204; his last interview with Moore, i. xxx.
- Russell, Lord and Lady John, vii. 170.
 —, Mr. Watts, v. 214. note, 215.
 —, Mrs. Watts, v. 215.
 —, Lord William, "Life of," by Lord John Russell, v. 114. et passim.
 —, Lady William, iv. 85. et passim.
 —, Lord Wriothoesley, v. 286.
 —, Miss, iii. 283. et passim.
- Russia, Emperor of, ii. 21; viii. 191.
 —, Alexander of, ii. 19.
 —, Empress of, iii. 14; vi. 5.
 —, the Grand Duchess of, and "Lalla Rookh," iii. 262.
- Russian bands of music, vii. 168.
- Rustifustius, Trismegistus, i. 52, 53.
- Rutherford, Mr., v. 11. 14.
 —, Mrs., v. 11. 14.
- Ruthven, Lady, v. 177. et passim.
 —, Lord, v. 177. et passim.
- Rutland, Duchess of, iv. 88; viii. 60.
 —, Duchess, Dowager of, ii. 147.
 —, Duke of, v. 223.
- Rutter, gave Moore a copy of his splendid work on "Fonthill Abbey," v. 93.
- Ruyssdael, iii. 236.
- Ryan, vi. 131. 149.
 —, Fanny, played "Norah," in "The Poor Soldier," i. 13.
 —, Mrs. George, vi. 134.
- Ryder, ii. 296.
- Rymer, vii. 209.

S.

- "Sabæan Researches," v. 113.
- Sabatscoff, Prince, iii. 218.
 —, Princess, iii. 218.
- "Sabines and Leonidas," by David, iii. 127.
- Sacchini, iii. 73.
- "Sacred and Profane Love," by Titian, iii. 61.
- "— Melodies," arrangements respecting them, ii. 64.
 — music performed by girls playing violins, violoncellos, horns, &c., iii. 28.
- "— Songs," a series of, suggested by Moore, i. 284.
- Sacro Monte, iii. 18.
- Sadler, vi. 41.
- "Sage Chiankiti," v. 74.
- Saint Foix, iii. 333.
 — Lazare prison, visited by Lord John Russell, Moore, and Mr. McKay, iii. 182.
 — Lazare looking up at a burning heart," iii. 232.
- Saints, The," by Guido, iii. 81.
- Sala del Bigliardo, the, iii. 61.
 — del Gladiatore, the, iii. 59.
 — delle Muse, the, iii. 55.
- Salisbury, Bishop of, v. 105. et passim.
 — Cathedral, vi. 337.
- Salisbury Downs, v. 90. 96.
 — "Journal," the, ii. 313.
 — music meeting, the, iv. 231.
- Sallust, vii. 257.
- Salmon, William, ii. 215. et passim.
 —, Mrs., ii. 330. et passim.
- Salone di Ballo, iii. 17.
- Saltpêtrière, the, iii. 182.
- Salt Hill, ii. 164. et passim.
- Saltoun, Lady, iii. 199. et passim.
- Saltram, iv. 173; v. 131. 205.
- "Salvator Rosa, Life of," by Lady Morgan, iv. 101.
- Salvo, Marquis de, v. 152.
- "Samson," by Guido, iii. 81.
- Sau Antonio, Countess of, iv. 61. 164.
 — Carlos, Duke of, iii. 138. 149.
 — Carlos, Duchess of, iii. 138.
- Saundbach, i. 325; viii. 142.
- Saundes, Dr., vii. 56.
- Sandford, iii. 293. et passim.
- Sandhill, vii. 350.
- Sandon, Lady, vi. 10. et passim.
 —, Lord, iii. 191. et passim.
- Sandridge Lodge, iv. 93.
- Sandwich, Lady, iv. 172.
 —, Lord, iii. 19.
- Sandy Hook, i. 159.
 — Lane, ii. 217. 241; v. 200;
 Sandymount, i. 12; vii. 44.
- Sandys, v. 147.
- San Lorenzo, Duc de, iii. 324. et passim.
 —, Duchesse de, iii. 324; iv. 55.
 — Luca, iii. 33.
 — Pietro, in Vincoll, church of, iii. 56.
 — Sebastian," by Domenichino, iii. 57.
- Sanspareil, the, ii. 259.
- "Sans Tambour ni Trompette," iii. 321.
- Santa Croce, tombs in the church of, iii. 39.
 — Cruz, Marchioness of, iii. 324.
 —, Marquis of, iii. 253, 254.
 — Fê, Duchess of, iii. 138.
 — Fê, Duke of, iii. 138.
- Santa Maria Novella, iii. 36.
- Rosa, "Revolution of Piedmont," iv. 41.
 — Scala, the, iii. 50. 59.
- Santo Spirito, the, iii. 41.
- Saône, the, iv. 230. 263.
- Sapenay, Madame de, iii. 330.
- Sapio, iii. 178. et passim.
- Sapio's, the, iii. 184. et passim.
- Sappho, iv. 64.
- Saqui, Madame, ii. 336; iii. 110.
- Saratoga, i. 166.
- "Sardanapalus," vii. 22.
- Sargeant, one of the best speakers of the Historical Society, i. 51.
- Sarto, Andrea del, "Christ taken down from the Cross," iii. 42; "Holy Family," 82.
- Sartorius, Mr., iv. 16.
 —, Mrs., iv. 16.
- Sassenay, Madame, iii. 337.
- Sasso di Dante, the, iii. 38.
- Sassoferrato, "Virgin and Child," iii. 72.
- "Satan," ii. 70.
- Saunders, Dr. (Dean of Peterborough), his calculation of the Charter House nominations, vi. 331.
- "Saurer de Angelis," iv. 15.
- Saurin, ii. 157; iv. 123.
- Savage, iv. 105.
- Savary, iii. 144. 151.
- "Savourna Deelish," hazardous to write to, after Campbell, i. 309.
- Sawyer, Sir Robert, iv. 153.
- Saxe, Marshal, iii. 259.

Saxe-Coburg, Leopold, Prince of, vi. 214.
 Saxton, Sir C., iv. 116.
 Say, iii. 363; iv. 310.
 Saye and Sele, Lord, vi. 109.
 Scagliar, i. 178.
 Scala, Alessandra, vii. 17.
 — Regia, the, iii. 53.
 Scaliger, ii. 332; vii. 173.
 Scarlett, Sir James (Lord Abinger), iv. 249. et passim.
 Scarron, iv. 326.
 Scenery between Lake Erie and Lake Ontario, i. 171; of Bermuda, 157.
 Shadow, "Achilles defending the Dead Body of the Queen of the Amazons," iii. 66.
 Schiller, his "Bride of Messina," vii. 224.
 Schlegel, his "Dramatic Essays," viii. 212; full of literary coxcombs, iii. 235.
 Scholz, "Greek Testament," vii. 370.
 Schomberg, Mr., vii. 333; viii. 12.
 —, Mrs., vii. 338; viii. 12.
 —, Annie, vii. 333.
 Schonbart, Mr., iv. 268.
 "School for Scandal," ii. 160. et passim.
 — of Athens," iii. 55.
 — of Reform," ii. 176.
 Schubert, ii. 65.
 Schultz, iv. 4.
 Schnykill river, i. 167.
 Schwartzberg, Prince, v. 290.
 Sclarra Palace, the, iii. 68.
 Scipio, iv. 271; bust of, iii. 66.
 Scipios, tomb of the, iii. 54.
 Scione, viii. 162.
 Scotch boroughs, explanation of, iv. 268.
 — Novels, The," Miss Scott's reasons for, and against, Sir Walter being their author, ii. 199.
 Scotland, ii. 119. et passim; Moore's visit to, iv. 330. et seq.; v. i. et seq.
 — History of," vi. 16. et passim.
 "Scott's Magazine, The," ii. 192.
 "Scotsman, The," ii. 332; iv. 66; v. 12.
 Scott, Mr. Alexander, v. 219.
 —, Captain, extract from his "Naval Recollections," respecting Moore, vii. 85.
 —, Lord Charles, v. 46.
 —, Dean, iv. 111.
 —, Henry, iii. 241.
 —, Lady, death of, v. 69.
 —, Major, "Letter to Francis," ii. 190;
 "Review of the Transactions in Bengal," 189.
 —, Miss Anne, iv. 330. et passim.
 —, Mrs., iv. 104. et passim.
 —, Sir Walter, interest in his life arising from profuse details, i. vi; Lockhart's "Life of," i. vii; iv. 96. note; points of resemblance and agreement between him and Moore, xvi; his unapproachable imagination, xxvii; his works contrasted with those of Moore, xxvii;
 "Rokeby," alluded to, 334; viii. 141;
 his "Lord of the Isles," ii. 68; "The Abbot," iii. 149. 151; "Tales of my Landlord," 151; his "Ivanhoe," 242; his "Kenilworth," 242; bust remarkable from the height of his head, 292; his life and studies, 328; his indifference to pictures, iv. 43; instance of his industry, 49; his apparent idleness, 71; his "Lay of the Last Minstrel," 330; visited by Moore, 330. et seq.; his opinion of Moore's sacrifice of the Byron "Memoirs," 332; acknowledged himself, to Moore, as the author of the "Waverley Novels," 333; vi. ix; first set to try poetry by Mat. Lewis, 333; his epitaph on a dog, 334; drawings of the traditions of his ancestors, alluded to, 336; anecdotes told by him, of the Duke of Wellington, 337; showed Moore Kelso Abbey, 339; "Life of Napoleon Buonaparte," 341. et passim; anecdote of his grandfather, 341; his ignorance of music, 342; a great admirer of Bruce the traveller, 343; his story of, the Duke of Hamilton, v. 4; character of, among the people, 6; pleased with Moore's reception at the theatre, 14; and Constable, joint present of Scott's works to Moore, 47; his "Marmion," 120; application from a Danish captain to, 282; wrote a song for the Pitt Club, 285; persuaded he had seen the ghost of Lord Byron, 286; at home and in London, vi. xiv. xix; his chief merits, xiv; his name not to be recognised in a Russian shape, 5; his "Tales of a Grandfather," 16; his denial of the authorship of the novels to the King, 30; "History of Scotland," 84. et passim; bust of, by Chantrey, 201; his "Demonology," 230; "The Lady of the Lake," viii. 89. note; "Travels to the Netherlands," 203; "Waterloo," alluded to, 203.

 —, William, anecdote of, vii. 200.
 Scriblerus, ii. 271.
 Scriven, Miss, "Address to a Swan's Quill," vii. 162.
 Scroope, iii. 49. et passim.
 —, Archbishop, iv. 329.
 —, Miss, iii. 75.
 Scrope, Poulett, v. 244. et passim.
 —, Mrs. Poulett, v. 244. 312.
 Scully, Anne, i. 220.
 —, John, i. 136; his letter to Moore, alluded to, vi. 277; married to Miss Catherine Moore, ii. 160. note; "Penal Laws," iv. 127; reprimanded by the Commander-in-Chief for keeping faith with the rebels, ii. 165.
 —, Mrs. See Moore, Catherine.
 Sculpture, at Rome, iii. 54, 55.
 Seaford, Lord, vi. 86, 200.
 Seaforth, Lord, vi. 119; vii. 175.
 "Sebastian, St.," by Domenichino, iii. 71.
 Sebastiani, General, iii. 118; viii. 209.
 Secheron, the, iii. 13; v. 173.
 Second Marriages, iii. 361.
 Sedgwick, Professor, vi. 119.
 Seenando, Chief of the Oneida Indians, his manners, i. 169.
 "Se tiato avete in corpo," iv. 271.
 Sefton, Lady, iii. 267; vi. 61.
 —, Lord, iii. 267. et passim.
 Segur, v. 238.
 Selden, "I'thes," iv. 151.
 "Select Funeral Orations of Thucydides, Plato, Lysias, &c. &c.," vii. 256.
 "Selection from the English Poets," ii. 248.
 Selkirk, iv. 336; v. 4.
 Sellis, his suicide, alluded to, viii. 203.
 Selwyn, George, "Criticism on Burke's Reflections," v. 140; remark of, ii. 213.
 —, the Misses, vi. 238.
 "Semiramide," iv. 164. et passim.
 Seneca, iii. 81; vii. 49.
 Senior, iv. 237; vii. 63; viii. 20.
 "Se non credi," iv. 179.
 "Sentimental and Masonic Magazine, The," i. 16.

Serlo-Comic Drama of Invasion, in Three Acts, including the Vision and the Battle, ii. 151.
 Sermon corrected for press, sentence in, ii. 155.
 —, strange texts for, vi. 328.
 Servetus, not mentioned in Bayle's Dictionary, vii. 52.
 Servillus, M., tomb of, iii. 62.
 Sesto, iii. 18.
 "Sethos," iii. 130, et passim.
 "Seven Fountains, The," viii. 42.
 Severus, Arch of, iii. 49.
 Sèvres, iii. 125, et passim.
 Seward, Miss, "Memoirs of Darwin," ii. 181.
 Sewell, Mrs., v. 29.
 Seymour, ii. 148, 149.
 —, Lady, vii. 146.
 —, Lord, iv. 256, et passim.
 —, Lord Robert, ii. 301, 315.
 —, Miss, iii. 106, 107.
 —, Mrs., ii. 194, et passim.
 Shackerley, Madame, iii. 207.
 Shaftesbury, v. 92, 93.
 —, Lady, ii. 72, et passim.
 —, Lord, vi. 181, et passim.
 Shakspeare, William, "As you like It," iv. 262; French proof of his attention to particulars, iii. 223; "Henry V.," v. 269; "Henry VIII.," viii. 149; Lord Byron's opinion of, iii. 34; "Much Ado about Nothing," vii. 305; portrait of him on a bellows which had fallen into Talma's possession, and considered, by him, authentic, iii. 319; "Sonnets," ii. 178; vii. 147.
 "Shall I ask the brave soldier who fights by my side," viii. 31.
 "Shanavests," the, giving up the arms they had taken from the tithe proctor's to Scully, ii. 165.
 Shannon, the, view of it, very striking, iv. 120.
 —, Mount, iv. 122.
 Sharp, vi. 34, et passim.
 Sharpe, Granville, pun on, by Luttrell, v. 128.
 —, W., iv. 336.
 Shaw, John, epitaph on, i. 222.
 Shawe, Colonel, v. 29, et passim.
 Sheddons, Mr., his conduct in the Bermuda business, iii. 291.
 Sheddons, the, anxious about Moore's Bermuda business, iii. 148.
 Shee, Sir George, invited Moore to meet Lord Clare, i. 71.
 —, Sir Martin Archer, his success and firm principles, ii. 162; got five hundred guineas for the copyright of his rejected play, iv. 161.
 Sheepshanks, Mr., iv. 329.
 "She has beauty," i. 298.
 Sherburne, Lord, ii. 292, et passim.
 Sheldrake, v. 191, 211.
 Shelley, Percy Bysshe, a quatrain on, quoted by Wordsworth, v. 292; explanation of his opinions to be shown to Moore, iii. 353; undertook to answer the "Easy Way with Deists," vi. 69.
 —, Mrs., and her children living with Lord Byron, iv. 20; her admiration of Tom, vi. 86; testimony to Shelley's appreciation of Moore, vii. 252; her thorough knowledge of Byron, v. 178.
 Sherbourne, Lady, vi. 127.

Sherbourne, Lord, v. 106; vi. 127, 305.
 Sherer, Captain, "Recollections in the Peninsula," iv. 262; v. 279.
 Sheridan, Charles, and the Westminster Hall speech of Sheridan's, iv. 209; his views about the "Life of Sheridan," 155, 169, 174; viii. 241; "Pamphlet," iv. 37; Translation of "Fauriel's Greek Songs," 259.
 —, Richard Brinsley, "Life" of, i. xxi, et passim; a pupil of Whyte's, 6; said, by mistake, to be Moore's tutor, 6; his "Pizarro," alluded to, 90; reputed as the author of the Songs in Tickell's "Carnival of Venice," ii. 152; anecdotes of, 160; iii. 191, 192, 233; iv. 134, 135, 136, 286, 287, 288, 289, 295, 296; his anecdote of Dent, ii. 179; his son, anecdote of, 179; means of bringing Lords Sidmouth and Ellenborough into the Cabinet, 185; jealous of Fox, 185; his envy and hatred of Burke accounted for, 186; opinion of his speeches, by Moore and Lord John Russell, 187, and note; Acts of the play of "The Foresters," found among his papers, 191; and two French officers, 191; forced and extravagant combinations in his speeches, 192; his practical jokes, 196; his "Speeches," 196; General Tarleton, 197, and note; offered 20,000*l.* in the name of the American Government, for his services, 213; his corporation cups, &c., at a pawnbroker's, 215; Delpini, the trial between them about a joke inserted in the pantomime of "Robinson Crusoe," 223; on the authorship of "I have a secret sorrow here," 223; his dispute with Dundas, upon the meaning of "Malheureux," 224; sequel to his refusal of the registrarship of Malta for Thomas Sheridan, 226; his method of silencing people who went to him with plans of reform, 231; his library, its accumulation and dispersion, 233; his reply to Mr. Woodfall who had given him his opinion that he was not fitted for parliamentary speaking, 251; his "Westminster Hall Speech," 272; iv. 250; annoyed about his plagiarisms from Wycherley whom he had never read, ii. 297, 298; brought forward by his management of the Regency question, 297; his expectations of being Chancellor of the Exchequer, 297; ambition to be thought at the bottom of everything, 297; conversation about him, with Miss Ogle, his sister-in-law, 299; dialogue of "The Glorious First of June," 302; his conduct on the marriage of Mrs. Fitzherbert and the Prince, 304; applied all the good speeches of others to himself, 305; odd manufacture of his speeches, 307; Lines of John Wilkes, 312; characteristic trait of, 321; "The Rivals," 335; memoranda of his speeches, their shining parts, 350; loss of his gages d'amour, and the manner of their recovery, 355; not a ready man, 504; his anecdote of Shaw, iii. 128; trick of his on Richardson, 180; his Prologue to "The Miniature Picture," iv. 34; on the Bermuda claims, 74; application of the story of the drummer to the subject of Ireland, 76; thought to be the author of the Prince's letter about the Regency, 90; his talents, 134; told Rogers, twice,

- that he was the author of "The Stranger," 222; his assertion that vanity is the commanding passion, 227; his sermon for O'Beirne, 228; bad character given of him by his father to Lord Shelburne, 230; his "School for Scandal," 245, et passim; copy of the defence of his conduct in 1811, 283; his reply on the Hastings Trial, story of, 286; his love letters, 296; his joke to Tarleton, v. 9. note; his "Epitaph on Neilson," 139; preface for the fifth edition of, alluded to, 147; "The Critic," vii. 221; neglect of, by the Prince of Wales, ii. 103; on the death of, by Moore, inserted in "The Morning Chronicle," 106; his memory affectionately preserved at Harrow, 149.
- Sheridan, Mrs., story of her picture, ii. 174; her characteristics, 298; wrote "The Haunted Village," 180.
- , Miss, v. 78, 81.
- , Thomas, hard case of, iv. 227.
- , Mrs. Thomas, ii. 221. 318; iv. 170.
- Sherrard, Thomas, viii. 27. note.
- "She sung of love," iv. 181.
- Shiel, Rt. Hon. Richard Lalor, vi. 256; consulted Moore on the intention of the Catholic leaders, v. 35; his manner, action, and voice, for public speaking, vi. 139; introduced by Moore to the Marquess of Lansdowne, 205; his mimicries of O'Connell, vii. 145; his speech about Moore, iv. 243.
- , Mrs., vi. 151. et passim.
- "Ship, ahoy!" iv. 305, 312.
- ShIPLEY, Bishop, ii. 146. 149, 202.
- , Dean, anecdote of, v. 60.
- "Shipwreck of the Oswego," ii. 270, 271.
- Shirley, Mr., iv. 271. et passim.
- , Mrs., iv. 271. et passim.
- Shrewsbury, iii. 290. et passim.
- , Lady, vi. 288. et passim.
- , Lord, vi. 289.
- Shuttleworth, vii. 156.
- "Sibilla," by Gennaro, iii. 29.
- "Sibyls," by Domenichino, iii. 61. 75; by Guercino, 75; Volterrano, 40. 78.
- Sicily, iii. 66. 143.
- "Sic te Diva potens," ii. 173.
- Siddons, Miss, iv. 87; v. 6.
- , Mrs., as "The Tragic Muse," by Sir Joshua Reynolds, iv. 79; fête given by, i. 187; found in the Stage a vent for her private sorrows, v. 297; Moore's first hearing the sound of her voice, vi. 235.
- Sidmouth, Lady, vi. 155. et passim.
- , Lord, bon-mot of, i. 279; brought into the Cabinet by Sheridan, ii. 185; Miss Godfrey's opinion of, 95; to figure in "The Fudges," 131.
- Sidney, Algernon, iii. 39.
- Sienna, iii. 45.
- Simmond, Dr., ii. 281; iii. 358.
- Silvertop, iii. 19. et passim.
- Simmons, vi. 257.
- Simplon, the, iii. 6. et passim.
- Simpson, Captain, vii. 55.
- "— and Co.," iv. 54. 98.
- Sinclair, (Sir) George, vi. 82.
- , Miss, v. 11.
- Singleton, Archdeacon, vi. 148, 149.
- , Mrs., vi. 265.
- "Sing, Sing," iv. 171; v. 62.
- Sirr, Major, his description of the seizure of Lord Edward Fitzgerald, vi. 134; narrow escape with his life, 129.
- Sismondi, "Helicon Literature," viii. 212; "Literature of the South," offered to Moore, to review, by Jeffrey, ii. 42.
- Sistine Chapel, the, iii. 54.
- Skeffington, ii. 328; iv. 62.
- "Sketch of the First Act of a new Romantic Drama," vii. 219.
- "Sketches of American Life," ii. 242.
- "— of Irish Character," vii. 318.
- Skinner, iv. 127. et passim.
- , Mrs., iii. 111.
- Slaney, the river, vii. 111.
- "Slaughter of the Innocents," by Guido, iii. 30, 78, 81.
- "Slave, The," viii. 289.
- "Sleeping Beauty, The," vi. 313.
- "— Nymph and Faun," by Lemoyne, iii. 360.
- Sletz, Bishop of, vii. 370.
- Sligo, Lady, iii. 341. 365.
- , Lord, iii. 188. et passim.
- Sloper, Lindsay, viii. 29.
- Sloperton Cottage, Moore's residence, ii. 128; iii. 286; iv. 15; correspondence respecting it, vi. 73.
- "Smectymnuns," iv. 298.
- "Smile as You used to do," v. 50.
- Smirke, "Don Quixote," ii. 230.
- Smith, Adam, and Dr. Johnson, iv. 338; "Political Economy," iii. 162.
- , Adam, "Theory of Moral Sentiments," iv. 303; vi. 198; "Wealth of Nations," 198.
- , Albert, viii. 29.
- , Baron, "Prefatory Notice," iv. 210.
- , Bobus, his character of a capacious believer, vi. 284; method of dealing with O'Connell, 345; repartee of, vii. 342; see also vii. 273.
- , Charlotte, iii. 162.
- , Daniel, v. 215, 216.
- , Mrs. Daniel, v. 216.
- , Sir G., vi. 92.
- , General, iv. 35, 36.
- , Horace, verses by, vi. 80.
- , James, "Rejected Addresses," ii. 327; iv. 290; vi. 89; verses by, 195.
- , Sir James, ii. 312.
- , John, v. 294.
- , Lady, v. 219.
- , Leveson, v. 136, 138.
- , Lewson, iv. 265.
- , Sir Lionel, vii. 275.
- , Miss, ii. 10, 189.
- , Mr., offered Moore the pavilion he had already occupied, rent free, iii. 340.
- , Mrs., i. 168. et passim.
- , Nanny, v. 247, 248.
- , Robert, iii. 343; iv. 144.
- , Sir Sidney, and Jean d'Acre, iii. 329; told Moore of the distillation of salt water, 331.
- , Rev. Sydney, his articles in the "Edinburgh," on "Madame D'Epinau," and "American Travellers," ii. 263; commencement of a book of maxims, iii. 8; on Lady Holland's remedy for the book-worms, iv. 52; his imagination of a duel between two doctors, 53; odd passage from his article in the "Edinburgh Review," 94; his chief propensity, according to Deville, v. 70; his change

- from gaiety to austerity, 75; witticisms of, 75, 80; vi. 310; on the Irish Church, v. 279; advice to Moore how to treat Cooper, 280; his horse, 280; vii. 350; his conversation, vi. xli; his ludicrous caricature of Sir Æneas Mackintosh, xlii; praised Moore's Byron, 117; pun on 'Tom Hill, 196; notes from, to Moore 204; vii. 302, 314; anecdote told by, vi. 206; on Tithes, 252; comicalities of, 263, 264; as a conversational wit, surpassed all the men Moore ever met, 315; on his absences, 351; bill of fare, suggested by him to Mrs. Longman, as proper for her entomological guests, vii. 12; and Brougham, extract from their joint article on Ritson in the "Edinburgh Review," 13; his first interview with Daniel O'Connell, 51; on the different sorts of hand-shaking in society, 53; description of the dining process with Literary Lions, 152; his manner and talk, contrasted with Canon Tate's, 173; allusion to two points in Lord Lansdowne's character, 204; employed in teaching himself French, 370; his death, viii. 4. note.
- Smith, Mrs. Sydney, death of, viii. 4. note.
- , Sir Thomas, vii. 366.
- , Vernon, iv. 155, et passim.
- , Mrs. Vernon, iv. 155, et passim.
- , William, a poem by, i. 161.
- and Hodges, vii. 238.
- "Smoothly flowing," v. 196.
- Smyth, William, his emendations of Moore's "Irish Melodies," vi. 332.
- Smythe, iv. 286, 247, 288.
- Sneyd, Mr., verses on "Lalla Rookh," iii. 253.
- Sneyd's claret in the desert i. iv. 129.
- Snowdon, viii. 94.
- Soane, Mrs., iv. 299.
- Society at Bell Town Springs, i. 168.
- in high life, vi. 186.
- Socinus, vii. 28.
- Soden, Mr., vi. 329.
- , Mrs., vi. 329.
- Sodor and Man, Bishop of, v. 205.
- "So grant me, God, from every care," ii. 87.
- Solar Microscope, the, vi. 50.
- Solfatara, Lake, iii. 70.
- "Soliloquy of a pure and virtuous Statesman," v. 162.
- "Solitaire," the, iii. 264; iv. 13.
- Solly, Mr., i. 102.
- "Solyman," ii. 169.
- Somariva, Marquess, iii. 110.
- Somers, Lord, ii. 148.
- Somerset, Duchess of, iv. 164; vii. 225.
- , Duke of, v. 64; vi. 59; vii. 225.
- , Lady Fitzroy, vi. 125.
- , Lord Fitzroy, vi. 125; vii. 328; extracts from a letter to Moore, 332; letter to Moore, 193; see also 325, 333.
- , Lord W., v. 84.
- , House, v. 70; vi. 49, 188; viii. 89.
- Somerville, Dr., vii. 182.
- , Mrs., vii. 182.
- Sommariva, Count, "Galatée," iii. 146; "Magdalen," 145, 283, 358; "Terpsichore," 146.
- "Sonata," by Signor Castelli, iv. 205.
- "—," words by M. La Garde, iv. 205.
- "Sonatas," ii. 173, 176.
- "Song for the War Dance," v. 133.
- "— of the departing Spirit of the Tithe," vi. 280.
- "— of the Olden Time," v. 282, 300.
- "— to the Prince," viii. 193.
- "Songe," last scene of, iii. 10.
- Songs in Moore's poem, i. 355.
- "— of the Angels," v. 220.
- "— of the Anthology," vii. 27.
- "— of Tickell's Carnival of Venice," ii. 152.
- "Sonnets," ii. 18.
- "Sonnlui," iii. 150, 151.
- Sontag and Pasta, partnership for each of them, v. 290.
- Sophia, II. R. H. the Princess, ii. 38; vi. 214.
- Soracte, iii. 52, 75.
- Sorbonne, the, iii. 338.
- Sotheby, ii. 306, et passim.
- , Miss, iv. 322.
- "Sound the loud Timbrel," a subject for a design, ii. 78.
- Soult, Marshal, his collection of pictures, iii. 232, 266; very civil to Moore, 335.
- Southey, Robert, as an historian, iv. 255; called out by Lord Byron, iii. 331; epigram on by Lord Holland, iv. 314; his "Esprillo Letters," ii. 150; his bigoted opinions, v. 118; his domestic enjoyments, viii. 221; his immense correspondence, vii. 148; his "History of the War in Spain and Portugal," iv. 139; his opinion of Coleridge, vii. 72; "The Curse of Kehema," viii. 291.
- "Souvenir," v. 133.
- Souza, his "Camoens" cost him nearly 4000*l.*, and he had never sold a copy, iii. 105.
- , Madame de, iii. 241, et passim.
- Spa Rooms at Melksham, the, vi. 217.
- Spada Palace, the, iii. 51.
- Spagnoletti, "A Head," iii. 203.
- Spain, Ferdinand of, iii. 39, 230.
- Spalding, Miss, vi. 202.
- Sparta, story of a king of, vi. 220.
- Speakers of the House of Commons, anecdotes of, iv. 320.
- Specimen of English-French, iii. 225.
- of pomposity of speech, iii. 178.
- "Spectator," The, vii. 43, 203.
- Spence, Joseph, iv. 243; vii. 13.
- Spencer, Captain, v. 171; vi. 41.
- , General, viii. 64.
- , Hon. W., i. 180.
- , Lady, iii. 121, et passim.
- , Lord, a good shot, iv. 78. and note.
- , Lady Robert, iv. 223.
- , Lord Robert, i. 266, et passim.
- , William, his part in the duel between Moore and Jeffrey, i. 202, 205, 208; disadvantage of, in being an imaginative author, xxiv; his translation of "The wreath you wove," vii. 291; viii. 192.
- Spenser, remarkable for contrivances of versification, iv. 51.
- Sphinx, the, iii. 150, 151.
- Spike Island, its fortifications useless, iv. 107.
- Spinoza, his doctrines not atheistical, vii. 83.
- "Spirits, The," iv. 279.

Spitalfields Ball, the, v. 62. 68.
 Spohr, v. 229. 235.
 Spoleto, iii. 76.
 Spontini, his "Fernando Cortez" admirable music, iii. 7; rehearsal of his opera "Olympic," 90.
 "Sportsman, The Academic," written by Dr. Fitzgerald, i. 35.
 Spottiswoode, A., Esq., iv. 294. et passim.
 ———, Mrs., iv. 170. et passim.
 "Spring and Autumn," v. 53.
 Springer, Mr., curious statement respecting him, iv. 153.
 ———, Mrs., iv. 153.
 Spurzheim, examined Moore's head, iii. 101; his mistakes on Scott and Troughton, v. 67.
 Spye Gate, vii. 27.
 ——— Park, ii. 217. et passim.
 Squibs, Moore's collection of all his political, i. 331.
 St. Agnese, singular architecture of the church of, iii. 73.
 — Albans, Duchess of, iii. 218. et passim.
 "— Maria della Salute," by Canaletti, iii. 82.
 — Ambrosio, church of, the oldest in Milan, iii. 22.
 — Andrea della Valle, church of, pictures there, iii. 73.
 — Andrew, Westland Row, Dublin, extract from the parish register of, i. 76.
 — Antonio, Countess, iv. 200. et passim.
 — Asaph, Lord, vi. 47.
 — Aulair, Madame, iii. 304. et passim.
 — Bartholomew, Massacre of, iii. 14; statue of, 21.
 — Brice, iv. 6.
 — Carlos, Duke of, iii. 206.
 — Catherine of Bologna, her body preserved in a frightful manner, iii. 31.
 "— Cecilia," by Raphael, iii. 30.
 — Chrysostom, i. 211.
 — Cloud, iii. 8. et passim.
 — Columbanus, vii. 32.
 — Cyr, and his passport, iii. 237.
 — Domingo, French army preparing a descent on Cuba, i. 155.
 — Foix, iii. 334.
 — George, Mr., vi. 175.
 — George's, Bermuda, i. 154.
 — Germain, Lord, v. 220.
 — Germans, Lady, iv. 277.
 — Germans, Lord, iv. 277.
 — Helen's, Lord, anecdote of the Empress Catherine, vi. 292.
 — Helena, ii. 346; iv. 337; vi. 270.
 — Hilaire, M., iii. 172.
 — Ives, v. 54.
 "— James' Chronicle, The," ii. 221. et passim.
 — Januarius, i. 220.
 "— Jerome on Earth," vi. 204.
 — John, Lord, ii. 198.
 "— John in the Desert," by Paul Veronese, iii. 61.
 — Kevin, v. 218.
 — Lambert, iii. 340.
 — Lawrence, vii. 101, 102; the river, i. 176.
 — Louis, viii. 274.
 — Marc, vii. 30.
 — Mark, the Ducal Palace of, iii. 26; library of, magnificent, 25.
 — Mark's Place, viii. 186.
 — Mary Axe, v. 281.

St. Mary Magdalen, Moore's favourite saint, iii. 34.
 "— Michael," by Guido, iii. 58.
 — Michan's Church, Dublin, miraculous stories of the wonderful things lately discovered in the vaults, viii. 207.
 — Patrick, vii. 370.
 "— Patrick's Day," ii. 174.
 — Patrick's Day, i. 220, 221.
 ——— dinner, arrangements for it, iii. 207. et passim; enthusiasm on drinking Moore's health, 210.
 ——— library, i. 217; viii. 61.
 ——— own copy of the Gospels, vii. 370.
 — Paul's Churchyard, lighted with gas for the first time, iii. 351.
 — Peter and Paul, the miraculous well in the prison where they were confined, iii. 59.
 — Peter's church founded on the site where he suffered, iii. 52.
 ——— at Rome, first sight of the dome very fine, iii. 47.
 — Petersburg, iv. 249. et passim.
 — Phar, Abbé, anecdote of, iv. 309.
 — Pierre, Isle of, viii. 185.
 — Sulpice, church of, the organ very beautiful, iii. 7.
 — Vincent, Lord, i. 176.
 — Vittore, church of, gay and fanciful, iii. 22.
 Stacey, ii. 282.
 Staël, Auguste de, iii. 235, 309.
 ———, Madame de, amusing blunder of, iv. 128; anecdote of, 57; "Corinne," i. 234; her passion for Moore's poetry, 363; viii. 154; saying of, ii. 317.
 Stafford, Lady, v. 289. et passim.
 ———, Lord, iii. 243. et passim.
 ——— House, staircase at, vi. 122.
 Stair, Lord, iii. 333, 337.
 Stamer, Lady, v. 219.
 Stamford, iv. 328.
 "Standard, The," extract from, vii. 210; good, but impudent trick of, vi. 329.
 Standish, iii. 238.
 Standishes, the, iii. 337.
 Stanhope, Colonel, iii. 20; iv. 213, 214.
 ———, Fitzroy, iv. 221.
 ———, Lady, iv. 311. et passim.
 ———, Lady Caroline, vi. 148.
 ———, Lady Hester, v. 270.
 ———, Leicester, iv. 20. et passim.
 ———, Lincoln, iv. 259.
 ———, Lord, his opinion of Moore's destruction of the "Memoirs," iv. 194.
 ———, Miss, vi. 148.
 Stanislas, iii. 331.
 Stanley, iv. 33. et passim.
 ———, Lady Mary, v. 294.
 ———, Lord, and Sir Robert Peel, iv. 317.
 Stanton, vi. 141.
 "Stanzas on William Horton," v. 130.
 Starkey, Augusta, v. 148.
 ———, Dr., his death, vii. 29.
 ———, Elizabeth, v. 134. et passim.
 ———, John, iv. 137. et passim.
 ———, Julia, iv. 177.
 Starkey, Miss, iv. 273. et passim.
 ———, Mrs., iv. 137. et passim.
 State Paper Office, discovery of Wolsey's letters and papers of Milton, v. 321.
 Staunton, vi. 168.
 "Steal gently, my dear," v. 232.
 Steele, i. 110.

- Steele, Sir Richard, iii. 190.
 Stendahl, Count, a mystery to Moore, iii. 108, 109; "L'Histoire de la Peinture en Italie," ii. 306; iii. 103, 109.
 Stephanooff, picture from "Lalla Rookh," v. 66.
 Stephens, iii. 261.
 —, Miss, Countess of Essex, iv. 70; called upon by Campbell and Moore, ii. 319; her opinion of Pasta, iii. 365.
 Stephenson, vi. 59, 105.
 Sterling, and Hume, anecdote of, vii. 168.
 —, one of the proprietors of, and writers for "The Times," v. 171.
 —, Lord, ii. 313.
 Sterne, Lawrence, MS. of one of his sermons in Rogers's possession, iv. 79.
 "Sternhold and Hopkins," ii. 170.
 —, Captain, vi. 152.
 —, George, his trick upon the Society of Antiquaries, ii. 332.
 —, Miss, v. 303.
 —, Mrs., vi. 152, 176.
 Stethoscope, the, iii. 108.
 Stevenson, Mr., his manner of catechising Moore for an autograph, vii. 355.
 —, Sir John, Mus. Doc., advised to set glees from Moore's "Anacreon," i. 120; appointed organist to the Chapel Royal, Dublin Castle, ii. 52. in Paris, 124; his economy, 81; his music to Code's piece unworthy of him, i. 306; requested to look over the harmony of the "Canadian Boat Song," 180; suggested by Moore to compose the music for a "Series of Sacred Songs," 284; tribute to, by the Catch Club, 123; Irishism, from the "Dublin Magazine," on his portrait, viii. 75.
 Stewart, Dugald, opinion of Sheridan's Begum speech, ii. 213; his power of giving a new shade of meaning to a word without injuring its analogy, 219.
 —, Mrs. Dugald, v. 11. et passim.
 —, Miss Dugald, vi. 163.
 —, Lord, iv. 291, 292.
 —, Louisa Maria, ii. 284.
 —, Sophia, v. 11.
 —, Mrs. S., ii. 307.
 Stibbert, Mr., Moore arranged to join him in the journey to Paris, iii. 295.
 Still, Miss, v. 92.
 —, Mr., v. 92, 93.
 Stockdale, i. 75.
 Stock Exchange, the, ii. 262.
 Stoddart, v. 8, 11.
 Stokes, his opinion of one of Moore's answers to the Chancellor, i. 65.
 Stone, iii. 305; vii. 213.
 Stonehenge, vi. 336, 337.
 Stories, v. 91. 275; of a barber at the Chelsea ball, iii. 293; a barrister, v. 91; a carver, 299; a challenge, iv. 82; a Fitzmaurice, vi. 88; a lady and the coronation, ii. 48; a man and some adders, told by Scott, v. 121; a man's ill temper, after losing his money at play, iv. 263; a marquess, 7; an absent man, v. 94; an Irish landlord, iii. 222; an Irishman's wish to see Moore at the British Museum, vii. 262; an old Scotch officer, v. 152; a practical joke, told by Rogers, 121; a priest, iv. 14; a Sacristine, told by Rogers, vi. 286; a Scotch divine, 320; a sick man, 163; a tailor, who used to attend the Greek lectures at the University constantly, by Luttrell, 260; Dr. John Bull, v. 97; George III., iv. 250; Gould, v. 33; Jim Welsh's trip to France, iii. 234; Keller and M'N—, by Lord Plunket, vii. 75; Lord Norbury, told by Luttrell, v. 151; North, iv. 171; Stowell and Captain Morris, vi. 93; Suffield, 191; Mathews, 71; Mr. Rose applying to some Scotch laird for permission to shoot on his grounds, v. 282; Mrs. Hook, told by Sir W. Scott, 286; O'Connell, vi. 12; sentries, iii. 337; Scott and the Duke of Hamilton, v. 4; writing a song for the Pitt Club, refuted, 285; the battle of Worcester, vii. 294; the Happy Man, ii. 169; the King of Delhi and his dentist, vii. 230; Sparta and the establishment of the Ephori, vi. 220; the man in Spain, with a basket of vipers, 47; the Prince of Wales pretending to shoot himself on account of Miss Fitzherbert, iv. 310; the wonderful Italian calculating boy, vi. 101; two United Irishmen, 170; William IV. and the Duke of Wellington, told by Lord Valletort, 235; told by Jekyll, 76; told by Lord Alvanley, of a man learning the Swedish language, 190; told by Luttrell, v. 280; vi. 251; told by Rogers, respecting a sermon at an invalid establishment, 250.
 Stormont, Lord, vi. 81.
 Story, won 2600*l.* at écarté, iii. 336.
 Stothard ii. 284. et passim.
 Stourhead, v. 195.
 Stowe, library at, vi. 346.
 Stowell, Lord, and Captain Morris, story of, vi. 93; his turtle, iv. 317; his book, a portion of the American maritime Law, vi. 156.
 "Strabo," ii. 453; vii. 92.
 "Strada," v. 135.
 Straduerius, v. 4.
 Staffa, viii. 161.
 Stafford, Lord, his government of Ireland, iv. 139.
 Strange names adverted to, ii. 193.
 "Stranger, The," ii. 223; iv. 222.
 Straungford, Lady, iv. 313.
 —, Lord, his "Camoens," i. 125; his account of the situation of the Greeks, iii. 356; his complaint of Moore's not writing to him, 17; dialogue, in his letter, respecting Moore, viii. 225; letter from, to Moore, 225; opinion of Moore's "Epicurean," v. 188; see also iii. 138.
 Strangways, Lady, vii. 202. et passim.
 Strathmore, Lord, iv. 80.
 Strauss, vii. 216.
 Strawberry Hill, a mere showbox, vi. 95.
 Stretch, Mr., iii. 167.
 Strickland, Miss, "Elizabeth," vii. 366.
 Strochling, ii. 357.
 —, Mrs., ii. 357.
 Strozzi, the, iii. 29.
 "Structure of English Verse," ii. 177.
 Strutt, Anthony, iii. 268.
 —, Joseph, his present, to Moore, of an easy chair, ii. 82; presents to Moore and Mrs. Moore, i. 371; Moore and Mrs. Moore on a visit to, 365.
 —, William, v. 256.
 Strutts, the, "a nest of young poets," ii. 31; supposed to be worth a million of money, i. 365; ii. 106.
 Stuart, Admiral, v. 56.
 —, Sir Charles, his conversation with Moore on cruelties, iii. 316.
 —, Lord and Lady Dudley, vi. 81, 82.

Stuart, Lady Elizabeth, iii. 91. et passim.
 —, Lord Henry, i. 138.
 —, James, "Three Years in North America," vi. 320.
 —, Lady James, iv. 253.
 —, Lord James, iv. 166. 253. 288.
 —, Lady Louisa, iv. 334; vi. 227.
 —, Miss, v. 56.
 " — Family, The," monument to, iii. 48.
 "Study for the School of Athens," by Raphael, iii. 20.
 Sturmer, Madame, iii. 309.
 Suard, "Mélanges," v. 201.
 Sub-letting of apartments, iii. 199.
 Success, the point of difference between a madman and a hero, ii. 68.
 Suchet's, Maréchal, iii. 317.
 "Such things are," ii. 244.
 Sueno, King of Norway, viii. 162.
 "Suetonius," iv. 304.
 Suett, Richard, delighted with his part in Moore's piece, i. 109.
 Suffield, Lord, story of, vi. 191.
 Suffolk, Lady, iv. 157. et passim.
 —, Lord, iv. 157. et passim.
 Suicer, "Thesaurus," ii. 301.
 "Suite d'un Bal Masque," iii. 91. 335.
 Suliots, the, iv. 216.
 "Sulla Morale Cattolica," vii. 127.
 Sullivan, Mr., iii. 123. et passim.
 Sullivan's cascade, iv. 114.
 Sulmona, Princess of, iv. 125.
 Sully, "Memoirs," v. 51.
 "Summer Fête, The," vi. 127. 154. 201.
 Sumner, J., Esq., M.P., iv. 309.
 Surrey, Lord and Lady, iii. 219.
 Susa, iii. 85.
 Sussex, H. R. H. the Duke of, affable to Moore, ii. 261; his manner of taking wine with Moore and others, vii. 225; the reading of the Queen's will, ii. 230; expressed much interest about Moore's Bermuda business, 262; offered Moore the use of his library, v. 264; vi. 43. 59; pun by, on the Archbishop of Tuam, v. 302.
 Sutherland, Duchess of, iv. 181. 215.
 —, Duke of, vii. 40. 181. 215.
 Sutton, Right Hon. C. Mannors, vi. 32; vii. 162.
 —, Mrs. C. Mannors, vi. 32. et passim.
 "Suzanna," iii. 332.
 Swan, vi. 134. 137.
 Swanage, v. 203.
 Swayne, Major, i. 111.
 "Sweepings of my Uncle's Study," ii. 202.
 "Sweet Harp," ii. 47. 52.
 "Sweethearts and Wives," viii. 19. note.
 Swift, Dean, "Gulliver's Travels," iv. 131;
 "Journal to Stella," vi. 317; "Tale of a Tub," vii. 246.
 —, Theophilus, his attack on the Fellows of Trinity College, Dublin, i. 37;
 "The Monks of Trinity," 38.
 Swinton, Lady, v. 5.
 Switzerland, iii. 23. et passim.
 "Sydney, Sir Philip, Life of," by Sir Fulke Greville, iii. 143.
 Sylla, ii. 255.
 —, " —," iii. 318.
 Syllabus, or "Heads of Lectures," ii. 155.
 Symonds, v. 119.

T.

"Tableau de l'Egypte," iii. 144.
 " — de J. Jacques," iii. 274.
 Tacitus, vi. 348.

Tagliioni, vi. 200.
 "Tailor's Song, The," vi. 96.
 Talbot, iii. 224. et passim.
 —, C., vi. 240.
 —, Henry, vii. 297.
 —, Kit, vi. 269; vii. 297.
 —, Lady, i. 120.
 —, Lord, ii. 48; v. 68.
 —, Miss, iv. 251.
 —, Mrs., iv. 159. et passim.
 "Tale of a Tub," vii. 246.
 "Tales of a Grandfather," vi. 16.
 " — of a Traveller," iv. 208.
 " — of the Genii," iv. 130. 243.
 " — of the O'Hara Family," vi. 136.
 Talfourd, Sir James Thomas Noon, Moore introduced to, vii. 156.
 "Talisman, The," v. 147.
 Talleyrand, Prince Maurice, and Davoust, iii. 328; anecdote of, v. 224; bon-mots of, iv. 231; vi. 322; vii. 5; reason of his lameness, 180; two laconic letters of, 223; his death, account of, 226.
 Talleyrand, Princess, and Denon, iii. 230.
 Tallis, Thomas, composer of the "Evening Hymn," iv. 148.
 Tamburini, vii. 154.
 Tam O'Shanter, vi. 50.
 Tatworth, Lady, i. 297.
 —, Lord, his opinion of "The Young May Moon," ii. 10.
 Tanara, Galleria, iii. 32.
 "Tancredi," ii. 361. et passim.
 Tankerville, Lady, iv. 73. et passim.
 "Tapisserie de Bayeux," vii. 188.
 "Tarare," iii. 99; iv. 301.
 Tarbert, iv. 120.
 Tarleton, anecdote of General, ii. 326; and Sheridan, 197. and note.
 Tarquin of Onkelos, iv. 16.
 "Tartuffe," iii. 319; v. 147.
 Tasso, Torquato, contrasted with Moore, i. xxiii; his Pluto compared with Milton's Satan, xli. note B.; his prison, iii. 29;
 "Jerusalem," 29; tomb of, 63.
 "Tassoni, Memoirs of," vi. 31.
 Tate, iii. 178.
 —, Canon, vii. 173.
 Tavistock, Lady, iii. 351. et passim.
 —, Lord, ii. 343.
 Taylor, Jeremy, "Holy Living," iv. 144, 148; "Propheying," 57.
 —, Abbé, iii. 52.
 Taylor, Dr., vii. 178.
 —, Henry, "Van Artevelde," vii. 76.
 —, Lord, iv. 128.
 —, Michael A., iv. 261. et passim.
 —, Mrs., iv. 285.
 —, Rev. Mr., vii. 131.
 —, Watson, author of the words of the celebrated song of "Cripples, lie down," v. 314; his conversation with Moore on the events of '98, in Ireland, 314; his pictures, iv. 79; his parody on Crabbe, Bowles, and Moore, v. 52.
 Tegart, ii. 124. et passim.
 Tegart, Miss, ii. 354.
 "Telemachus," statue of, by Canova, iii. 87.
 "Tell her, oh, tell her," iv. 251.
 " — me, kind seer, I pray thee," v. 235.
 " — me not," ii. 128.
 Tempe, site of, i. 35.
 Temple, Sir Granville, iii. 337.
 —, Sir W., ii. 45.
 —, of the Graces, ii. 171.
 Templeton, Lord, iii. 22. et passim.
 Templetown, vi. 239. note.

- Tenlers, his "Christ crowned with Thorns," lil. 70.
 Tennant and his sixpence, vi. 78.
 Tennis Court, the, lil. 335.
 Tennyson, Alfred, i. xxii.
 Tentyra, ruins of, lil. 165.
 Tepellene, v. 268.
 "Teresa," by Bernini, lil. 57.
 Terni, Cascade of, lil. 66; magnificence and beauty of, 76.
 "Terpsichore," by Sommariva, lil. 146.
 Terrasson, li. 291.
 ———, Abbé, lil. 148.
 Terry, verses on, by Erskine, v. 138.
 "Tertullian," v. 142.
 Tevlot, the, viii. 162.
 Thackeray, Dr., vi. 328; vii. 95.
 "Thalia," lil. 55.
 Thames, the, iv. 19. et passim.
 Thanet, Lady, li. 224.
 ———, Lord, lil. 233. et passim.
 "That time of year thou may'st in me behold," vii. 147.
 Thayer, lil. 337. 363.
 ———, Madame, lil. 337. 363.
 "The Address to the Sea," v. 215.
 "—— Ariel's Adieu," li. 287.
 Théâtre Français, lil. 7. et passim.
 Theatres, Messrs. Inchbald's, li. 84.
 Theatrical season, the, and Moore's first plunge, i. 257.
 Theatricals, private, at Carton, i. 8.
 Thebais, the, lil. 132.
 "The Banquet," li. 270. 288.
 Thebes, v. 265.
 "The Bird let loose," li. 195.
 "—— Bishop and the Bold Dragoon," v. 29.
 "—— Bishop of ———, after his fourth bottle," lil. 224.
 "—— Bride," li. 249.
 "—— Brilliant Black Eye," i. 335. 336.
 "—— Canadian Boat Song," sent to Kate Moore, i. 80.
 "—— Canonization of St. Butterworth," v. 58. 60.
 "—— Cat," iv. 323.
 "—— Chapter of Accidents," li. 173.
 "—— Dessert," li. 288.
 "—— Devil's Bridge," v. 119.
 "—— Donkey and his Panniers," v. 115.
 "—— Dream of those Days," vii. 35. and note.
 "—— dying Warrior to his Sword," iv. 249. 250.
 "—— Englishman," writers in, li. 294.
 "—— Evening Gun," v. 46. 109.
 "—— foremost Patriot of all Time," viii. 23.
 "—— Foresters," Acts of, li. 191.
 "—— Fourth Commandment, epigramatised," iv. 116.
 "—— Friends we've tried are by our Side," vi. 12.
 "The Fudger Fudged, or T——y M——e and the Devil," li. 356.
 "—— Garland I send Thee," v. 88.
 "—— Gentleman in Black, story of, lil. 201.
 "—— Gipsy Prince," i. 123.
 "—— Ghost of Miltiades," v. 132. 135.
 "—— Harp of my Country," i. xxviii.
 "—— Harp that once," v. 36.
 "—— Heavens are Telling," v. 105.
 "—— Heart-wounded Stranger," v. 235.
 "—— Hermit of Mucross Abbey, iv. 115.
 "—— Humble Man," li. 179.
 "—— Hunter once in this Shade reclined," v. 238.
 "—— Indian Boat," v. 239.
 "—— Keep the Line Club," vi. 44.
 "The Last Days of Napoleon," iv. 318.
 "—— Last Rose of Summer," v. 105. 256.
 "—— Legacy," li. 207.
 "—— Light Bark that goes, v. 101.
 Thellusson, Miss, iv. 70.
 "The Lofty Lords," vii. 161.
 "—— Man who holds his Lands by Fee," viii. 6.
 "—— Meeting of the Waters," suggested by the scene at Castle Howard, though not written there, li. 214.
 "—— Melksham concert, li. 154.
 "—— Merchant to conceal his Treasure," li. 249.
 "—— Minstrel Boy," a good subject for an engraving for the "Irish Melodies," i. 283.
 Themistius, li. 243.
 "The Muses and Graces will just make a Jury," v. 102.
 "Then bring me showers of posies, bring," v. 215.
 "The night before Larry was stretched," written by the Rev. Burrowes, i. 31.
 "Theodicée," the, vi. 90.
 "The Old Bard," li. 175.
 "Theophilus, verses on, by Rogers, iv. 225.
 "Theory of Moral Sentiments," iv. 303; vi. 198.
 "The Plot Discovered," i. 61.
 "—— Press," newspaper, i. 55.
 "—— Prince's Song," li. 64. 65.
 "There are two loves," iv. 246.
 "—— is no grief beneath the sun," vii. 335.
 "The Reprisal," lil. 21.
 "Thérèse," lil. 185.
 "—— Aubert," lil. 214.
 "There's a song of the olden time," iv. 276. et passim.
 "—— nothing bright but Heaven," li. 86. 90.
 "—— not in this wide world," vii. 109.
 "The Rivals," no trace of it among the Sheridan papers, li. 275.
 "—— Rose Tree," i. 336.
 "—— Schism of the Isms," vii. 310.
 Theseus, li. 333; lil. 54; iv. 228.
 "—— and the Centaur," by Canova, lil. 56.
 "The Slave," v. 142. 144. 162.
 "—— Song of the Box," vii. 219.
 "—— Spirit of Discovery by Sea," li. 291.
 "—— Tea," li. 288.
 "—— three Marys seeing the Angel at the Sepulchre," by Albano, lil. 67.
 "—— Triumphant Tailor," li. 170.
 "—— Turf shall be," li. 239.
 "—— Unfortunate Miss Bailey," vii. 161.
 "—— Valley lay smiling," i. 318. et passim.
 "The World has not a Joy to give," li. 77.
 "—— World was hush'd," v. 88.
 "—— Wreath you wove," li. 205. et passim.
 "They are all gone," v. 109.
 "—— are gone," v. 100. 108.
 "—— are gone to the skies," viii. 3.
 "—— may rail at this life," li. 258.
 "—— tell me thou'rt the favoured guest," vii. 243.
 "The Young May Moon," quoted, i. xxviii.
 Thiard, lil. 320.
 Thicknesse, Philip, "Travels," iv. 318.
 Thierry, "Descent of the Normans," vii. 45; "Études historiques," 246; letter to Moore, 250.
 Thiers, vii. 191.
 Thirteen to dinner, an unlucky number, li. 206.
 "This Earth is the Planet," li. 109; vi. 202; viii. 250.

- Thistlewood, vi. 35.
 "This world is all a fleeting show," i. xxxi; ii. 47.
 "— world's a good world to live in," viii. 7.
 Thomond, Lady, iii. 90.
 —, Lord, ii. 300. et passim.
 Thompson, "Travels," iii. 103.
 —, Baron, anecdote of, v. 32.
 —, Dr., v. 11.
 —, G. v. 12.
 —, John, iv. 135.
 —, Mrs., iii. 293.
 —, Surgeon, iv. 300.
 Thomson, ii. 200. et passim.
 —, Captain, i. 319.
 —, Dr., iv. 269; v. 170.
 Thonon, iii. 16.
 Thornery, the, iii. 283.
 Thornhill, Colonel, iv. 329, 330.
 —, General, v. 69.
 Thornton, v. 69. et passim.
 Thorp-cloud, viii. 153.
 Thorpe, vii. 168.
 Thorwaldsen, anecdote of, vii. 74; "A Peasant Boy," iii. 63; bust of "Lord Byron," 293; fine things in his study, 63; "Ganymede and the Eagle," 63; "Mercury," 63; Statue of Lord Byron, vii. 344; "The Graces," iii. 63; "Triumphal Procession of Alexander," iv. 69; "Triumph of Alexander," iii. 63; "Venus with the Apple," 63.
 "Those Evening Bells," v. 178.
 "Thou art, O God! the light and life," ii. 85. 91.
 "Though the last glimpse of Erin," iv. 342.
 "Thoughts on Comets," ii. 169.
 "— on Editors," vi. 231.
 "Thou lovest no more," iv. 209.
 "Three Heads," by Giordano, iii. 29.
 "— Years in North America," vi. 320.
 "Threshers, The," a reorganisation of the United Irishmen, viii. 63.
 "Through Erin's Isle," alteration in, i. 370.
 "— grief and through danger, thy smile hath cheer'd my way," ii. 178.
 Thuanus, vi. xii.
 Thucydides, vi. 305; vii. 257.
 Thurlow, Lord, ii. 224; anecdotes of, vi. 81; his lines on the Dutch, iii. 229.
 Thurn and Taxis, Prince of, iii. 285.
 Thynne, Lady Louisa, ii. 195.
 Thynne, Lord John, iv. 173. 324.
 Tiber, the, iii. 52. et passim.
 Tickell, Richard, ii. 223; his anxiety after the publication of his "Anticipation," iv. 34; "Carnival of Venice," Songs in, reputed to be by Sheridan, ii. 152; discontented with Sheridan, iv. 34; his mimicry of Fox when hard run in argument with Richardson, ii. 303; witty, but a bad arguer, 303.
 Tierney, Right Hon. George, expected to be made Chancellor of the Exchequer in Ireland, i. 189; offered Lord Moira an appointment, for a friend, 129; his opinion of "Lalla Rookh," iv. 165; his opinion of Sir James Mackintosh, iii. 177; repartee of, v. 63.
 —, Mrs., iv. 171.
 Tighe, Mrs. Henry, i. 185; her "Psyche, or the Legend of Love," vii. 255; viii. 61. note.
 Tillemont, his "Ecclesiastical History," iii. 130.
 Tilly, Commandeur de, translation of Goldsmith's "Deserted Village," ii. 247.
 "Timæus," vii. 7.
 "Times," the, vii. 14; extract from, on the debate relative to Moore and the Pension List, 209; its early information of Lord Goderich's resignation, v. 240. 244; remarks upon, vii. 126.
 "Tim Moore," the flattering proof it gave of the acquaintance of the public with Moore and his songs, vii. 259.
 Tindal, Chief Justice, vii. 167.
 —, Lady, vii. 167.
 Tindall, Mrs., ii. 351.
 Tinker, Mr., one of the first subscribers to Moore's "Anacreon," i. 98.
 "Tintern Abbey," iii. 161. and note.
 Tintoret, "Miracle of the Hammer," iii. 84; "Venus," 80.
 Tintyra, Temple of, iii. 143.
 Tipperary, ii. 80. et passim.
 Tiraboschi, iii. 20. 60.
 "Tis gone—and for ever—the light we saw breaking," ii. 46.
 "— not where lights are shining," v. 52. 87.
 "— said our worthy manager intends," vii. 224.
 Tita, v. 268.
 Tithe Bill, defeat of Ministers on, vii. 41.
 Tithes, different modes of getting them, iv. 110; generally amount to nearly one-third of the rent, 158; Leasing Bill, the, 105.
 Titian, "Christ," iii. 232; "Mistress," 68; "Herodias's Daughter," v. 66; "Sacred and Profane Love," iii. 61. 65; "The Assumption," 84; "Cavalier and his Mistress," 89; "Cenci," 52; "Graces," 60; "Venus and Adouls," 72; "Vennuses," 35.
 Titus, Arch of, iii. 49.
 —, Baths of, iii. 50. 57.
 "Ti veggo, t'abbraccio," iv. 281.
 Tivoli, iii. 70. et passim.
 Toast of "The little Gentleman in Velvet," ii. 218.
 Toasts, v. 75.
 "To-day in Ireland," v. 111.
 Todd, Dr., vii. 369. et passim.
 "To Greece we give our shining blades," iv. 323.
 "Toilet of Venus," by A. Caracci, iii. 333.
 Toleration of the English Church, ii. 81.
 Toller, Moore's proctor, ii. 296; v. 151.
 Tombs in Père la Chaise, iii. 9.
 "Tom Cribb's Memorial," ii. 249.
 "Thumb," ii. 161.
 Tone, Theobald Wolfe, "Journal," vi. 317.
 Tonnerre, iii. 12.
 Tooke, Horne, "Bank Restriction," iv. 277; reply of, ii. 252; saying of, vi. 287.
 Toole, iv. 161.
 Topenny, Mr., vi. 346.
 Torfæus, vii. 84.
 Torlonia, iii. 18. 47. 74.
 Torreno, Count, iii. 253. et passim.
 Torrens, Colonel, v. 279; vii. 43.
 Torres Vedras, lines of, ii. 197. note.
 Torri, v. 294.
 Tortoni's, iii. 8. et passim.
 "Tory Guide, The," vi. 178.
 "— Pledges," vi. 281.
 "To the river Lodden," ii. 250.
 "— the Sea," v. 232.
 "— thy cliffs, rocky Seaton, adieu," v. 278.
 Tottenham Court Road, scene in, ii. 234.
 Toulouse, battle of, v. 68.
 Tournon, Madlle de, iii. 193. 198.
 "Tout pour la Tripe," v. 144.
 Townley, Lord, iii. 59; vii. 298.
 Townshend, Lady, iv. 265.

Townshend, Lord, iv. 135 ; v. 45.
 ———, Lady John, iv. 296.
 ———, Lord John, ii. 196. et passim.
 ———, Roger, iv. 86.
 Tozzoli, iii. 32.
 "Trade of Ireland," vi. 107.
 Trajan's pillar, iii. 47 ; v. 57.
 Tralee, iv. 120.
 Transcribing, the punishment in Hell for bad poets, i. 125.
 "Transfiguration, The," by Raphael, iii. 49. 55 ; v. 107.
 Transformation of insects, iii. 217.
 Translation by a schoolboy, ii. 159 ; by Lord Holland, vii. 280, 281.
 ———, curious, vi. 68.
 Translations of Sir W. Jones's article "On the Liberties of the People," ii. 146.
 "Trapp's Virgil," ii. 346.
 Traquair, iv. 336.
 Trasimene, the Lake, iii. 77.
 "Traveller," the, iii. 126.
 "Travels in America," vii. 134 ; "Of an Irish Gentleman in Search of a Religion," i. xxx. et passim ; "To the Netherlands," viii. 203.
 Travers, ii. 181.
 ———, Dr., vii. 167.
 ———, Surgeon, vii. 152.
 Travis, vii. 156.
 "Treatise on the Effect of Instruments," ii. 35.
 Trecchi, Monsieur, iii. 11.
 Tree, Miss Ellen, her "Julia," iv. 23 ; Luttrell's complimentary lines to, ii. 300. note ; sung well, 231 ; Moore's confidence in her, iv. 259.
 Trelawny, iv. 218.
 Tre-Madock, viii. 94.
 "Tremainne," v. 192.
 Trench, v. 315.
 Trenchard, Mount, iv. 121.
 Trevanion, v. 52. et passim.
 Trevor, Mr., v. 217.
 Trianon, the Grand, iii. 152.
 Trimlestown, Lord, translated Moore's "Paradise and the Peri" into French, iii. 113.
 Trinity, the, ii. 167. 271 ; symbolised by a little girl, 299.
 ——— College, Cambridge, reason for its boasting the greatest list of illustrious names, v. 130.
 ——— College, Dublin, Debating Society, i. 46 ; its dissolution, 48 ; inquisition at, by the Chancellor, 61 ; the authorities of, avoided mentioning Moore's name with the other Irish poets on the visit of George IV., iii. 275 ; key of the MSS. room missing, vii. 298. 300 ; statutes evaded by the tutors, i. 37.
 "Trip to Paris," vi. 195.
 "—— to Scarborough," vi. 251.
 "Tristram Shandy," iv. 72.
 Triumphal arch of the Simplon, iii. 21.
 "—— Procession of Alexander," by Thorwaldsen, iv. 69.
 "Triumph of Alexander," by Thorwaldsen, iii. 63.
 Trois Frères Provencaux, iii. 112. 195. 224. 315.
 Trotter, ii. 195 ; iii. 129.
 ———, Sir Coutts, vi. 294.
 Troughton, v. 67.
 Trowbridge, iv. 179, 180 ; v. 98 ; Dinner, the, v. 98.
 Truganoff, vi. 15.
 Tuam, Archbishop of, pun on, v. 302.
 Tucker, vii. 198.

Tucker, Mrs. W., iii. 359.
 "Tu di Grazie," vii. 241.
 Tudor, Miss, viii. 69.
 ———, Mr., v. 161.
 Tugwell, Miss, vi. 165.
 Tuileries, the, iii. 7. et passim ; Gardens, the, iii. 140. et passim.
 Tuilamore, Lady, iv. 199.
 Tullus, house of, ii. 288.
 Tunbridge, i. 184. et passim.
 ——— Wells, ii. 44. et passim.
 Turin, iii. 85.
 Turk Lake, iv. 114, 115.
 "Turks, History of the," vii. 18.
 Turner, J. W. M., "Baiae and the Bridge of Caligula," vi. 188 ; his wish to go to Ireland, but afraid to venture there alone, vii. 77.
 Turner, Sharon, "History of Henry the Eighth," vii. 196.
 ———, Mrs., iv. 206.
 Tuscany, Grand Duke of, v. 189.
 Tuyll, Baron, vi. 175.
 Tweed, the, iv. 330 ; viii. 162.
 "Twinkle, twinkle, little Star," ii. 182.
 Twiss, Horace, joke of, vi. 53 ; odd dinner at his chambers, ii. 320 ; preface alluded to, i. 353.
 "Two Apostles," the, by Guido, iii. 31.
 "—— Gentlemen of Verona," iv. 23.
 "—— Laughing Children," by Correggio, iii. 51.
 "Twopenny Post Bag, The," i. 340. 359 ; ii. 95.
 Tyler, ii. 288 ; iii. 279.
 Tyneham, v. 94, 95.
 Typographical errors, ii. 154. 156.
 Tyrawley, Lord, v. 46.
 "Tyrolese Air," i. 284 ; song of liberty, dedicated to Miss Rawdon, 283.
 Tyrwhit, Thomas, v. 75.
 Tydler, vii. 144, 145. 302.

U.

Ulva, viii. 161.
 Umbrella Question, the, v. 163.
 Union Masquerade, the, i. 122.
 United Irishmen, their watchword, i. 66.
 ——— Irish Societies, i. 58.
 "Universal History," iv. 255.
 "—— Judgment, The," by Michael Angelo, iii. 54.
 "University Herald, The," vii. 363.
 "—— Review, The," iv. 210.
 Unknown poetical correspondents, ii. 273.
 "Un Moment d'Imprudence," iv. 9.
 "—— tenero amore," v. 98.
 Upcott, Mr., offered Moore the editorship of the "Garrick" papers, v. 99.
 Urpham, ii. 281. et passim.
 Upper Lake, the, its exquisite loveliness, iv. 118.
 Upton, iii. 84.
 "Up with the souters of Selkirk," iv. 336.
 Urbino, Duke of, iii. 42.
 Ure, Dr., vi. 71.
 Usher, Archbishop, i. 33 ; ii. 149.
 Usher's Quay, i. 160.
 "Utopia," v. 34 ; viii. 43.
 Uxbridge, Lord, iv. 199.

V.

"Valerius Flaccus," iv. 232.
 Vallabrique, iv. 6. 125. 27.
 Vallenecy, "Collectanea," ii. 148.
 Valetort, Lady, verses on, vi. 244. 273.

- Valletort, Lord, his stories of the King and Duke of Wellington, vi. 235.
 Valley of Chitway, ii. 217.
 Valpy, his "Classics," iv. 54; his edition of "Thesaurus," iii. 101.
 "Vampire," the, iii. 202.
 Van Amburgh, vii. 244.
 "— Artevelde," vii. 76.
 "— Buren, his conversation with Moore on English society, vi. 252.
 Vanderhausen, Mr., iii. 101.
 Van de Weyer, Mr., vi. 343. et passim.
 Vandramin, Count and Countess, iv. 165.
 Vandyck, "A Magdalen," iii. 69; "Charles II. and Two Children," 84; "Laud," vi. 109; "Prince Thomas," iii. 85.
 Vane, Sir Harry, vi. 46.
 Vanini, anecdote of, ii. 350.
 "Vanity and Modesty," by Da Vinci, iii. 68.
 Vansittart, Right Hon. N. (Lord Bexley), and Milbank Penitentiary, v. 106.
 Vanslebion, "Egypt," v. 145.
 Variétés, the, iii. 176. et passim.
 Varley, his Astrology, vi. 57; iii. 298.
 Vasari, his "Lives of the Painters," iii. 63.
 Vatican, the, iii. 50. et passim.
 "Vathek," sent, to Moore, for review, ii. 101.
 Vaughan, iii. 138. et passim.
 Vauxhall cocked hats, ii. 319.
 "— on a wet night, vi. 71.
 "— near Birmingham, vii. 231.
 Vecchio, the Palazzo, iii. 41.
 Vega, Lopez de, i. xxvii.
 "Veiled Prophet, The," i. xxv; preferred by Crabbe, xxv.
 "Velasquez," by Pope Pamfili, iii. 62.
 Velluti, iv. 293. et passim.
 Venables, Alderman, v. 209.
 "Venere Vincitrice," iii. 73; by Canova, 68.
 Venetian Academy, and living model, iii. 74.
 Venice by moonlight, iii. 28.
 "—, the disenchantments of, iii. 26.
 "Venus," ii. 237. et passim; by Canova, iii. 42; v. 282; by Tintoret, iii. 80; by Titian, 35.
 "— and Adonis," by Titian, iii. 72.
 "— de Medici," Moore's ideas on seeing it, iii. 35.
 "— Genetrix, the," iii. 35.
 "— of the Capitol," iii. 59.
 "— with the Apple," by Thorwaldsen, iii. 63.
 "Verdi prati," iv. 148.
 Vere, Lord, v. 231.
 Vergennes, v. 131.
 Verner, v. 207.
 Veract, Horace, "Battle of Jemappes," iii. 234.
 Vernon, ii. 154. et passim.
 "—, Lady E., v. 179.
 "—, Miss, iv. 30. et passim.
 Vernons, the Granville, v. 76.
 Verona, iii. 23. et passim.
 Veronese, Paul, "Marriage at Cana," iii. 278; "St. John in the Desert," 61.
 Versailles, iii. 100. et passim.
 Verses and false quantity, iv. 143, 144.
 "— by Horace Smith, vi. 80.
 "— by James Smith, vi. 195.
 "— in a Lady's Album," vi. 67.
 Vertpré, Jenny, iii. 92. et passim.
 Verulam, Lord, vi. 93.
 Very's, iii. 88. et passim.
 Vestris, Madame, iii. 343. et passim.
 Viali, v. 91.
 Vibius Caudex, iii. 226.
 "Vicar of Wakefield," ii. 217, 218.
 Vicence, Madame de, iii. 310.
 Vicenza, iii. 23.
 Victorla, Her Majesty Queen, vi. 154, 155.
 "Victory," the, by Michael Angelo, iii. 41.
 Vieni, "Clovis," iii. 323; reading his tragedy of "Achille," 323.
 Vilet, Mr., v. 111.
 Villa Albani, the, iii. 61.
 "— d'Este, the, iii. 70.
 "— family, the, iii. 29.
 "— Madam, the, iii. 67.
 Villamil, iii. 116. et passim.
 "—, Mary, iii. 238.
 "—, Mrs., iii. 125. et passim.
 "—, Philip, iii. 236.
 Villa Tansl, iii. 19.
 Ville d'Avray, iii. 153.
 Villeneuve, iii. 12.
 "— sur-Allier, iii. 86.
 Villiers, ii. 327. et passim.
 "—, George, Duke of Buckingham, iv. 313.
 "—, Lord, v. 320. et passim.
 "—, Miss, iv. 203.
 "—, Mrs., iii. 327. et passim.
 Vincent, Dr., i. 50; ii. 251.
 "—, Mrs., v. 108. et passim.
 Vinci, L. da, "Marriage of St. Catherine," iii. 32; "Vanity and Modesty," 68.
 Viotti, iii. 80. et passim.
 Virgil, "Georgics," i. 34.
 "Virgin, the," iii. 24.
 "— and Child," by Sassoferrato, iii. 72.
 "— and Two Children," by Michael Angelo, iv. 72.
 Virginia, i. 141. et passim.
 "—, Lady, iii. 365. et passim.
 Virgin-presso-San Celso, the, iii. 22.
 Virtue, temple of, iii. 62.
 "Vision in the Court of Chancery," viii. 289.
 "— of Chancery," vi. 202.
 "Visitation of St. Elizabeth," by Sebastian del Piombo, iii. 67; designed by Michael Angelo, 67.
 "Vitellius, head of," iii. 89.
 Viterbo, iii. 46.
 Vittore, St., iii. 22.
 "Vive Henri Quatre," iii. 332.
 "Vivir en Cadenas," i. 348, 349.
 Vivian, Mrs., vii. 92.
 "—, Sir Hussey, vii. 150.
 "—, Sir R., vii. 43.
 Vogler, Abbé, iv. 141.
 "Voitures Versées," iii. 120.
 Volney, iii. 151. 267.
 Voltaire, "Adelaide de Guesclin," iii. 176; always wore mourning on the anniversary of the massacre of St. Bartholomew, 14; "Huron," i. 195; statue of, by Houdon, iii. 88; "Tragedies," v. 85; "Universal History," vii. 46.
 Volterra, Daniel de, "Massacre of the Innocents," iii. 36.
 Volterrano, "Sibyls," iii. 39. 78.
 Vonpradt, M., iv. 16.
 Vossius, vii. 173.
 Vossiuses, the, vii. 17.
 "Voyage à Dieppe," iii. 225.
 "— en Italie," iii. 103.
 "Voyages de Pythagore," iii. 146, 147.
 Vulgate, the oldest MS. of, vii. 369.

W.

- Waghorn, Lieutenant, viii. 29.
 Waithman, Mr. in Parliament, ii. 260.
 Wakefield, Gilbert, "Ireland," iv. 129. 136;
 "Letters," 228; his grievances, v. 224.
 Walcot, Dr. See Pindar, Peter.

- Waldegrave, Captain, iii. 312.
 Wales, H.R.H. the Prince of, his affability to Moore, i. 12. 177; gave Moore permission to dedicate the "Anacreon" to him, 104; his fête, 255; manners, 107; unsettled politics, 266; a letter of his to Sheridan, ii. 235; and Sheridan, curious scene, 222; anecdotes of, i. 177; iv. 288, 289. 326; and the Abbé St. Phar, 309; characteristics of, i. 272; ii. 30; convicted of lying by Fox, iv. 309; his declaration respecting Lord Grenville, i. 296; his imitation of Lord Thurlow, ii. 224; proposed dress for the navy, 228; story of his pretending to shoot himself on account of Miss Fitzherbert, iv. 310; his treatment of the Duke of Sussex, ii. 230.
 —, H.R.H. the Princess of, her appearance at the opera on the visit of the allied sovereigns, ii. 19; see also vi. 161.
 Walker, (laid Moore's verses before the board of Trin. Coll. Dub., i. 33.
 —, J. Cooper, "Memoirs of Tassoni," vi. 31.
 —, the Misses, iv. 95.
 Wall, Baring, iv. 166. et passim.
 Wallace, v. 27. et passim.
 Wallack, v. 157.
 Walpole, Horace, "Memoirs" of, in Lord Holland's hands, in MS., iv. 225; vi. 79.
 —, Sir Robert, ii. 251. et passim.
 Walsh, urged Moore to write an opera, v. 129.
 Walstein, Count, vii. 180.
 Walter, John, Esq., v. 194. et passim.
 —, Miss, vii. 15.
 —, Mrs., vii. 15.
 Walton, Isaac, iv. 278.
 "Wanley's Wonders," iii. 323.
 Wans, iv. 46.
 Wans-dyke, the, vi. 343, 344.
 Wanstead, iv. 287.
 "War against Babylon," ii. 346.
 Warburton, Bishop, striking objection of his to mathematical studies, vi. 46.
 Ward, i. 211. et passim.
 Warden, "America," iii. 103.
 Wardour Castle, the priest's barbarous description of, xi. iv. 235; visited by Moore, 145.
 "Warens, Mad. de, Memoirs of," lii. 15.
 Warm feet, a contrivance to keep, ii. 60.
 Warner, vi. 131.
 Warre, vi. 317.
 Warren, William, i. 368.
 Warrender, Lady, iii. 331; v. 107.
 —, Sir G., iii. 171. 341. et passim.
 Warrenner, vii. 21.
 Warrington, i. 83, 84.
 Warton's sonnets, ii. 250.
 Warwick, Lord, v. 306.
 —, Castle, ii. 146, 147.
 —, Street Chapel, iv. 89. et passim.
 Washington, i. 138. et passim.
 " —," by Chantrey, lii. 65.
 —, General, his address, chiefly written by Mrs. Hamilton, vii. 195.
 "Watchman, The," iv. 279. et passim.
 Water Colour Exhibition, the, v. 66.
 Waterford, v. 149; vii. 345.
 —, Lady, iv. 77. 79.
 Waterloo, iv. 240. et passim.
 " —," ii. 85. note; viii. 208.
 —, Battle of, vi. 45.
 " —, Battle of," vi. 61.
 —, picture of, iv. 317.
 —, Bridge, ii. 337.
 Waterpark, Lord, iv. 60. 113.
 "Waters of Babylon," ii. 158, 159.
 Watier, vi. 62.
 Watkins, ii. 151. 207.
 Watson, vi. 105. 245.
 —, Bishop, ii. 131.
 —, Brook, iv. 320.
 Watts, v. 215.
 "Waverley Novels, the," ascribed to Greenfield by Lady Granard, iii. 151.
 Waxwork exhibition, iii. 59.
 "Ways and Means," ii. 188.
 "Way to get Married," ii. 189.
 "Wealth of Nations," vi. 198.
 —, its advantages, iv. 306.
 Webb, vi. 73.
 Webb, Sir John, viii. 68. note.
 Webbe, Sir T., iii. 330. 337.
 Weber, Carl Maria von, "Der Freischütz," iv. 257. et passim; "Euryanthe," 262.
 Webster, Sir Godfrey, iii. 191. et passim.
 —, Henry, iv. 102. et passim.
 —, Lady, iii. 191. et passim.
 —, Wedderburn, iii. 111. 112.
 —, Sir Whistler, anecdotes of, vi. 91.
 Wedgewood, ii. 295.
 "Weep on, weep on, your hour is past," v. 293.
 Weir Bridge, the old, iv. 114.
 Weiss, iii. 324.
 Weld's "Travels," i. 173.
 Wellesley, Mr. Long, ii. 317; iii. 269.
 —, Mrs. Long, ii. 317.
 —, Lord, curious dialogue on tithes with Archbishop Magee, iv. 141; his kind offer to Moore, v. 24–26; inflexible on the Catholic question, i. 279; 288; his pun addressed to Gally Knight, v. 222; remark on a line in "The Bishop and the bold Dragoon," 29.
 —, Richard, ii. 351.
 —, Park, i. 126.
 Wellington, Lady, viii. 126.
 —, Duke of, accompanied Lady Jersey and thirty children to see the "Battle of Waterloo," at Astley's, vi. 61; Donnelly's reply to him, iv. 104; the battle of Toulouse, v. 68; and William IV. stories of, told by Lord Valletort, vi. 235; anecdotes of, v. 57, 58, 156; vi. 141; vii. 174; anecdotes of, after the battle of Waterloo, vi. 45; anecdotes told by Lord Plunket, i. 12; anecdotes of, told by Sir Walter Scott, iv. 337; complaints that the English papers gave too much information to the enemy, i. 295; his duel with Lord Winchelsea, alluded to, vi. 83; enthusiastic admiration of, on the Continent, i. 295; grief at Lord Fitzroy Somerset's wound, vii. 244; his letter to Mr. Fitzgerald, dispensing with his services as one of the Lords of the Treasury, alluded to, v. 262; Moore's opinion of his despatches, vii. 176; occasion of his saying "Never put myself wrong with the Army," vi. 242; one of the three men most looked to by the people of England, vii. 269; took notes of Napoleon's campaign in Russia, v. 288; gains over his colleagues to Catholic Emancipation i. 4.
 Welsh, Jim, his trip to France, lii. 234.
 Weston, "History of the Stage," iv. 77.
 Wentworth, Sir John, i. 175.
 "Were not the sinful Mary's tears," v. 293.
 "Werner," Lord Byron's MS. of, sent to Moore, lii. 326.
 "Werther," iii. 7.
 Wesley, lii. 297. et passim.

- West, Mr., composer of Bowles's Oratorio of "The Ark," vii. 126.
 ——— Chester, vii. 349.
 "Western Highlands," vii. 136.
 West Indies, the, vii. 376. et passim.
 Westmacott, Sir R., "A Beggar Woman," iii. 349; "A Beggar Woman and Child," iv. 133; "A Psyche," iii. 349.
 Westminster, electors of, ii. 143.
 Westminster Abbey, iv. 211.
 ——— Abbey Festival, the, vii. 38.
 ——— Hall, ii. 213.
 "——— Review," the, iv. 160.
 Westmorland, Lady, iii. 91. et passim.
 ———, Lord, iv. 300.
 Wetherell, Sir C., vi. 105.
 "We tread the land that bore us," vii. 361.
 Wexford, v. 221. et passim.
 Weymouth, vi. 51. et passim.
 ———, Lord, iv. 278.
 Whackerback, Graff, iv. 211.
 Wharton's Preface to "Milton's Poems," iv. 298.
 Whately, Archbishop, vii. 28.
 "What for a ducat?" vii. 361.
 "What is Love, kind shepherd tell?" v. 216.
 "Wheel, Barrow, wheel thy winding course," iv. 102.
 "When every tongue thy follies nam'd," ii. 34.
 "——— faint beneath the folding wings," ii. 47.
 "——— first I met thee warm and young," ii. 47. et passim.
 "——— first the fount of life was flowing," ii. 12.
 "——— from the brow, where sorrow sits," ii. 249.
 "——— he who adores thee," Byron's opinion of, i. 22.
 "——— in death I shall calmly recline," vi. 19.
 "——— Limerick, in idle whim," viii.
 "——— Love is kind," v. 44.
 "——— midst the gay I meet," iii. 323.
 "——— night brings the hour," v. 58. 87.
 "——— o'er the silent seas alone," iv. 275. 276.
 "——— on the lip the sigh delays," iv. 244. 251.
 "——— the Balaika," iv. 229.
 "——— thou art night," iv. 243.
 "——— 'tis night," iv. 297.
 "Where are you, Souls of the Sainted?" ii. 274.
 "——— nothing is seen," vii. 249.
 Whewell, Rev. Dr. William, vii. 344.
 Whig cause, the, Moore's reasons for espousing it, i. 20; declaration on the Catholic claims, vi. 3; feeling in the Navy, ii. 228; Leaders, vii. 80; principles, vi. 216. 227. 254; vii. 168.
 Wishaw, ii. 222. et passim.
 Whiston, ii. 265.
 Whitaker, Dr., "Manchester," vi. 347.
 Whitbread and Lord Melville, iii. 204; i. 353.
 ———, Lady Elizabeth, iv. 308.
 White, iii. 139. et passim.
 ———, Colonel, vi. 129.
 ———, Lydia, iii. 26. et passim.
 ———, Miss, ii. 318. et passim.
 ———'s fête, ii. 19.
 ——— Hart, the, ii. 190. et passim.
 "——— Lady, The," v. 119.
 Whitelocke's "Embassy to Sweden," iv. 159.
 ———, Mrs., iv. 159.
 Whiteway Hill, v. 95.
 Whitty, i. 53.
 Whitworth, Lord, iv. 310.
 "Who follows in their train," v. 216.
 "——— of all afflictions, ills, and vices," vii. 373.
 "Who says the age of song is o'er?" i. 363.
 "Why let them come," v. 196.
 Whyte, Samuel, a lover of the drama, i. 7; his Grammar School, 6; played "Jane Shore," 10; prologue to "Comus," 8; "Henry IV.," iv. 8.
 Wickam, Mr., i. 127.
 Wicklow, Lady, iv. 195.
 ———, Lord, iv. 195. 205.
 ——— Mountains, the, vi. 128.
 ——— Waterfall, i. 164.
 Wieland, vi. 266.
 Wiffen, Mr., iii. 283.
 Wigan, riot at, vi. 257.
 Wight, Isle of, iv. 242.
 Wilberforce, William, extract from his "Diary," vii. 221.
 Wilbraham, iii. 44. et passim.
 ———, Lady Anne, vi. 183.
 ———, Roger, ii. 222.
 Wilder, iii. 178. et passim.
 Wildman, Colonel, v. 247. 250.
 ———, Richard, v. 248.
 ———, Mrs., v. 212. 248.
 Wilken, vii. 347.
 Wilkes, Colonel, ii. 312; vii. 256.
 ———, John, ii. 312.
 Wilkie, Dr., iv. 262.
 ———, Sir David, and Chantrey, their Interview with the King, v. 321; anecdote of, vii. 74; "Mokanna unveiling his Face to Zelica," vi. 314.
 Wilkins, iv. 141.
 Wilkinson, ii. 356. et passim.
 ———, Tate, ii. 313.
 Wilks, his "Persecution of the French Protestants," iii. 263.
 William the Conqueror, vii. 3.
 ——— IV., and the Duke of Wellington, stories of, told by Lord Valletort, vi. 235; anecdote of, 245; envied by the American Ambassador, 190; his conduct in the affair of the dissolution, alluded to, 198; his emotion, when ordering the group of Mrs. Jordan and children, vii. 149; his deportment on the difficulties of the Ministry, 55.
 "Williamite Songs," iv. 105.
 Williamites, or Orangemen, iv. 105.
 Williams, commenced copying Lord Byron's "Memoirs" for Moore, ii. 116; in difficulties, 145; translating Foscolo's articles for the "Quarterly," 293.
 ———, Captain, vi. 175.
 ———, Dr., iv. 92.
 ———, Helen Maria, iii. 257. 305.
 ———, John, vi. 65.
 ———, S., iv. 84.
 Williamson, Lady, vii. 241.
 ———, Mr., iv. 109. and note.
 Willis, N.P., "Pencilings by the Way," i. xxxiv. note A; "The Universe," iii. 287.
 Willoughby, Sir Charles, iii. 195.
 ———, Henry, iii. 206.
 Wills, iii. 290.
 Wilmot, iv. 299.
 ———, Mrs., ii. 3. 7. 10.
 Wilson, Sir B., his parliamentary debut, ii. 260.
 ———, John, v. 9; i. xxxix. note A; praised Moore's "Sheridan," v. 10.
 ———, Lady, v. 65.
 ———, Miss, iii. 114.
 ———, Mrs., v. 279. 282.
 ———, Sir Robert, iii. 318.
 Wilton, Lady, v. 69.

Wiltshire Anniversary, the, iv. 183; Dinner, the, ii. 308.
 Wimbledon, iv. 323. et passim.
 Winchelsea, Lord, his duel with the Duke of Wellington, alluded to, vi. 83.
 Winchester, ii. 180. et passim.
 ———, Bishop of, "Life of Pitt," iv. 59. 65.
 ———, Dean of, iv. 79.
 Winckelmann, iii. 74.
 Windermere, Lake, viii. 101. 114.
 Windham, Right Hon. W., his express from Lord Grey, viii. 98; his merit in applying old stories, iv. 76.
 Windsor, Nova Scotia, i. 175.
 ———, Castle, conversation on, vii. 203.
 Windward Islands, the, iv. 318.
 Winsor, v. 57. et passim.
 ———, Miss, her singing, v. 57.
 ———, Mrs., v. 188.
 Winter, Mr., epigram on, iii. 108; "Madra Amata," vi. 164; "Padre Amata," 164.
 Wirtemberg, Prince Paul of, iii. 343.
 Wiseman, Dr., vii. 145. 296.
 Witchcraft Act, impromptu on the, vii. 282.
 Woburn, ii. 162. et passim.
 "Woe, woe!" v. 163.
 Wolfe, General, alluded to, i. 173.
 Wollaston, Dr., v. 71.
 Wolsey, Cardinal, discovery of his letters at the State Paper Office, v. 321; his letters, showing his skill, vi. 33.
 Wolverhampton, vii. 294. et passim.
 "Woman playing a Guitar," by Giorgione, iii. 29.
 Woman's rights, extract from a young lady's letter on, vii. 353.
 Women's hearts, conversation on, ii. 283.
 Wood, Mr., ii. 187. et passim.
 ———, Dr., vi. 148.
 ———, Mrs., iv. 84.
 Woodfall, Henry, his opinion that Parliament was not the place for Sheridan's talents, ii. 251.
 Woodman. See Glenbervie, Lord.
 Woolaston, Dr., iv. 205.
 Woolbeding, viii. 69.
 Woolriche, applied to, for assistance, by Moore, in his intended duel with Jeffrey, i. 200; visits Moore when ill, 103.
 Woolridge, vi. 263.
 Wooton Hall, i. 363.
 Worcester, Lady, v. 179. 318.
 ———, Lord, v. 105. et passim.
 Words that had become degraded, vii. 10.
 Wordsworth, William, account of Byron's plagiarisms from his works, iii. 161. and note; his close translation of Χερὸν ἀνὰ γέφυραν, &c., vii. 85; comparison between the English and Italian languages, 71; equal to Byron in the philosophy of life, i. xxvii; his "Excursion," viii. 291; his high opinion of himself, iii. 163; iv. 335; his idea of the origin of Byron's attacks upon him, vii. 72; his horror of having his letters preserved, 198; manly endurance of his poverty, iv. 335; met Moore at Rogers's, vii. 69; his opinion of Coleridge, 73; quatrain on Shelley, quoted by, v. 292; remarks, their justice, iii. 163. note; subjects for poems, suggested to him by travelling outside a stage coach, vii. 197; "The White Doe," iii. 163; devoid of a musical ear, iv. 48.
 Wordsworth, Mrs., iii. 159; vii. 69.
 Woronzow, Prince, viii. 8.
 Worsley, Lady Caroline, iv. 164.
 Worthing, i. 194. et passim.
 Wortley, i. 288. et passim.

Wortley, Stuart, iv. 90; v. 88.
 ———, Lady Caroline, iv. 90.
 ———, Lady Emmeline, vii. 157.
 "Wreck Ashore, The," vi. 225.
 Wren, Sir Christopher, v. 92; vii. 345.
 Wright, employed in writing a history of the much agitated text of 1 John, v. 7., vii. 369; translation of "Dante," Moore's opinion of, vii. 137.
 Wrixon, iii. 151. 153.
 Wroughton, ii. 146. 149. 160.
 Wrottesley, Miss, v. 92.
 Wrottesleys, the, v. 92.
 Wurtemberg, the Princess of, her marriage with Prince Jerome Bonaparte, i. 235.
 Wyatville, Sir J., vi. 54. 96.
 Wyatt, ii. 288; vi. 86. 97.
 ———, Miss, vi. 335.
 Wycherley, Sir John, iii. 11.
 ———, William, and Burns, similar idea of, ii. 256; "Country Wife," 269; "Gentleman Dancing Master," 268; "Love in a Wood," 268; reason of his being a favourite with Charles II., 269.
 Wycombe, Lord, iii. 344.
 Wyndham, "Diary," v. 159.
 ———, Sir William, vii. 139.
 Wynne, Right Hon. Charles, his horror at an unpardonable mistake in "Kenilworth," iii. 242; pun on, v. 273.
 ———, Sir Watkin Williams, i. 117, 118; vii. 369.
 Wynnes, Miss, vi. 55.
 Wyse, Young, vii. 345.

X, Y.

Xenophon, v. 146.
 Yankee coincidence, iv. 304.
 Yarmouth, Lord, i. 284.
 Yarrow, iv. 336; v. 4.
 Yates, Rev. Mr., ii. 178. et passim.
 Yellow fever at New York, i. 166.
 Yonge, Dr., imprisoned for debt, iii. 304.
 "Yon lonely rose, that climbs," viii. 192.
 York, Archbishop of, v. 80. et passim.
 ———, Duchess of, ii. 332. 340; iii. 5.
 ———, H.R.H. the Duke of, and the Coronation arrangements, iii. 284; his due with Colonel Lennox, i. 37.
 ———, House Music Meeting, the, v. 310.
 ———, Minister, Moore's visit to, iv. 329.
 Yorke, Lady Mary, iv. 329.
 ———, Mr., iv. 329; v. 310; vi. 44.
 Youghal, iv. 104. 105.
 Young, Arthur, iii. 80.
 ———, Charles, his nervousness, v. 56.
 ———, Colonel, iv. 248.
 ———, Dr., iii. 150.
 ———, Edward, "Night Thoughts," iv. 53.
 ———, Miss, v. 11.
 ———, Thomas, iv. 298.
 "Young Love lived once," v. 264.
 "You remember Ellen," i. 347.
 Yruco, Marquis of, iii. 332.

Z.

"Zadig," ii. 274. et passim.
 Zambeccari, the palace, iii. 31.
 Zamolski, Count, vi. 286, 287.
 "Zarifa," vi. 113.
 Zeal and Etiquette, v. 131.
 "Zelia, To," concluding verse of, i. 22.
 "Zephyr et Flore," iii. 101.
 ———, puni et fixe," v. 112.
 "Zingarella," iii. 89.
 Zoë, iv. 4.
 "Zoega," iii. 170. et passim.
 Zwickau edition of Moore's works, i. 7.

PR Moore, Thomas
5056 Memoirs
A4
1853
v.8

PLEASE DO NOT REMOVE
CARDS OR SLIPS FROM THIS POCKET

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO LIBRARY
